GOULDSBORO.

An early Sunday morning boating accident in which three of our well known young people and a young lady from Scranton figured, narrowly escaped a fatal termination. In endeavoring to push the boat away from the stone wall of the reservoir the two young ladies, who were standing, lost their balance, the boat capsized, and they were thrown into fourteen feet of water. But for the rare presence of mind of their escorts who plunged in after them they would have been drowned. As it was one young lady went down twice, and was resuscitated with difficulty. The young people, save for the severe nervous shake-up, are none the worse for their harrowing experience.

FARMERS SHOULD BE POULTRY RAISERS.

Editor The Citizen:—
In view of the fact that the raising of poultry has become so important an industry in the United States, standing sixth as an individual business. It surely is to every farmer's interest to take it into greater consideration, and if possible reap some of the benefits that are bound to come to the careful poultry man and woman. It is said again and again by farmers that dollar for dollar invested in cows or chickens gives the best return. If that be true, then just widen out a little and increase your profits.

We wish to appeal to everyone interested and urge an attendance at the Wayne County Fair without fail and see for the first time in the history of the county a real live poultry exhibit. The secretary of the Wayne County Poultry and Pigeon Association reports the expectation of from 700 to 1000 birds on exhibition.

The Agricultural Society have turned over, for the use of the Poultry Association, the largest building in which will be seen some of the finest fowl ever exhibited in the county. Birds that the owners thereof would refuse to accept $150 apiece. The feeling in the past, on the part of Wayne county poultrymen and women, has been that they stood no chance with outside exhibitors or jobbers who might come in with almost a carload and sweep the deck. There was possibly some reason for feeling, but let me say, that this year there is to be a decided change. The exhibit will be governed by a classification, according to the American Poultry Association Standard (see premium list). The general exhibit is open to the world, and whoever has the best bird or birds will win, but on the other hand, there is now a chance for our local breeders. The Wayne County Poultry and Pigeon Association offer a good many special prizes to be competed for by the members of the Poultry Association, and membership in the same is restricted to residence in the county of Wayne.

See papers of next week for list of special prizes. Get your birds in shape, and come on and win some of those specials. At any rate do not fail to see the poultry exhibit and meet some of the leading poultry experts of the county who will be right on deck all the time. This very fall is the time to either build a new poultry house, right up-to-date, or overhaul the old one, and then place an order for some of the stock which will be shown at the fair, or for eggs for early spring hatching. Get rid of the mixed flocks and carry only some thoroughbred goods. One of the most able poultry judges in the United States is engaged for the fair. I think Mr. Henry Trafford, of Binghamton, N. Y., editor of Poultry Success, about the best poultry journal published. Send your dollar to Mr. W. A. Walford, of Hawley, who is secretary of the Poultry Association, and become a member and help the good work along.

If you want to see something up-to-date in the poultry plant line, just slip down to Hawley and see the A 1 plants of Messrs. R. A. Martin and Ray Sands and partner. Just get a look at Martin's 1400 or more White Leghorns, and Sands' 1,000 or more White beauties of the same breed, some of them Madison Square winners.

"I Told You So."
An old couple lived in the mountains of eastern Tennessee. He was ninety-five and she ninety. Their son, a man of seventy, died. As the old folks crossed the pasture to their cabin after the burial the woman noticed a tear roll down her husband's cheek. She patted him tenderly on the arm and said:
"Never mind, John; never mind. You know I always said we never would raise that boy."—Success.
