McCarthy's sermon to the class was brimfull of good, sound morality and was a masterly and scholarly address. The church was full to the doors, and the service was very pleasing and impressive. The church interior is a marvel of beauty of itself, and the beauty was enhanced by tasteful floral decorations.

The crows seem to have a special calling to the farmers' corn field this season.

Noticing an item in the Carbondale Leader last Thursday, in the Wayne county items, that Samuel Collins, of West Dyberry, raised two acres of Michigan corn from which he ground five tons of corn meal last year, we think now a good fish story is very palatable and during the many wet days of this season, we have heard several big fish stories, and the most of the time it being our own (that is, us farmers) and we gather all kinds of bait and hie away to the lake from whence the latest fish story came, but generally come back home with fisherman's luck, but Mr. Collins' corn story doesn't fit the palate of the farmers in this section as their isn't any move as yet to try and beat the record. Albert O'Dell whose farm is about a mile from Mr. Collins' had three acres of the same kind of corn last year and which was recommended by all of the farmers in that section to be the best piece of corn in Wayne county, which he says being all ground up, cobs and all, wouldn't make five tons. Don't forget that last season was too dry for such big farm stories, especially in this section.

COACHING WAYS OF MRS. GOULD.

She Nearly Fell Off the Wagon, Declares Her Driver.

HAD TO HOLD HER ON SEAT.

Gardener Tells of Her Reeling Against a Wall and Asserting Repeatedly "Who's Who" at Castle Gould—Worker on the Estate Tells What Murphy Got in the Way of an Epithet. Crowds Outside Court Jeer at Her as She Leaves.

New York, June 17.—Encouraged by a ruling of Judge Dowling that habitual drunkenness would be considered a cause for abandonment, Dr. Lancelotti, attorney for Howard Gould, called other employees of Castle Gould in the suit of Mrs. Katherine Clemmons Gould against her husband for a separation and $250,000 yearly allowance to testify along the same lines as the witnesses who declared Mrs. Gould drank and occasionally used profane language.

Mrs. Gould has virtually become the defendant in the suit.

A coachman named Carlson told of having to drive with one hand on one occasion, using the other to keep Mrs. Gould from falling out of the carriage.

Drive in Deadwood Coach Style.

His description of a "gallop down the hills of Larchmont," when Mrs. Gould drove, suggested to the hearers a dash in regular Deadwood coach style. Carlson proved a remarkable witness. Every utterance seemed to bear the stamp of honest belief and conviction, and he could not be shaken in any particulars of his testimony.

Harry Turner, who has lived at Castle Gould in charge of the greenhouses since April, 1906, was the first witness called.

"Did you see Mrs. Gould under the influence of liquor in the latter part of July or the early part of August?" was asked of Turner.

Turner Says She Reeled.
 "At the end of July," he said, "or early in August I was returning from the greenhouses when I met Mrs. Gould under the arch of the stables. While speaking to me she reeled against the arch."

"Did you see her on any other occasion?"

"Yes, on Nov. 6, in the presence of other heads of departments. She drove up and commenced talking first to Mr. Molloy. One thing Mrs. Gould said was, 'I am Mrs. Howard Gould.' She repeated it at least a dozen times."

"How did she act?"

"She walked across the room and leaned against the wall."

William Wisong, a laborer at Castle Gould in 1902 and 1903, said he had seen Mrs. Gould under the influence of liquor.

"Once, in 1903," he testified, "I heard Mrs. Gould scolding a man named Murphy. She called him a—very vile name."

Crowd Jeered at Her.
 When Mrs. Gould left the courtroom she had to run the gauntlet of the ogling, jostling and bold comments of a thousand persons.

They ran in front of her, staring into her face. They trampled on her skirts and even tried to pull aside the veil that was tightly drawn across her face.

The curious idlers crowded twenty deep and bawled such things as "Do you call her good looking?" "Sure, she's a peach!" "Get on to that million dollar hat!"

The defense so far has called only employees, but Howard Gould and possibly some of his wealthy friends will take the witness stand.
