They called at The Citizen office and were introduced by our townsman, E. B. Hardenbergh, who was a member of the State Senate with Messrs. Sisson and Stober. Both of the nominees are quiet, unassuming gentlemen and impressed us as men who would not disappoint the people of the State in administering the duties of the offices to which they aspire. They stated that the outlook throughout the state for a large majority for the entire Republican ticket was very encouraging. They came in on the 10 a. m. D. & H. train and left at 4:30 p. m. over the same route.

LAKE ARIEL RAILWAY.

Different Routes Are Being Measured But No Decision Has Been Made Yet.

No decision as to the route of the proposed Scranton and Lake Ariel railway will not be reached by the promoters until the several surveys, now under way, are completed.

The object of the company is to secure the cheapest entrance to the city and several surveys have been made for this purpose. Surveys are being made both from the north and from the east. One contemplates passing through the Moosic lake station and another through Dickson City. The hope of securing a franchise through Dunmore from the council of that borough has practically been abandoned and it is probable that this plan will not again be taken up.

It was originally planned to connect the road with the Drinker street line of the Scranton Railway company at Sport Hall, but the attitude of the Dunmore council makes that impossible.

Lombroso, Noted Alienist, Dead.

TURIN, Oct. 20.—Cesare Lombroso, the most eminent criminologist and alienist in the world, died at his home here early to-day, the victim of a sudden cerebral hemorrhage. His illness was short.

Dr. Lombroso was born in Verona in 1836, of Venetian-Jewish ancestry. His father's name was Aaron Levi. He received his education at the University of Turin, where he later was to become a professor. At the time of his death he occupied the chair of psychiatry in the local university, a place he had held for many years. His marriage took place in 1870 after he had attained a measure of his fame as a scientific thinker and author.

As a writer he was practically prolific. He published several volumes in English on psychology and kindred-topics and about fifty in Italian, besides counting interviews, special articles and magazine contributions. His particular study was the development of the criminal mind, a field in which he had no equal, and he devoted years to the critical examination of criminals in prisons and insane asylums all over the world.

Although he was repeatedly attacked for what had been termed his sensationalism and his proneness to seek newspaper publicity, savants everywhere conceded that as a student of criminology Lombroso had no equal, living or dead. He said, not once but often, that genius was a higher form of madness, and his own case served to emphasize this theory, for some of his own methods and deductions, brilliant and audacious though they were, smacked of an overcharged intellect.

In the latter years of his life he became an ardent convert to spiritualism.

It was an accident which led Lombroso into the study of criminology. For the first eight years after his graduation from college he was a military surgeon in the Italian army. A soldier in an insane fit of anger killed an officer and was executed. Lombroso making a cursory autopsy upon the body of the criminal was surprised to find in the skull an occipital dimple, the "fossette occipitale," which ordinarily is not developed in man but is characteristic of the skulls of monkeys and apes.

It occurred to the young surgeon that crime of the soldier was the result of an incomplete development of the brain indicated by the peculiarity which he had noted. His first promulgation of this theory created a sensation, but following it up with experiment and study, Lombroso eventually proved to the satisfaction of the scientific world, how crime originates, how it is propagated and how the criminal degenerate may be detected through his physical abnormalities.

THE GROW SCANDAL.

Interesting Reading Matter About the Sage of Glenwood.

Out of the closet of the late Galusha A. Grow stalks again the skeleton that rattled shortly after the Sage of Glenwood's death.

It comes this time through a divorce tangle in New York, the husband of the woman in the case declaring that Grow, who never married was the father of the woman.

Galusha A. Grow lived in Glenwood, Susquehanna county, was speaker of the national house of representatives during the civil war and a statesman of nation wide reputation the greatest product that this end of the state produced in that respect. When he died a suit was started by a Brooklyn lawyer for $10,000 for legal fees. Much secrecy was thrown about the matter but it came out that the lawyer claimed the fees for services rendered in putting an end to a system of black mail to which Grow had to submit for years by a pair of New York women, one purporting to be the mother of a child by Grow.

It developed recently that Mrs. Katherine Livingstone-Williams was divorced from her husband, the latter bringing the suit, naming another man as correspondent. Mrs. Livingstone was Grow's ward. That isn't in dispute. She, however, never knew who her father was although she was taught to call a Madame DeFossez "mamma" and a Mrs. Clooney "grandma."

When approached on the matter recently Williams stated that Grow, almost with his dying breath admitted the paternity of the girl. Said Williams:

"For fear I shall be misunderstood I will say that I have just secured a divorce from my wife who was Miss Katherine Livingstone. Yes; she is the daughter of Galusha A. Grow, if this must be known. Grow himself told me she was his daughter. I will not name the man who figured in my divorce from her. He was not, however, the original cause of breaking up my home."

Now the story goes that the woman and a lawyer used the girl as a means of blackmailing Grow. It is a known fact that when Grow died he wasn't worth a penny hardly and dependent on the bounty of Andrew Carnegie, it was said. All that was left was the home and that burned recently.

It is asserted that Grow was mulcted out of $200,000 through the fear of exposure. The last levy is said to have been $60,000, of which the girl got $23,000, the woman $22,000, a lawyer $10,000, and another man $5,000. Grow died shortly afterwards.

The husband of the girl now divorced went to Grow and begged him to tell the truth, whereupon it is stated that Grow admitted she was his daughter, but no amount of pressure could bring out who the mother was.

Grow was introduced to Mrs. Katherine Clooney in New York by former Governor Fenton, of New York. Many worshipped at her shrine. She was a beautiful and bright woman. Madame De Fossez was her daughter.

JOE GRAZIANO.

"Isle of Spice."

B. C. Whitney's gloom-dispelling musical production, "Isle of Spice," which comes to the Lyric on Monday, Oct. 25, is said to be a most pretentious one and is described as a piquant musical mixture, and is considered one of the best singing organizations on the road. Some of the genuine whistleable song hits are: "The Goo Goo Man," "The Broomstick Witches," "Peggy Brady," "You and I," "Little Maid of Nicobar," "How Can You Tell Till You Try," "Uncle Sam's Marines," and others. The company is a large one, headed by Chas. A. Pusey, including a strong cast of stage favorites, and a chorus that is noted as being the prettiest, sprightliest and most graceful singing and dancing combination on the stage to-day.

KATZ BROS.

"The Flower of the Ranch."

Only a few genuine and new musical novelties have reached Honesdale this season, and the biggest one of these is The Flower of the Ranch, by Joseph E. Howard, the prolific over-night composer, which comes to the Lyric for one night only, Tuesday, Oct. 26th. "The Flower of the Ranch" might best be termed a musical melodrama, for during the operation of the piece there are a number of stirring climaxes, intermingled with which are nearly twenty of the cleverest musical numbers, and among which are some real novelties.

Another number novelty sufficient in itself to hold up the average musical offering is the "Days of '49," in which a real stage coach, drawn by "broiler" ponies is introduced. From a musical standpoint, it is fat with song and chorus and together with its melodramatic setting, and genuine comedy situations, it is just a little the most intricate and delightful combination of this ever squeezed into two hours of footlight folly.

The production is scenically correct in every detail and the electrical insertions are pleasing to say the least.
