There is a Jeffries man in town who bet a Johnson man a cigar, a sandwich and a drink that the white slugger would clean up the ring with the black slugger and take the winner's end of the $101,000 purse at Reno. The black man got there and the Jeffries man offered to settle, but the Johnson adherent let him off in part when he found it was really going to hurt the feelings of the Jeffries man to buy the three articles called for by the conditions of the wager. The loser said he would pay the moist part of his bet and let it go at that. The cigar is still in the dealer's box and the sandwich hasn't been put together.

A good many people, not all of them sports, have been wondering whether or not Honesdale would see the pictures of the great Reno fight between Jack Johnson and Jim Jeffries. Many Southern and Eastern and also a few Western cities have put up the bars and the syndicate that paid $100,000 for the privilege of using the fight films faces a heart-breaking loss of profits in some large cities in consequence. Manager Dittrich of the Lyric is away at his summer cottage and could not be reached for an interview. When the acting manager was given a chance to talk he just smiled through the ticket window at the question "When do you expect the fight pictures?" and answered "We don't know yet."

He says the Rhode Island coast is one of the finest summer cooling spots on the continent, though the Wayne county hills are beautiful and breezy. He was raised in New York but spent much of his youth in Westerly, where former Representative B. Court Bentley and the late Charles W. Barber, the successful druggist and past commander of Narragansett commandery, K. T., were among his chums. Mr. Pitman is a factory boss in Honesdale. His personality is agreeable, and in that part of the state he has a great many warm friends.—Norwich (Conn.) Evening Record.

The finest specimen of oats seen here for many a day was brought to this office on Thursday by a son of milkman August Heyne. The sample was one plucked at random from a field of 7 acres on the Heyne farm and is said to be a fair sample of the whole close. The stalk is unusually thrifty, with long broad leaves, and measures 4 feet 6 inches in height. Ten inches of the length is made up of the kernels, which are extremely thick in cluster and very heavy. The seed was put into the ground on April 1, and in the three months following that time has grown to full size and will soon begin to ripen. Envious farmer neighbors of Mr. Heyne are offering him $2 per bushel for the seed which, it is estimated, will weigh fully 50 pounds to the bushel. Two representatives of the American Agriculturist who stopped at the Heyne farm on Wednesday, declared it to be the finest piece of oats they had yet seen this season.—Hawley Times.

Honesdale people who go frequently to Hawley say Hawley is almost always two degrees hotter than Honesdale. That is because the streets in Honesdale are watered by a sprinkler and the streets of Hawley are not. Passengers who get off here after a stop in Hawley frequently speak about the change in temperature.
