ainrefered by a Hungardin. Greensburg, Pa., Oct. 3.—Still another brutal murder has been added to Westmoreland's list. In this instance a new town, known as Klondyke, a coke and mining village in the vicinity of Pleasant Unity, was the scene of the killing. John Geiger, an American coke worker, was shot and killed by John Spacha, a Hungarian. Geiger re-cently returned to Klondyke after several months' absence. The pair became involved in a desperate quarrel, presumably on account of a demand made by the Hungarian for a sum of money which he alleged Geiger owed him. Immediately after the shooting the Hungarian took to the woods and is still at large.
