Pottaville, Oct. 18 - The new colebrated and long drawn out trial, in which Gibbs & Books, contractors, brought mit against the Girardville School Board, for $5,000 damages, scause of abrogation of contract, is nearing

The entire ression of the court yesterday was taken up by addresses to the jury by the opposing counsel. John F. Whalen, Esq., opened for the defense and be made a strong, able plea in behalf of the school authorities. In scathing terms he denounced the con-tractors. He said that Books & Gibbs, after tractors. He said that Books & Gibbs, after taking the contract, found that they could not come out on their contract price, and at once set about with a view of getting out of the hole they found themselves in; that they skimped their work and were endeavoring to make out a case against their own con-sciences; that they deliberately lied when they testified they put in 19 feet of wall in question. The speaker also paid his respects to "Pi" Monaghan, one of the witnesses in the case, and to Architect Hill, whom he termed the "free-for-all-architect." He re-ferred to Hill sitting beside the contractors

James T. Scarlet, of Danville, closed for the plaintiff. His speech attracted unusual attention, because of his wide reputation as a pleader. He scored the school directors of Girardville in no measured terms and stated of they had paid the $490 demanded by Books & Gibbs when the error in the plans had been discovered, thousands of dollars.

charge to the jury. In view of the length of the trial, almost four weeks, and the large amount of evidence taken, his charge was looked upon by members of the bar as an able effort. He reviewed the testimous at length and instructed the jury as to the many legal uestions raised by the opposing counsel.

The jury retired at neon to-day to deliberate upon their verdict. It is not likely that they will reach a verdict before to-morrow.
