AUTO TRIP TO HONESDALE.

Some of the Things Correspondent Saw on Way to Maple City.

The following from the pen of the Citizen's Dreher correspondent is all right:

Did you ever have an automobile ride or a ride in an automobile—it means about one and the same? As a rule, the class of people who own autos and travel for pleasure, make an effort to get on good, smooth, solid roads, where they speed along, regardless of speed limits or discomfort to anyone who must follow in their wake, especially in dust and heat and the auto really is a dust slinger—possibly a mud slinger, too.

But it is a humane invention, for you don't have to stop going up hills to rest—that is, provided you have an auto that don't get balky—and you don't need anything to keep the flies away that are such an awful pest in fly time.

To insure against any mishaps in pleasure riding, get an auto of reliable make, get well posted in the use of the various levers that control the power and steering gear, learn how to oil her and where to apply water in case she gets hot and, above all, don't learn to run the thing so dangerously fast that you will be a menace to the public in general and able to do damage to the highways.

Three things are essential for a good chauffeur—a steady hand, a good eye and a level head.

One commandment in the supervisor's code is not duly observed that is for the travelers' benefit everywhere, and that is the removal of the loose stones from the public highways. This law should be enforced, for it means a whole lot for the good of the road and is not a big expense to the township.

In a Buick auto, owned and operated by Iverson Gilpin of Laanna, Pike county, Mr. Ernest McRostie and lady friend, Miss Cameron, both of Philadelphia, Mr. Emile Buille of Greentown, Pike county, and "Me" started from Newfoundland at 7 a. m. July 15 and in two hours we landed in Honesdale, and in the hot sun and on dusty roads we suffered no discomfort.

This Buick machine is certainly a hill climber, for anyone who has made the trip aforesaid via Bidwell hill, Cadjaw Pond and so on, either on foot, by horse power or auto, will know the public road is far from level and enough solid boulders and loose stones to keep the driver on the alert to miss them all. Such is the road, but the views of hill and dale, the well-kept farms and the fine weather on that day, helped make a very pleasant trip, and almost before we knew it we were in the Maple City.

Our objective point was the state road being built about a mile west of Honesdale by the contractors, Messrs. Seaman, Irwin and Brennehan, and we want to say right here that building state road is not all nice, clean work. Where the work is in progress there is inconvenience and discomfort to those who must travel that particular highway.

The part of road already completed is in fine condition and a great improvement over the has-been road of the past, but why in the world didn't the state road reach into Honesdale? No doubt someone can tell why.

The retaining wall near the entrance to the Wayne county fairgrounds is quite an undertaking, but the contractors have the work under control and have the push in them to master the job. They are a general trio to meet with, and with Mr. J. M. Hale, the inspector, to complete the quartet, they are well qualified to do the county good road service.

By the way, Mr. Hale is a native of Jenkinstown, Bucks county, and may be a legal descendant of Matthew Hale, who was a chief justice in "ye olden time" and noted as an expert in law. Ask him (J. M. Hale) about it.

We were pleasantly entertained at the Wayne County house, and were shown some fine cut glass in the Herbeck-Demer glass cutting establishment. We shook hands with the manager of the Citizen and the editor of the Independent, ate a dish of fine cream, and were soon homeward bound. On the way going and coming we noticed only a very few apples and the amount of cider and "apple sass" made in Wayne county this season will be very limited in supply and there's a chance of its being cornered in the market.

The hay crop is yielding much better than last year, while the fields of corn, oats and rye in nearly every section we passed through are looking finely. Some fine patches of potatoes, too, by the way, we saw. On the home trip we stopped to shake hands with Mine Host Nicholson at Salem and had a drink of his good water. Thus ended our trip.

INDICTS CARROLL.

Iowa Governor Is Charged With Criminal Libel.

POLITICAL TEMPEST IS STIRRED

Republicans Discuss Probable Effect of Grand Jury Action on State Election—Carroll Attacked Cownie of the Board of Control.

Des Moines, Ia., July 21.—The indictment returned against Governor B. F. Carroll by the Polk county grand jury charging criminal libel has created a genuine sensation, and upon every hand can be heard animated discussion as to the probable effect which will be had upon the state ticket which is to be elected in November.

John Cownie, former member of the state board of control, the prosecuting witness, published a signed statement in which he declared the indictment of the governor is a vindication of himself, although many regard the Cownie statement as premature and claim he should have awaited until the governor had been tried upon the indictment.

Governor Carroll charged that Cownie, as member of the state board of control, has sold diseased cattle belonging to a state institution in the markets at Omaha, that he had acted improperly toward girls in the state institution at Mitchellville and that he had purchased goods for state institutions without first requested by proper superintendents. It was the publication of these charges following Cownie's resignation upon which the libel indictment is based.

Governor Carroll was renominated at the Republican primaries of June 7. He defeated Warren Garst for the nomination by about 3,000 votes. Carroll represents the stand pat wing of the Republican party in Iowa and Garst had the support of the insurgent or Cummins-Dolliver element. There were enough insurgents who believed it poor policy to deny Carroll a second term to insure his renomination.

The Democrats have nominated Claude R. Porter for governor.

WOMEN NOTABLES ARRIVE.

Mrs. Burnett, Author, and Mrs. Snowden, Suffragette, Reach New York.

New York, July 21.—Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, the author, and Mrs. Ethel Snowden, who is the wife of Philip Snowden, M. P., and is one of the leaders in the British suffragist movement, were passengers on the Cunarder Carmania.

The author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has been visiting abroad for two months. She sailed from New York with the intention of seeing the Passion play at Oberammergau.

"I did not go to Oberammergau," said Mrs. Burnett, "because I heard so many reports about the terrible realism of the play. I was afraid my nerves could not stand it."

Mrs. Snowden will remain in this country until the latter part of August. She will lecture at Chautauqua in this state, in Illinois and Iowa. Mrs. Snowden is not a militant suffragette, but says that she believes that the militant methods are responsible for the big gains in England. The Prince of Hotel Proprietors.

Way back somewhere in the sixties a young man traveled from his little sheep farm down in Texas, where the floods had cleaned out all his stock, to New York city. His name was George C. Boldt, and the gyrations of Fortune's wheel that carried him from his first humble job of washing dishes and peeling onions in a restaurant kitchen to proprietor of some of the most princely hotels in the world make up one of the most fascinating stories in the July issue of Human Life.

Men who climb to the highest pinnacle of success in a certain line oftentimes get hold of some theory or make some discovery in their first humble beginnings whereby they afterwards revolutionize the business. This was the case with Boldt.

The star to which he had hitched his wagon was proprietorship of a hotel. Opportunity knocked and he gave her the glad hand. Then presto!—to his little hovel on one day, with flourish of trumpets, descended the great William Waldorf Astor—and the hotel register full. But Boldt wasn't easily feazed, and the way in which he rose to the occasion, and the meal he served to the great William in his modest little dining-room convinced Astor that he had found the man he was looking for. The result was that the fortunes of the great Waldorf-Astoria were committed to his hands.

Step by step the story traces his rise, and not the least interesting part of the narrative is the story of the great hotel whose magnificence has left nothing for competitors to surpass.

This is the first of a series of stories to appear in Human Life relating to the great American captains of industry in various lines.
