

DAIRY AND CREAMERY

USE OF ALCOHOL WITH TEST.

Method of Reading Fat Cream Has Been in Use at Wisconsin School.

The suggestion has recently been made by Dr. Babcock that the solvent action of alcohol on fat can be overcame by first adding to alcohol all the fat it will dissolve and then pouring a small quantity of this fat-saturated alcohol on the top of the fat column in the test bottle.

The diagrams illustrate the difference in appearance of the top of the fat column before and after using the fat-saturated alcohol. Bottle No. 1 shows the top meniscus of the fat which occupies a space between A and B of nearly one per cent. on the scale.

Bottle No. 2 shows the appearance of the top of fat column after the fat-saturated alcohol has been added. The alcohol (D) makes a nearly two per cent. division, or, to be exact, 1.34 per cent.

Dairying in Winter.

There are many advantages in having cows come fresh in winter, when all dairy products sell at a high price. In many places the price of butter is from 25 to 50 per cent. higher in winter than in summer.

When the cows calve in the spring they generally milk well until the pastures dry up, when the flow of milk quickly falls off, so that by the time stable feeds begin the cows are almost dried up. Now, if the cows come fresh in the fall, they produce a good flow of milk during the winter months, and in the spring, when they are turned on the grass, this acts as a second freshening and thus lengthens the period of milk production.

Another distinct advantage in winter dairying is that during this season the farmer is not so busy with other work, consequently he can give more time to the care of the cows, the milk and the cream than is possible during the busy season of the year. When winter dairying becomes more generally practiced, the subject of winter feeds will be given more attention. Of these silage is one of the most important, since one acre of good silage material will yield as much feed as three acres of pasture.

Modern Dairies.

Two hundred dairy farms in a dozen states were investigated and inspected and rated according to modern standards of dairy sanitation. Out of the 200 places inspected, the highest scoring dairy was entitled to 99.8 points. The average score of the 200 inspected was 79.04 out of the possible 100 points. Some of the stables were found to be badly ventilated, badly built and too small for the number of cows kept.

An examination of the milk pails and the strainers used on these 200 farms made clear the fact that these things are often not as clean as they might be, and as clean as people using them imagine. Traces of old milk were found in many seams and covers, and in only 58 places could all the milk utensils be pronounced superficially clean: that is, thoroughly washed and scalded and given a full score for that condition. Milk booters were found in use on 48 farms. Not over ten thermometers were found in use on the 200 farms, and in at least 195 instances of 200, positive knowledge regarding the temperature of the milk could not be obtained except by the use of the investigator's own thermometer.

The Best Butter.

Never let the cream become overheated or overripe if you wish to pack the butter made from it. Remember that the best butter can only be made from cream that is in the best of condition, and that the keeping quality of butter depends upon the condition of the cream from which it was made.

A DEADLY GERM.

Victims of the Office Holding Habit Can Find Only One Cure.

"You let a fellow once get a thirst for office an', by jinks, it'll stick to him like a thirst for the wine that is red, as the good Book says," said Simon Skaggs, the sage of Peaville's only grocery-store, where Simon delivered his oracle-like words of wisdom. "Now, you take Lem Bagley; He's been holdin' office for the last fluttin' year, an' he's more eager for it than he was at the start. Seems like Lem can't eat his meals with no appetite nor sleep in peace unless he's in office. I reckon that he wa'n't but nineteen when they made him librarian of the Sunday school. It was his first taste of office-holdin', an' sort of put the germ into his blood, an' it worked through his whole system so that I reckon he'll be an office-seeker all his life. He was only twenty-two when he worked himself into the office of keeper of the dog-pound in town, an' from that he worked up to town-marshal with a salary of three dollars a month, an' he never made but two arrests in nine months. Then he got himself appointed justice of the peace an' notary public, an' tuk in two dollars an' sixty-five cents in fees the first two weeks he held that office. Next think anybody knowed he was county coroner an' takin' in his dollar apiece for every corp he viewed or set on at a inquest. He tole me with his own livin' mouth that he made four dollars that way the first three months. Then the Good Templars made him worthy chief of a high-mucky-muck of some kind in organization, an' from that he got to be one of the six vice-presidents of our county fair an' cheerman of the committee that had charge of the horse-race. He was a delegate to the Methodist convention over in Peesley County one year, an' overseer of our roads one year. I tell ye, once a teller gets an itch for office nothin' short of a place in the government will satisfy him. I think from the way Lem talks that he's got his eye on our postoffice with its two hundred a year salary. If he ain't wire-pullin' for a place in Taff's cabbynet. No limits to the ambition of these office-seekers once the deadly germ of the disease gets settled in 'em."—Puck.

PENALTY ATTACHED.

"Pat, do ye know what toime it is?" "Of do not, Mike. Let's each make a guess, an' th' one that misses it th' most can go in an' look at th' clock!"

Not Reliable.

"Sir," said the sleek-looking agent, approaching the desk of the meek, meaching-looking man and opening one of those folding thingumajigs showing styles of binding. "I believe I can interest you in this massive set of books containing the speeches of the world's greatest orators. Seventy volumes, $1 down and $1 a month until the price, $650, has been paid. This set of books gives you the most celebrated speeches of the greatest talkers the world has ever known and—"

"Let me see the index," says the meek man. The agent hands it to him and he looks through it carefully and methodically, running his finger along the list of names. Reaching the end, he hands the index back to the agent and says: "It isn't what you claim it is. I happen to know the greatest talker in the world, and you haven't her in the index."—Chicago Post.

Mutual Ignorance.

"Have you ever saw this man before?" "Yes." "Had he come before you had went?" "No." "Is them your chickens what you say was stole?" "Yes." "Would you have recognuz them if you had saw them before they was brung here?" "Yes, Judge; would have knowed them." "Tut, tut, young man; speak grammatic. It ain't proper to say 'have knowed.' You should ought to say, 'have knew.'"

Well Supplied.

"I find it hard to kill time," declared the pampered pet. "I only have my music, you know. How do you manage?" "Oh, I do very well," answered the other girl. "In addition to my music, I have my sweeping, my dusting, my sewing, and my dishwashing."

The Inference.

"I once wrote my name on an egg." "Get a letter?" "Yes, two years later." "From an actor, eh?"

NOVEL SUNBONNET.

Arched Spring Keeps Vizard in Shape When It is Worn.

Even the humble sunbonnet has come into its share of attention from the inventive geniuses, though it is true that Dame Fashion last season lifted the sunbonnet into the ranks of millinery aristocracy.

A California woman has devised a bit of this type of headgear that has several peculiarities of its own. The vizard, in the first place, is not made of stiffened material, but is held in place by an arched spring running up through the back of it and keeping it in crescent shape. This spring, which is a thin strip of resilient metal or whalebone, can be inserted or taken out in a twinkling, as it runs through a shirred edge. When the spring is removed the sunbonnet collapses into a mass of soft material and can be rolled up and put in a coat pocket, or packed into a very small space. Like other sunbonnets, this new style has strings to be tied under the chin to complete the general effect.—Boston Post.

Women Rule in Welsh Village.

The selection of Fishguard in Wales as a new port of call for the big steamships of the Cunard line has enabled hundreds of travelers who never had heard of the place before to find a lively interest in the little village of Llangwin, near by. Most of the inhabitants are of Flemish origin, descendants of the soldiers of fortune who pushed their adventurous way all along the southern coast of England and finally settled in Wales 400 or 500 years ago, and their quaint costumes and customs still mark them off from their neighbors as a people apart. The most remarkable feature of their life lies in the position which the women hold among them. Llangwin might stand as the ideal of the most extreme advocates of women's rights, for there the women are in supreme control. The men are regarded merely as household conveniences. They stay at home and look after their domestic duties as the women go out and act as the "men of the family," earning the family livelihood and also holding the family purse strings. The women are the owners of the farms and cottages, and their husbands are perfectly satisfied that everything should be in their hands, doing such work as their wives tell them and filling an entirely secondary place in the household.

THE HOME.

If fat catches fire throw salt on it at once to prevent a disagreeable smell.

Toast should always be thin and crisp. Cut the slices from a stale thin loaf, and dry in the oven before toasting them.

Do not peel rhubarb until the skin is tough. It will call for less sugar to sweeten it if a pinch of soda is added while it is being cooked.

Save sour milk in any quantity, large or small, for it is so useful for cakes. With sour milk use carbonate of soda instead of baking powder.

Examine the bread pan three times a week in case crumbs left in should become moldy. These would speedily affect the whole contents of the pan.

The dish cloth should have more attention than is usually bestowed on it. Boiling in soda water once or twice a week will keep it perfectly sweet and clean.

Tomatoes should be skinned before being used for salad. To do this easily, place the fruit in a basin and pour boiling water over. Drain at once and the skin will come off without any trouble.

To Simplify Laundering. Take a bar of any good laundry soap, cut and boil in one-gallon of water until all dissolved, then add scant half-cupful of kerosene. Let all come to a boil. Then fill a tub two-thirds full of water, pour in the mixture, put in all your white wash and let stand over night. In the morning ring out and scald and rinse in the usual way. You will find your wash clean and of snowy whiteness, with little labor.

Scour with Kerosene. When you have scoured until you are tired and rust still remains on nickel-plated faucets or steel knives, before throwing out the knives and having the faucets renickled, try saturating the spots with kerosene.

Later rub steadily with fine sandpaper and the trouble will be over.

A BAD LIVER.

A celebrated English authority once said, "The liver is the direct cause of nine-tenths of the ills that flesh is heir to." It is the largest gland in the body. The blood must pass through the liver many times in an hour. When your liver is out of order you will have pains or uneasiness in the right side, or a dull aching under the shoulder blade. The complexion becomes sallow, your appetite is impaired, your bowels inactive; while headaches, dizziness and bad feelings are your daily experience.

In all such cases almost instant relief is afforded by the use of Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills, which are a marvelous success in curing all forms of liver complaint, including biliousness and jaundice. They restore an inactive and torpid liver to healthy action, regulate the bowels and cleanse the blood. A week's use of Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills by a bilious or constipated person will make life really worth living. They are invaluable for all stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Physicians use and recommend. They form no habit. You should always keep them on hand. These little Vegetable Pills will ward off many ills.
