TYPES OF CATTLE.

The Most Important Points of a Good Dairy Cow's Body.

The dairy type of cattle shows a wedged shaped body, very full in the abdominal region and apparently small in the ribs and chest. This small appearance in front is part due to contrast with the abdomen. Really a good cow for any purpose should hind Morrissey. have a reasonable capacity of chest, for the efficiency of the lungs and heart is a matter of the first importance.

A good dairy cow should stand lower at the shoulder than at the hips; the hips are broad the tail sets in square, rather longer and thinner than in the beef type. The quarters and limbs are light, carrying little flesh. The back outline of the hind leg is hollow, so that the udder is visible at both sides of the thigh to an observer standing the developed, placed forward and close up to the body, with all the quarters of equal size. It should be elastic in substance, free from lumps or nodules, not fleshy, and the skin Carl Johnansen and Thor Fuglestead. at the back should be reasonably Johnansen was a strong swimmer and loose. The teats should be of a had a record of saving five people. reasonable size, set equal distances apart. The milk veins under the ab. domen should be prominent and irregular in their course. The neck is and apparently narrow between the eves. This appearance is due to fred Dunne of Boston, was arrested. the muzzle of the dairy cow being so much broader. The eye is large and mild, giving the impression of quiet intelligence with a certain amount of nervousness, yet without timidity. The skin is not unduly thin, but it has not the mellow touch of the beef type. The hair is silky, rather than furry.

Although the dairy cow has none of the blocky appearance of the beef indicate good, sound health. A delicate appearance is always suspictous.

An amusing reply was given by one of he pupils. A teacher had told the class of the wonderful voyage of Coumbus and how he insisted on continuing the voyage after the other men were clamoring to return. Then the asked: "Who was Columbus?" with the view of hearing how well they had followed her talk.

One little hand went up. Vell, Johnny, who was he?" asked the teacher.

"Columbus was the gem of the ocean."

Teaching Girls to Ride Horses. Almost all the little girls who are taught to ride horses these days are put on cross saddles. They may or mar not ride astride when they get bigger, but they all learn that way. It is a safer position in the first place and it gives confidence never acquired by a youngster in a side saddle. As a rule the small equestrienne is clad in bloomers and the briefest of ski. is. Often she discards the skirt when the lessons are given in the country. The in 'ructor holds her pony by a leading strap and, of course, he rides a horse easily able to overtake her mount in the event of a bolt. Only for the first few lessons is the child's belt buckled to the pommel of her saddle. Until she acquires a firm sent she is kept close enough to the instructor to be caught by him if she

CLOCK WITH 20 DIALS.

Tolls Time All Over the World and Gives Day and Date.

San Diego, Cal., has a wonderful clock with twenty dials which tell simultaneously the time in all parts of the world, also the days of the week and the date and month. It stands twenty-one feet high and four of its dials are each four feet in diameter.

The master clock is enclosed in plate glass, says Popular Mechanics, so that every action can be seen, and the whole is illuminated every night. It is jewelled with tourmaline, topaz, agate and jade and took fifteen months to build. The motive power is a 200 pound weight, which winds itself automatically. The cost of the clock was $3,000.

Electricity Round a Corner.

A curious experiment with an electric discharge conducted round a right-angled corner is described by Prof. Francis E. Nipher. The corner was formed in bending sharply the conducting wire. A photographis three enclosed in a hard rubber holding was placed under the wire in such a way placed under the wire in such a way that the discharge would descend toward it, then turn at a right angle, and pass horizontally above it. If was found that when a negative diacharge passed down the wire to the angle the electrical particles kept sirright on their way listead of turning penetrated the rubber cover and affected the enclosed plate. But when the discharge was positive no such effect was produced. The current apparently turned the right-angled corner without, so to speak, shooting off at the bend.
