

A portion of Commander Peary's data was placed in the hands of the subcommittee last week. This body wanted more light on certain features of Peary's journey northward, and it was furnished today by the explorer, who was in session with the subcommittee for seven hours prior to his departure for New York.

While no official statement on the subject was-made by any member of the subcommittee, it was learned that Messrs. Gannett, Chester and Tittmann have decided to report to the board substantiating Peary's claim that he reached the pole. This report will be submitted to the board of managers tomorrow, and it will be made public by the board without delay.

There was some gossip here when it became known that the subcommittee had asked Commander Peary to come to Washington and that there were dissensions among members of the Geographic society over Peary's evidence. Dr. Gannett declared that all such reports were without foundation.

"The subcommittee and the board will act in harmony," he said. "We sent for Peary because we felt that his presence would aid in the completion of our report to the board."

Commander Peary saw few people here aside from members of the National Geographic society. He spent the day at the home of Admiral Chester, where the subcommittee met in conference with the explorer. To those who sought him he sent word that for the present he would not comment publicly on his polar work, preferring to await the verdict of the National Geographic society.

THE SPRAYED SUFFRAGETTE.

Gladstone Says Hose Was Played on Her to Save Her Life, but He's Sorry. London, Nov. 2 .- In the house of commons Home Secretary Gladstone explained why the prison committee of Strangeways jail, in Manchester, sanctioned the playing of the hose on one of the imprisoned suffragettes. He said the officials were afraid to break in the door of her cell because they feared that the walls might fall and injure the prisoner, whose enforced bath lasted only two or three minutes.

The home secretary said he was satisfied that the committee meant well, but it had committed a grave error. The prisoner has since been released.
