Judge Alonzo T. Searle, of Wayne county, who is presiding in court No. 3 this week, is very well known to many State officials and Harrisburgers. For years Mr. Searle was assistant United States district attorney and followed his chief, S. J. M. McCarrell, to the bench. Mr. Searle comes of a widely known northeastern Pennsylvania family and is noted for his wide legal knowledge. Business is being transacted with dispatch in his court and his appearance and bearing favorably impress all who meet him. Judge Searle was Gov. Stuart's choice for the vacancy in Wayne county and will likely be his party's unanimous choice for the nomination for the full term of 1911.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

In spite of the official denial that King Alfonso's heir, the prince of Asturias, is in any way defective, the fact seems to be positively established that the child, though 4 years old, can not articulate. As it is generally believed the disability is such that the king's second son, Don Jaime, will succeed to the throne, it is assumed the trouble is mental.

The nomination papers of Congressman C. C. Pratt have been filed at Harrisburg and is official intimation that he will seek a renomination. It is the rule with both parties that a man is entitled to a second nomination. It has not always been carried out, and was violated by the Bradford county delegates when C. C. Jadwin, of Wayne county, was entitled to a renomination. It is not likely that Mr. Pratt will have any opposition, unless one of the Bradford county herd jumps the fence and goes on a rampage. Wayne county's congressional aspirations all seem to be in cold storage. Wayne county ought to send a man in 1912 to represent this district.

Because he went into the public market and objected to paying the high price for meat, Frank Trunk, of Easton was sent to jail for thirty days. STRIKERS IN LAW'S GRIP tried to trip him up as he crossed the bridge. Had they succeeded, witness was of the opinion that he would have been trampled to death. He also triumphantly emerged from a severe cross-examination. Jacob Demer, Jr., next took the stand and gave practically the same testimony, but added that several of the mob were armed with clubs and that he and his father and brothers were roughly jostled and could barely keep their feet. He also swore that Charles Faatz had told him he would gladly knock his head off.

Fred Demer gave similar testimony, following which the counsel for the plaintiff made a motion that the defendants be held for court, as a prima facie case had been established. This motion was opposed by the defense, they contending that the Act of 1871 which provides a summary conviction, supersedes the Act of 1860 covering the offenses alleged in this case. This contention was sustained by the court and a ruling made that the trial should proceed, the defence to call witnesses if they so desired.

The prosecution then called to the stand a man named Dunkleburg, who conducts a meat market at the upper end of Main street. This witness testified to seeing the crowd but stated that so far as noise was concerned the gathering was not out of the ordinary.

Jacob Demer, Sr., then gave a vivid description of the marching crowd and the part he played in the demonstration and his being assaulted near the Hotel Wayne. At this juncture the prosecution rested.

Olaf Highbush, one of the defendants, was then called to the stand and entered a sweeping denial of any particular in the offences charged. During the cross-examination of this witness he admitted that as a member of the union he had taken an oath not to do anything to injure another union man.

Roy Williams, the next witness denied being in the mob, but said he had followed it up the street. He said he had been pushed against the elder Demer by the latter's son, thus causing him to fall. He explained that he took hold of the arm of another of the Demers, as previously testified to, because he had heard he (Demer) was a bad man and because he wanted to call his attention to a man standing by who had a propensity for rifling pockets of their contents. The witness also testified that he saw no shoving or pushing being done by the crowd, and that no one had uttered a curse or a loud word.

John Reed admitted that he had done picket duty, but denied that he had taken any part in the demonstration. Only "walked around to see what the bunch was going to do." He gravely testified that his principal business near the works on the night in question was to "bat stones into the river" and had no idea who was in the crowd or how many there were.

Lawrence Bauer next testified that although he saw the crowd he heard nothing unusual and observed nothing that had been referred to in the Demer testimony.

Jacob Storr, the next witness, when interrogated as to his presence in the ranks of the crowd naively stated that his sole object in being there was to "escort" the fellows home, although he admitted that such was not his usual custom.

Jacob Leippe also testified that he had not ordered the crowd to "fall in and get the" as previously testified. He stated that there was no particular noise, no cursing or threats on the evening in question.

Charles Faatz also said that there was no disorder or rioting on the evening of the 13th, and that the noise then was no greater than when the Elks made their recent visitation. He denied having pulled off his coat or making threats. He said Henry Demer had threatened to "lek" a man, and he had prepared to prevent it.

John Godline denied striking Frank Demer in the back. He said there was no riot, no swearing, no threats, no assaults, no shoving, no nothing. On account of his defective memory he was not cross-examined.

Other witnesses who testified that the march of the strikers was orderly and noiseless were Frank Carty, Horace Williams, Thomas Reese, a man named Brady and John Carmichael, who reluctantly admitted that he was a member of the union.

This ended the evidence and a recess was taken until Tuesday at 11 o'clock.

ATT'Y GENERAL CITES THE LAW

to the Constitution and the schedule is:

1. That general elections shall be held only in even numbered years;

2. After the municipal election which was held in February, 1910, the municipal elections will be held only in odd numbered years;

3. That the judges of the courts of the several judicial districts are to be elected only at the municipal elections. The reference in Amendment Eight to special elections to fill unexpired terms has no application to these judges, who are elected for full terms of service, whether their predecessors in office had served full terms or not;

4. No election can be held under these amendments, at which these judges can be elected, until the municipal election in November, 1911;

5. The terms of all judges of the courts of the several judicial districts, holding office at the date of the approval of the amendments—November 2, 1909—whose terms will expire in 1911, will continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of January, 1912.

Alonzo T. Searle held the office of Judge for the 22nd Judicial District on November 2, 1909, the date when the amendments were adopted by the people at the general election held on that day, and I am of opinion that, by virtue of the last clause of the schedule, he will continue to hold that office until the first Monday of January, 1912, and his successor will be elected at the municipal election held in November, 1911. This opinion will extend to all other judges of judicial districts whose terms will expire in 1911.

I am also of opinion that the schedule has the effect of continuing such judges in office without any other or further commission, but, inasmuch as the absence of a commission might be made the basis of objection to the right of such judges to exercise the judicial function during the extended year. I am further of opinion that a commission should be issued to them, to expire on the first Monday of January, 1912, and that the records of your office should be examined, the names of such judges ascertained and commissions issued to them accordingly.

In answer to your second inquiry I am of opinion that no judge can be elected at the general election held in November, 1910, and that this applies as well to judges who hold their office by election as to those appointed by the Governor.

Very truly yours,
M. HAMPTON TODD,
Attorney General.

BOY DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Youth of 19 Years, Convicted of Murder, Put to Death in Auburn.

Auburn, N. Y., April 19.—Earl B. Hill, a nineteen-year-old youth, went to his death in the electric chair after faltering several times. His going was a pitiful spectacle, for after hesitating in his cell after the procession started and being threatened with official "assistance" he reluctantly followed Chaplain Herick and the Rev. E. J. Rosengrant, a Methodist clergyman, into the chamber.

"I don't want to look at the chair, chaplain," he whispered. As he sank in a state of collapse, he moaned, "Pray, chaplain," constantly until the current ended his anguish.

Hill and another boy, David H. Borst, shot and killed Eldridge Davis, a farmer, for the purpose of robbery. Borst confessed and got a life sentence.

Terrible Croup

My little boy, who is four years old, has suffered a lot with croup. On several occasions we thought he was gone.

After trying all the old time remedies and most of the new, I came home one night at midnight, and my wife said, "The boy has the croup again—suppose you get a bottle of Hyomei." "More junk," I said, "but we will circulate our money so they all will get some."

I hastened to an all night drug store, brought it home. In five minutes he was breathing easier. In fifteen minutes he was sound asleep. It broke the croup so quickly it scared me.

Anyone wishing to cure the croup of a child, I hope will give Hyomei a trial.

Wishing you the best of success, which you surely deserve, I remain, Jos. E. Clark, 204 6th St. S. E., Washington, D. C., Oct. 7, 1909.

Hyomei is a remarkably effective remedy in case of croup and it should be in every home where there is a croupy child. Full instructions how to cure croup comes with each outfit.

Complete Hyomei outfit including inhaler costs $1.00 at druggists everywhere and at G. W. Pell's. It is guaranteed to cure catarrh, coughs and colds.
