BRAZILIAN GIRL'S EMBROIDERY.

Her Handlwork Appears on All the

Household Linen. The time an American girl puts in at painting, pyrography, cookery, riding and golf the Brazilena devotes to shooting a needle threaded with a harsh strand of linen back and forth through the corners of the sheets and pillow cases and towels with which she is going to furnish her future household.

Sometimes she works out her whole first name, but usually only a fanciful scroll work of initials in the form of a monogram. No superficial, laundry mark kind of work is this, but a sub stantial basrelief, which rears itself from a quarter to half an inch from the supporting fabric and waits as maliciously as the stingaree in the mud or the nettle in the thicket for some one to rub against it.

I had been warned not to be alarmed at any night prowling insect or animal which might enter my open room the first time I slept in a Brazilian bed, and so took it quite coolly when I rolled over upon a sharp toothed monogram, thinking it was nothing more than a vampire bat or perhaps my shoe.

When on another occasion I slept all night with the last three letters of the "Dolores" of my pillow case sinking into my cheek, to follow it the next morning by rasping the whole length of the name on a towel across the abraised place, I must confess to being slightly annoyed. lores, Augusta or even Maria in three inch letters do not leave a great deal of room for absorptive purposes on a piece of one by three linen, and the novice will find it safer until he has learned to take up the moisture with little dabs to carry his own towels.

If a bed must be occupied the monogram on the sheet may be rendered more or less innocuous by hunting it down before you turn in and tucking it under the mattress. Careful manipulation will occasionally also dispose of the danger zone on the pil-
