

TRIUMPHANT TOUR OF TENER PARTY

Republican Nominees Cordially Received Everywhere.

ROBERT S. MURPHY'S TRIBUTE

Former Lieutenant Governor Speaks In High Praise of His Successful Rival For Governorship.

As the tour of John K. Tener, the nominee for governor, and his colleagues on the Republican ticket carries them from county to county and the day of election draws nearer, interest in the campaign continues to grow and the meetings continue to attract immense crowds at every important stopping place. Since the very outset of the canvass there has not been a disappointing feature and all signs point to a tremendous victory.

Probably one of the most interesting occasions on the trip was the demonstration given Mr. Tener in Johnstown, the home of Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Murphy, who was probably the most prominently mentioned of those proposed for the nomination which ultimately went to Mr. Tener. The citizenship of this industrial center turned out in great numbers to greet the Tener party, and Lieutenant Governor Murphy was their spokesman and he presided over the meeting.

Mr. Murphy, in an eloquent address, reviewed the issues and in referring to Mr. Tener spoke of him as "a man of splendid heart, with a sound brain in a sound body; one who is in sympathy with labor and who is acquainted with the toll in the work shop and mill; one who has attained a position in the community in which he resides for business integrity and a business ability second to none; one who has lifted himself by the aid of superior talents into a position of prominence and influence in the financial world of western Pennsylvania; one who ably represented his district in the congress of the United States; one whose Republicanism is unstained and who is in hearty accord with the policies of his party in the nation and with the policies of the present state administration, to the carrying out and execution of which he has pledged himself. None who knows him but will believe that this promise will be thoroughly redeemed."

"It is my privilege," concluded Mr. Murphy, "to know him personally, and I esteem him as a man of high ideals, clean in thought and speech, and beyond the slightest reproach in public or private life."

Mr. Murphy expressed the belief that Mr. Tener will have a big majority.

Progressive Pennsylvania.

In one of his recent speeches Mr. Tener took occasion to refer to the advanced position held by Pennsylvania in the matter of statutes advocated by some so-called progressives, laws for the protection of labor and other interests, and upon this subject, among other things, he said:

"I have frequently stated and absolutely believe that Pennsylvania is the best governed state in the nation and that its several administrative departments are honestly and efficiently governed."

"During the past four years Pennsylvania, in advance of all the other states, met the issues and gave to the people such laws as were demanded and in this respect took advanced ground in what is now known as progressive legislation so much sought after by our sister states, and resulting entirely to the credit of the Republican party and to the great honor of this commonwealth."

"Today many of our sister states are seeking to emulate the example set by Pennsylvania, and especially is New York state active in this respect. The differences between the factions there are due to divided opinion upon just such legislation as we have already enacted into law, Pennsylvania through the Republican party, has placed many laws on its statute books favorable to the workmen, and these laws were passed at the suggestion and in compliance with the issues of union labor."

Strong Taxation Policy.

In this connection one of his colleagues, the nominee for lieutenant governor, John M. Reynolds, a few nights ago, said:

"The policy of the Republican party in this state since 1866 has been to relieve the individual of the burden of taxation and to place the same upon those sources most able to bear it. This will be seen from the fact that the total revenues for 1909, amounting to over $29,000,000, were derived from four sources: Corporations, about seventeen million dollars; personal property, over four million dollars; collateral inheritance, over one million seven hundred thousand dollars; mercantile, brewery and distilleries licenses, over three million dollars."

"From this were supported the state government, charitable institutions, hospitals for the insane, dispensaries, sanitariums, reformatories and penitentiaries, soldiers' orphans' schools, besides payment for primary election expenses, appropriations to public schools and other items aggregating a little over thirty million dollars."

"The fact that stands out most prominent and to the credit of the foresight and skill of our lawmakers is shown in comparing the revenues and expenses of 1896 with that of 1909. In the former year the revenue and expenses were each over eight millions, and in 1909 they were each in excess of twenty-nine million dollars."

"With few changes in the tax laws the corporate growth paid in the main this excess in revenues, enabling the state government to relieve local taxation."

"The wisdom shown by this system is today commanding the attention of our sister states, and movements are on foot in some of them to secure its adoption by them, which shows that practical business heads have directed the affairs in this state."

NATIONAL PHASE OF STATE FIGHT

Congress and Next Presidency Involved in Result.

The campaign now being waged throughout Pennsylvania and in every congressional district in the Union, is of national scope.

It leads directly up to the presidency. Two years from now we shall be electing a president. This struggle is preliminary. This fact should not be overlooked.

All over the country the Democrats are aroused. They are claiming that in November they will elect a majority in the national house of representatives. They have figured—and they are right in their figures—that if they can but gain thirteen senators they will also control the senate. They already have carried the state of Maine, which means the gain of two representatives and one United States senator. They believe that they can win in New York, in Massachusetts, in Ohio, in Indiana, in a dozen states now aligned with the Republican party.

They are cock sure of the house. They are cock sure that they will reduce the Republican majority in the senate to a beggarly majority, even if they do not wipe out that majority entirely.

But they are certain, if they fail in getting rid of that majority this time, that two years hence, they will sweep that majority out of existence. Two years hence they expect to elect their president and give him a Democratic congress.

That is the object at which they are aiming, and they have brought the chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee into Pennsylvania to help them to do it.

For they rely upon Pennsylvania to help along the Democratic cause. It is up to the Republicans of Pennsylvania to say whether they shall receive aid in this great Republican state.

There are two sets of Democrats in Pennsylvania. There are the Berry Democrats, who are running after William H. Berry, the friend, the follower, the disciple of William Jennings Bryan. Mr. Berry wants to be elected governor, but at the same time he asks you to vote for him on the Keystone Party ticket, which carries numerous Democratic candidates for congress and for the legislature.

Vote for Berry on the Keystone ticket and you vote not only for the repudiation of President Taft, for the repudiation of former President Roosevelt, but you vote for Democratic congressmen and for Democratic or assistant Democratic members of the legislature.

And if you vote for Democratic members of the legislature you vote in turn for a Democratic United States senator, and you vote for a combination which will reappoint the state in the congressional districts that additional Democratic congressmen will be elected for years to come.

Mr. Berry heads one set of Democrats—the Bryan contingent, Webster Grim, the leader of the other set of Democrats—the "regular" set—also asks you to elect Democratic congressmen and Democratic members of the legislature. The two Democratic candidates are for themselves when it comes to the governorship. They are for the Democratic party in all other respects.

If you want a Democrat in the executive mansion, and if you want a Democratic congress, and if you want a Democratic legislature, which means in turn a Democratic United States senator and a reappointment of the congressional districts on a Democratic basis, why by all means vote for Berry or Grim.

SUMMER RESORT BURNED.

Hiawatha Lodge, Adirondacks, Destroyed—Loss $20,000.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Hiawatha lodge, a summer resort on the shores of Spectacle lake, eleven miles from Tupper lake, in the Adirondacks, was burned to the ground, with a loss of $20,000.

The fire started in the basement of the cafe, and in less than two hours the two main buildings were in ashes. The cottages, garage and gas house were saved.

$1,000,000 Bond Issue.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The Erie Railroad company is seeking authority from the up state public service commission to issue $1,000,000 general ten bonds to reimburse the company's treasury for amounts expended for coal cars.

DEATH LIST LESS

27 Sailors Instead of 20 Now Probably Drowned.

MIDSHIPMAN IS EXONERATED.

Memorial Services Conducted on Battleship New Hampshire—Thousands Watch Police and Naval Men Drag For Bodies.

New York, Oct. 4.—Two of the men who were officially reported as "probably drowned" and three of the men who were on the "missing" list have accounted for themselves, thereby cutting down the roll of death in the battleship New Hampshire launch disaster to twenty-seven "probably drowned" and nine "missing"—thirty-six in all. The fact that these men have been heard from has given a gleam of hope to the saddened fleet that the list may be still further cut down.

The men heard from are J. Greene, an officer of Cleveland, O., and T. A. Roswell, seaman, who were on the "probably drowned" list, and Seaman E. A. Herbert of Columbus, Conn. Fireman J. Van Peer and Bugler A. Dwinell, whose names were on the roster of the missing.

That the launch of the New Hampshire which overturned in the Hudson river was overloaded is the statement made by a sailor on the New Hampshire.

The boat, he declared, was rated as being able to hold 100 men at the most. He avowed that on Saturday night, when the launch left the fleet, there were between 150 and 160 men in it.

In the report of the board of inquiry held to investigate the accident it was declared that no one is to blame for the accident, that the ensign in command of the cutter which overturned did more than his duty and acted with heroism and that the tender was sound and it was not its condition which caused the tragedy.

A memorial service was conducted on board the New Hampshire for the sailors who were drowned. All the officers and the crew of the battleship stood with bared heads while the chaplain eulogized the men who died. There was hardly a dry eye among all the men as the chaplain ended the services.

According to the dispatches received from Washington, nothing save a very skeletonized report of the tragedy has been received as yet by the officials there. Messages of sympathy, however, have been sent out by the navy department to the families of all those reported to have been drowned in the accident.

Naval officials say it is the worst disaster that has happened since the naval tug Nina and her crew of thirty-two men foundered off the Delaware capes last February and that it is the largest loss of life that they recall where the warship itself remained intact.

The accident will not interfere in any way with the European cruise of the New Hampshire with the other vessels of the Atlantic fleet. A couple of thousand new men will be shipped aboard the fleet before its departure for Europe mostly to replace those whose time is about to expire, but in order to give as many as possible the advantage of the cruise there will be an excess of 500 or more over what are actually needed for the fleet complement.

Chief Surgeon Vickery of the battleship fleet announced that as fast as the bodies are recovered they will be placed aboard the hospital ship Solace. When properly identified and as soon as the coroners grant permission they will be buried in government cemeteries or sent to the families of the dead. A special launch for the coroners' use was assigned by Rear Admiral Vreeland to run between the landing and the Solace.

Ensign Chevalier, who was in charge of the overturned launch and who distinguished himself by making many rescues, is still in great distress of mind over the affair, and when a party of newspaper men sent a request that he see them he asked to be excused.

Watched by thousands of men, women and children, many of them weeping relatives, lined along the shore, the police of the harbor squad and some of the men from the war vessels with the rising sun renewed their grappling in the waters of the Hudson river for the bodies.

Pathetic scenes occurred at the Ninety-sixth, One Hundred and Thirtieth and One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street docks, where the tenders of the battleships land. Relatives of sailors on the vessels from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Delaware, Long Island and other places flocked to the piers to obtain news of their sons or relatives. Most of the visitors were mothers of men serving on the New Hampshire. Two who learned that their sons were missing fainted on the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street dock.

Ex-Senator Blodgett Dead.

Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 4.—Former United States Senator Rufus Blodgett of New Jersey is dead at his home at the age of seventy-six years. He was general superintendent of the New York and Long Branch railroad and except for his six years' term in the senate had held that position since 1884.

ARTFUL BILL DROPS IN.

Calls to See His Friend Tom About a Small Money Matter.

Bystanders saw the derby-hatted, bushy-eyebrowed little man enter the office of his friend with the air of one who has something on his mind.

"Well, well! If there ain't Old Bill!" exclaimed the man sitting at his desk. "What's on your mind, anyhow?"

"Oh, just dropped in, Tom," replied Bill. "Found myself on your door and just thought I'd see how everything was with you."

"Glad you did. Well, how're you makin' out?"

"First rate. How's things with you?"

"Oh, I can't complain at all. How are all the folks?"

"Fine. Everything's coming all right with you, is it?"

Now, after the conversation had run along in that strain for a little while the bystanders in the office decided that the caller had dropped in to make a touch.

Bill shifted from one foot to the other uneasily. He seemed to lack for a word. Evidently it was coming.

"Oh, by the way, Tom!" spoke up Bill suddenly, with much show of spontaneity, "I was just on my way down to pay my rent and it just struck me that I haven't quite enough on me. Could you let me have that ten-spot I lent you down at the club last night?"

There, he'd said it. The worst was over. And it wasn't a touch affair, but a man trying to collect a debt in an inoffensive way, which is thrice as embarrassing.

Tom looked at his visitor. "Didn't I ever give that back to you?" he asked. "Huh! Why didn't you speak of it before?"

"Oh, I haven't needed it—wouldn't have thought of it now. In fact, if I hadn't been standing here and just happened to think about—not having enough to hand to the landlord."

"Sorry you had to ask for it," apologized Tom.

"Oh, that's all right, I guess I know you well enough to feel free to ask for what I want, hey? No need of formality or anything between us. Of course, I wouldn't have mentioned it at that if I hadn't just been here and happened to think"—and so on.

And having collected a debt that had been on his mind for months, while he wondered how to get it without giving offense, Bill went his way in a high state of inward gloe.

The Doctor Outdone.

Scottish shrewdness is occasionally overmatched by Irish wit. The handful of people who inhabit a certain little island in the Atlantic, off the coast of Donegal, enjoy so much health and so little wealth that there is no doctor on the spot. In rare cases of emergency a physician is brought in a boat from the nearest village on the mainland.

On one occasion some islanders who were obliged to summon the doctor found that he had gone to Dublin on business. As the case was urgent, they invoked the services of another practitioner. This gentleman was a Scotman, with the proverbial cannyness of his race, and he declined to undertake the voyage unless he received his fee—a golden sovereign—in advance.

There was no help for it, and the money was paid. The physician went to the island and attended to the case. But when he inquired for a boat to take him away he found that not a boatman on the island would ferry him back again for any less consideration than two pounds, paid in advance.

The doctor had to part with the two sovereigns and to admit that he had been beaten at his own game.

Original Miniatures.

The original miniatures were the small pictures with which manuscripts were illuminated in the middle ages. They got their name not on account of their minute size, but because they were colored with minium (red lead), whence came the Italian designation miniature. Following the invention of the art of printing and engraving, miniature painting entered a new phase, and the word came to mean in popular parlance simply a small portrait.

The Era of New Mixed Paints!

This year opens with a deluge of new mixed paints. A condition brought about by our enterprising dealers to get some kind of a mixed paint that would supplant CHILTON'S MIXED PAINTS. Their compounds, being new and heavily advertised, may find a sale with the unwary.

THE ONLY PLACE IN HONESDALE AUTHORIZED TO HANDLE CHILTON'S MIXED PAINTS

Is JADWIN'S PHARMACY.

There are reasons for the pre-minance of CHILTON PAINTS: 1st—No one can mix a better mixed paint. 2d—The painters declare that it works easily and has wonderful covering qualities. 3d—Chilton stands back of it, and will agree to repaint, at his own expense, every surface painted with Chilton Paint that proves defective. 4th—Those who have used it are perfectly satisfied with it and recommend its use to others.

Are You Half Knocked Out?
