

MAY BE ON SHIP.

Belief That Dr. Crippen Is Aboard Kroonland.

WOMEN WILL WATCH LANDING

Even Though Fugitive Suspect in Elmore Mystery Is Disguised as Female, It Is Believed He Cannot Escape Detection.

New York, July 19.—That Dr. H. H. Crippen, alleged slayer of his wife, Belle Elmore, is on the Red Star liner Kroonland, due here tomorrow, is the belief of the London police.

Crippen and the woman are supposed to have left London on the afternoon of July 9. He was last seen going from his office at 1 o'clock. They had ample time to catch the liner at Dover.

All the women friends of Mrs. Crippen who have been aiding the police in the search for the fugitive will be at the pier when the Kroonland docks, and there is little chance that Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve, if they are aboard, will be able to slip ashore unobserved, even though Dr. Crippen is disguised as a woman, as is now supposed.

Detectives will be sent down to meet the ship when she arrives at Quarantine tonight or early tomorrow morning.

Yesterday Detectives Leeson and Moody looked for Dr. Crippen and the Leneve girl on two vessels, the Atlantic Transport liner Minnetonka and the French steamship Chicago. They searched both vessels thoroughly.

Mme. Ginnett, who was Belle Elmore's friend; Mrs. R. H. Mills, Belle Elmore's half sister, and Mrs. B. Hyde, a London friend of Mrs. Ginnett's, were on the piers when the boats docked and also scrutinized the passengers.

Moody and Leeson had instructions to look for Crippen among the women passengers. Scotland Yard had an idea that he might be disguised as a woman.

Inquest Begun in London. London, July 19.—Dr. Danford Thomas of London, coroner, began an inquest over what was left of the body of Belle Elmore, the music hall singer, which was found last Wednesday night in the cellar of the house which she occupied with her husband, Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen, on Hilldrop Crescent, North London.

Dr. Thomas told the jury that the remains were supposedly those of Mrs. Crippen. There was not, he said, a great deal of evidence to place before the jury and it would be necessary to adjourn the inquiry, as an analysis of the organs was being made in order to find out if poison had been administered to the dead woman.

Mrs. Walter Neave, the mother of the Leneve girl, who is supposed to have fled with Dr. Crippen, and several officers of the Ladies' Music Hall guild were present at the inquest.

The native appeal of the detectives to the Leneve woman, supported by the pathetic letter of her father, Walter Neave, to disclose her whereabouts have been without effect. The woman's real name is Neave, but for some reason of her own she called herself Leneve, a name by which she was possibly known while a student at a French convent.

Scotland Yard has started out on another lead. The officers notified all pawnbrokers in the United Kingdom to be vigilant in accepting pledges from a man or a woman answering the description of Dr. Crippen or his companion. The police say they have reason to suspect that Dr. Crippen had not more than £100 in his possession when he fled, and they argue that he will shortly be compelled to pawn some of Belle Elmore's jewelry, which cannot be found. It is known that she possessed jewels of considerable value.

AERONAUT HURT.

Cleveland, July 19.—J. W. Dale, aeronaut, is lying seriously injured in a hospital, the victim of a trial flight in a dirigible balloon. Unable to control the balloon when he attained the height of 3,000 feet, Dale sought safety in a parachute drop. The parachute failed to open sufficiently to bring him safely to the earth, yet prevented his falling to instant death.

A FOREGLEAN OF THE KINGDOM.

International Bible Lesson for July 24, '10—(Matt. 17: 1-8, 14-20).

Life, to most people, has a remarkable resemblance to the geography of the planet. It is characterized by stormy seas, and verdant fields, by peaceful valleys and vast prairies, by Saharas of barrenness and oases of plenty, by monotonous plains and mountain ranges. But, while in the natural world, millions are shut in by their environment, and are compelled to remain within the "bounds of their habitation," in the mental and spiritual world no such barriers exist. The mind is independent of locality. The body may be chained to the dull, treadmill existence that knows no change from year's end to year's end, but the spirit, on the wings of inspiration may fly away from corroding care to revel in inspiring scenes and to drink at life's eternal fountains.

Such an exalted experience was that of Christ at his Transfiguration. It was a mountain top incident. It was a luminous moment. Taking with him the three mighty ones, Peter, James and John, the triumvirate upon whose shoulders was to rest the burden of his church in after years most largely, he left the dreary plain and climbed the rugged sides of snow-capped Mt. Hermon, lifting its mighty bulk 10,000 feet above the sea, and the portals of eternity opened. There, surrounded with supernatural beings, "His face did shine as the sun, and his garments were white as the light." It was a foregleam of what shall be. Wrapped in a glorious cloud, in an ecstasy unutterable, shaking off the weight of care and trouble the soul of the Perfect Man claimed its rightful heritage and revelled in conscious victory.

Exalted Experiences. Such luminous moments have been often experienced by men. There are long years of dreary service and drudgery. The burdens of life gall the bending shoulders, and the feet are blistered as they tread their way over the burning sands. And then, suddenly, we find ourselves toiling up the slopes of our Mount of Transfiguration on whose heaven-kissing summit we see visions and hear voices whose glory and power can never be told, and in the memory of which we move for years thereafter.

All the great things of earth have come to men in these moments of exaltation, when the soul is flooded with the light "such as never was on sea or land." The musician produces his compositions, good but unsatisfactory; and then all at once in a moment of inspiration gives the world an immortal oratorio. The artisan laboriously toils in his workshop, and suddenly starts the world with an indispensable invention. The artist paints a picture that crowns all his achievements. The sculptor carves an image that is the admiration of the ages. The poet sings a song that throbs through the centuries. The statesman produces a system of government that emancipates a race. They are the results of mountain top visions, of the luminous moments of life.

We estimate men in this world, not by what they may be doing at any specified time, but by what they have done in their highest moods, what they have done at their best. We do not expect Demosthenes to make every speech an "Oration for the Crown." We do not look for Shakespeare to be always writing a "Hamlet." One "In Memoriam" satisfies us as to the ability of Tennyson. We measure their calibre by what they have done, and can do, in the full swell of their powers.

Raphael's Masterpiece.

Perhaps the noblest, the most beautiful picture in the world is Raphael's last masterpiece, his last painting, the Transfiguration, now in the Vatican at Rome. He spent years of study upon it: It was scarcely finished when he died. While he was sick, he had the picture hung in his sight, that his constant thoughts might rest upon it. And when he was dead, the picture was hung above his lifeless body, where for days crowds came to honor his wonderful genius, as they looked with reverence at the dead artist and his matchless conception.

We cannot all be Raphaels, but we can all have our Transfiguration, a great crisis in our career when we are lifted above and out of our environment as Paul was, caught up into invisible spaces to hear and see things unutterable. The busy merchant may have it, the toiling day laborer may experience it, the careworn mother may enjoy it. Such a luminous moment will broaden our outlook, increase our faith, make life's burdens easier to carry, send us forth with new inspiration to take our place in the toll of life at the foot of the mount. We may not say much about it in after years, but all life will take on a different meaning thereafter, and we shall move among men as those who have been where the gates of heaven were ajar.

Such moments are not the every day experiences of men. Christ had but one transfiguration in his 33 years of life. It was not the day dream of youthful enthusiasm, a mere castle in the air of a visionary. It was the revelation of God to a soul prepared for it by years of patient discipline. Service in the valley and on the plain is the preparation for the vision.

New York, July 19.—Backed by a clique which is reported to be directed by Mr. Frank Hayne of New Orleans, the cotton exchange was thrown into a state of wild excitement and prices soared in aeroplane style to record marks.

It was reported that Mr. Hayne and his following, as a result of the movement, had cleaned up a fortune of at least $7,500,000. They succeeded despite the most strenuous opposition in cornering the July market and then started out after the August market, and the indications at a late hour were that they would be victorious in this too.

The excitement in the pit was greater than ever before, and the brokers fought with each other in a maddened attempt to save themselves. Having gotten away with July the bulls centered their attack on August options. Prices jumped to 15.07. This was an advance of 33 points over the closing on Saturday, which was 15.34.

GRIMES WANTS DIVORCE.

Former York Railway Man Names Newark Broker in Complaint.

Newark, N. J., July 19.—Howard E. Grimes, formerly a resident of East Orange, but now living in Jersey City, began a suit for divorce against Jennie S. Grimes, naming David Young, Jr., a Newark broker, as corespondent.

Both families are well known in Newark, the Oranges and in Philadelphia.

The Grimeses were married on Sept. 16, 1904, and there are two children—Dorothy and Jeannette. Mr. Grimes dates his marital troubles from January, 1908, when he was living in York, Pa. David Young, Jr., and his wife were living in York at the time, and the two families were very intimate. Grimes was superintendent of the street railway service in York and Young general manager. Young is a son of David Young, the traction expert of Brown Bros., bankers, of this city.

In his complaint Grimes asks for the custody of only one of the children, the elder daughter.

Jersey City, N. J., July 19.—Judge Linsy Rowe, who for more than thirty years has been a United States commissioner in Jersey City, has been requested to resign the office immediately on account of alleged irregularities in connection with a cash bail bond of $2,500 deposited with him in May by Joseph Becker, one of the leading bucket shop men of the country, who was caught in the raids made by the government three months ago. The request was communicated to Judge Rowe yesterday by United States District Attorney John B. Vreeland, who received instructions from the department of justice at Washington to proceed against the commissioner.

AFTER BEEF MEN.

Government Has Subpoenas For Fifty Packers.

Chicago, July 19.—Fifty officers and employees of the big packing firms are being sought with subpoenas by deputy United States marshals. Some of those sought, it was declared, would be taken before the federal grand jury investigating the alleged beef trust.

Those whom the government officers were anxious to examine first are officers and employees of the National Packing company. Among them are said to be Vice President Lemuel B. Patterson, Director Alonzo N. Benn, General Counsel Ralph Crews, Secretary C. G. Snow, General Auditor William E. Webber, Assistant Treasurer Arthur Colby and Assistant General Manager J. J. Risch.

By establishing a paint mill in Bowmans-town, Pa., she hopes to aid the town in which she spent her youth. Surveys have been made for the plant, and work on it will be pushed. PITTSBURG FIRE.

Five Firemen Injured by Fall of Factory Roof.

Pittsburg, July 19.—The plant of the Pittsburg Manufacturing company was almost destroyed by fire this morning, entailing a loss of between $50,000 and $75,000, fully covered by insurance. While fighting the flames five firemen were injured.

Why Not Pass the Plate?

They ought to pass the plate at church weddings. It comes natural to do it in church, and to do so would add a pretty and useful employment to the duties of the ushers, who always have a little spare time before the bride arrives. And, really, getting married is more expensive than ever, and though wedding presents are excellent in their way, what the young people usually need the most is cash. Instead of the list of gifts which the newspapers sometimes print we should read, "The collection yielded $4,000.00." That would be nice. It is much easier to store and care for money than plate and glass! And money always fits and there is no such thing as an embarrassing duplication of dollars.—Life.

He Saved the Patent Office.

When in the war of 1812 the British, who had taken Washington, trained their guns upon the patent office, Dr. Thornton, throwing himself directly before the guns, cried:

"Are you Englishmen or Goths and Vandals? This is the patent office—a depository of the ingenuity and inventions of the American nation, in which the whole civilized world is interested. Would you destroy it? Then let the charge pass through my body."

And the building was spared. Twenty-four years afterward, however, it was destroyed by fire, together with everything in it.

Why He Applauded.

"Are you fond of music?" asked a stranger of the young man at the concert who was applauding vigorously after a pretty girl had sung a song in a very painful way.

"Not particularly," replied the young man frankly, "but I am extremely fond of the musician."

CHOICE GULLINGS

Ingenious Beggars.

The orient has the greatest number and probably the most persistent of beggars, but Paris has the most ingenious members of the alms extracting fraternity, according to a letter from that city. The latest claimant to first place among the original beggars is the man who paraded a boulevard a few days ago mounted on a camel. The animal was decorated with rags of many colors, and in the saddle, an exceedingly shabby affair, which looked as though it had seen many years of service, sat the well dressed beggar. A pair of crutches were fastened to the saddle, and the tiny dog which is the necessary companion of every Paris mendicant sat before him. The ship of the desert sailed majestically with the boulevard tide until the police brought it to anchor. The man knew well that the people of Paris appreciate a novelty, and he probably made money on his camel investment before his business was shut off. "I doubt whether any one in Paris would be much surprised to see a beggar in an automobile. As to the beggar on horseback, he has ceased to be a novelty," says the correspondent.

How Knob Noster Was Named.

J. M. Shepherd of Knob Noster writes concerning the origin of his town's name: "Knob Noster is situated at the foot of two beautiful hills or 'knobs,' in the western prairie. These knobs are green and grass grown to their summits and rise out of a flat prairie from which they can be seen for many miles. When the village was founded in the early fifties a schoolhouse was built and an eastern schoolmaster was employed to teach a pay school. When he arrived at his place of employment he was struck with the beauty of the knob and, being exceedingly proud of his knowledge of Latin, dubbed them 'Knobs Noster,' or 'Our Knobs.' The villagers were struck with the name and named their town after the designation of their Latin loving schoolmaster. The process of time seems to have worn the 'w' from 'Knobs'—Kansas City Star.

A Russian Prison Story.

This gruesome story comes from Moscow: In the prison at Tschernigow there were confined recently three men convicted of murder awaiting execution. One morning a few days before the day of execution the jailer found two of them strangled and the third lying unconscious near the bodies of his cell mates. Investigation showed that the three men had resolved to cheat the gallows if possible and had thrown dice to determine which one should strangle the other two. The man who had lost made a cord from the bedclothes and carried out the fatal decree. It had been further agreed that the survivor should commit suicide, but the strangler lost courage at the last moment.

First Aid For Ivy Poisoning.

The remedies prescribed for poison ivy are various, but are of such a nature that their use without the advice of a physician is risky. If one realizes at the time that he has come into contact with poison ivy he should rub the hands at once with fresh, moist, fine soil, and this may remove the irritating oil before it becomes absorbed, but the work must be done very quickly. If the first sign of the disease is the itching which heralds the coming of the pustules, a physician should be consulted at once, but if none be at hand get from a druggist a weak solution of "lead water" and apply it with absorbent cotton, but get a doctor as quickly as possible.—Designer.

Cost of Celebrating.

Colonel H. N. Renouf at the old guard banquet at Delmonico's, in New York, told an instructive story about summer vacations.

"I said to a man the other day," he began, "Well, are you going to send your wife to the seashore again this summer?"

"No, sir; I'm not," said he. "I can't afford it."

"But your wife's so economical," I objected. "You told me that she spent very little at the shore last year."

"Yes, I know," said he, "but home alone I spent over a hundred a week."—Washington Post.

Naming the Hotel Clerk.

One hotel extends an unusual courtesy—if it be a courtesy—to its guests. Over the desk where most of the business of the hotel is done hangs a sign which says, "The clerk now on duty is Mr. Smith," or Mr. Jones, as the case may be. Whether the sign is intended to save the feelings of guests or clerks isn't quite plain. It saves the clerks from being addressed as "Hey, you," and the guests from having to say, "Oh, Mr. Eb-h-h."—New York Sun.

The Boy's Business.

"We were waiting for the elevator to come down," said a commercial traveler, "after discussing the probability of an aeroplane's crossing the Atlantic within a year, when just as the cage was about to ascend, one of the party said, 'I'll bet $10,000 that it won't be done,' and the elevator boy took him up."—Everybody's Magazine.

Boston Hotel Comforts.

"I have put up at many a hotel in New York," said a dyed in the wool Bostonian, "but nowhere have I found the concrete comforts you may have at any of the better class hostels in Boston. For example, there you will find in every room a Bible and a clothes stretcher."
