REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For Governor JOHN K. TENER.
For Lieutenant Governor JOHN M. REYNOLDS.
Secretary of Internal Affairs HENRY HOUCK.
State Treasurer CHAS. F. WRIGHT.
For Congress, C. C. PRATT.
For State Senator, WINFRED D. LEWIS.

COUNTY.

Representative, H. C. JACKSON.

BERRY was elected State Treasurer for a term of two years at $8,000 per year. He was present in his office at the capital six-and-a-half days, and drew $16,000 from the State Treasury. This is at the rate of $231.88 per day. Who can blame him for being a reformer and having the itch for office?

What's the matter with Jackson? He's all right! Is heard in every hamlet in Wayne county. It is surprising how united the farmers are on having H. C. Jackson represent them in the next legislature, and they are entitled to a representative. Nobody can blame the Democratic farmers for swinging away from their candidate and rallying around Jackson this year. The farmers have not had a real farmer candidate in many years. It's either been a lawyer, doctor, storekeeper or liquor dealer and mostly every one of them from the business center of the county. Let every farmer stand by Jackson this year! The Democratic candidate has had eight years of office and now wants to have two more years. His motto: A SQUARE DEAL AND EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL is a farce. The only way to make a square deal is to vote for Jackson. It has been the custom for years to give successful candidates two terms, but the square dealer wants five terms. Everybody vote for Jackson and Home rule.

TENER AND THE WAGE EARNER

In a recent address to a gathering of miners Representative Tenger discussed the attitude of the Republican party in this state towards labor. He referred to the many wholesome laws for the advancement of the wage earner enacted by that party and continued:

"Of this record we are justly proud, and we point to our action in the past as a guarantee of our intentions in the future. We realize that the development of our industries has brought with it new problems, new dangers and altogether complex conditions that demand and deserve consideration and treatment by the law-making and law-administering powers of our Commonwealth."
Mr. Tenger then outlined some of the recommendations he will submit to the Legislature for the enactment of further legislation in the interest of laboring men and women. He referred especially to measures for the protection of the life and health of those who toil in the mines and factories and emphasized the importance of the employers' liability law, whose operation, he said, should be broadened in justice to the wage earner.

It will be to the interest of every working man in Pennsylvania to vote the Republican ticket this year. A better friend of labor than John K. Tenger has never been presented to the people as a candidate for Governor. His record as a citizen and as a public man in every sense confirms this statement. The pledge he made the wage earners to support their cause to the measure of his ability and influence was not a campaign platitude. He meant every word he uttered. With John K. Tenger as governor labor will be assured of a "square deal" at Harrisburg.
The election of Mr. Tenger and the other candidates on the state ticket is not the only phase of the campaign with which labor is concerned. On November 8th this state will elect a Legislature and thirty-two members of Congress. The legislature will name a United States Senator. That Senator should be a Republican. Each of the thirty-two men Pennsylvania will send to the House at Washington should be a Republican. The welfare of labor demands this. If the Democratic party comes into power it will pass a Democratic tariff bill. Every wage earner knows what that will mean because he recalls what the enactment of the last Democratic tariff bill meant. There is but one way for the laboring man to protect himself against destructive Democratic tariff revision. He must vote the Republican ticket. A vote for the Keystone ticket will be a vote for a Bryan Democrat for governor. It will be a vote for Democratic candidates for the Legislature, who, if elected, will vote for a Democrat for United States Senator. It will be a vote for Democratic candidates for Congress, who, if elected, will vote to substitute free trade for the protective tariff system. Can any working man in this state afford to vote the Keystone ticket?

Candidate Fuerth is having printed in a Scranton office a four sheet pamphlet for distribution among the voters of Wayne county. His reason for having it printed in Scranton is best known to himself.

Harvey Huffman, whose name and picture adorns the pages of the Democratic and reform journals of this senatorial district has had the curtain rung up on his past official life and he now wishes he had not wasted his time in securing the nomination for Senator. Harvey came to Wayne county just before the primaries, cavorted around among the saloons, "set them up for the boys," and just impressed the saloon men that he would be an ideal man to go to Harrisburg to protect their interests. After he had the saloon interests all fixed up he worked the anti-saloon racket in Monroe and managed to get the Keystone endorsement, in exchange for a promise to vote for local option. After bagging that prize he starts in and grabs the Prohibition nomination, but while he was doing these acrobatic stunts somebody tore the cover off his official record and exposed to view things; very naughty things Harvey had done at a time when he little thought of his future aspirations. Monroe county is all on fire with indignation and it looks as if Harvey would stay home or move away.

Ninety-One at Shanksville. Ninety-one years ago on October 1st the venerable Benjamin Franklin Spangler of Shanksville, was born in a log cabin at Stoyestown. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Spangler. Mr. Spangler who makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Floto, of this place, was the honor guest at a birthday celebration. Many of his children reside in Johnstown and they arrived here on the early morning train. Mr. Spangler, who was in bed at the time, had no knowledge of the celebration, and when he was aroused from his slumber, and came down stairs he met the members of his family face to face. After a good handshaking, he called their attention to the number of birthday postcards he had received, 140 in all. These tokens of love came from different parts of Somerset county and many from Johnstown. Mr. Spangler is in the best of health. He retires at an appointed time and always arises in the morning in the best of spirits. He is the last survivor of the old Spangler family, five brothers and four sisters having died when they reached the age of seventy or past. He is a grandson of Major Daniel Stoy, founder of Stoyestown. Major Stoy was a soldier of Revolutionary fame. Although born in Stoyestown, Mr. Spangler has been making his home at Shanksville for the larger part of his life.

VOTE FOR PRATT.

Feast of Tabernacles. Jewish people throughout the world celebrated the Feast of the Tabernacle last Wednesday. Services started in the cities Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock with both music and sermon. The conclusion of the festive season will be Tuesday of this week.

The Feast of Tabernacles is called in Hebrew Succoth, and falls upon the fifteenth of Tishri in the Hebrew calendar and lasts eight days. The eighth day is called the Day of Solemn Assembly.

This feast is ordained in Exodus xxiii, 16; xxxiv, 22, where it is called the Feast of Ingathering, and in Leviticus xxiii, 34, and Deut. xv, 13. In Leviticus we read, "Ye shall dwell in booths seven days—that your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt." This passage, it will be noted, sets forth the historical significance of the feast. Its agricultural character is suggested by its other name, the Feast of Ingathering. The Israelite who, in obedience to the Divine command, left his house for the week of the festival and took up his abode in a booth or tabernacle and lived through, as it were, an important epoch of his people's history, as thereby replenished the springs of Jewish sentiment. He was also thereby taught to remember that just as Israel in the wilderness was protected by God, so is he being guarded in his earthly pilgrimage. God's love is ever with his children like a protecting cloud.

The second name of the festival, the Feast of the Ingathering, almost explains itself. The holiday comes in the autumn at the time when the husbandman in Palestine had safely garnered the produce of his land. It is the time of the thinking of God as the giver. And so the lesson of gratitude for the blessings he had and of responsibility for the right use of them was made each year written upon his heart.

VOTE FOR LEWIS.

OUR CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR.

A Representative Young Man Whom You May Vote For.

WINFRED D. LEWIS.

Winfred D. Lewis, who is the candidate on the Republican ticket for State Senator from this district, is a young man 31 years of age. A lawyer by profession, who began life around the breakers and coal mines of his native town. He went to school when he had a chance, studied hard and graduated. Later he went to work and earned money enough to pay his way through Perkiomen Seminary, and after graduating taught Latin and Greek in that institution for over a year. From there he worked his way through Princeton University, finally graduating with high honors. After his collegiate year he entered a law office and later attended Dickinson Law School at Carlisle. He was admitted to the Carbon county bar and now has an extensive practice with offices at Lansford and Mauch Chunk. He stands high in his profession, and is highly respected in his community. He is a clean cut young man who is bound to win in the battle of life. He will carry Carbon county by a large majority. Monroe county although a Democratic stronghold, will give him a surprisingly big vote as his reputation for uprightness and square dealing appeals strongly to both Democrat and Republican voters of that county. It is expected that he will lead his Democratic competitor in his own county. The young men all over the district are out strong for him, working tooth and nail to elect him, and the cry of "Give the young men a chance" is being taken up on every hand, and election day will find young men, both Republicans and Democrats, lining up for Winfred D. Lewis. Wayne county young men have been asking for a chance to vote for a representative young man. Here is the chance, boys.

A Preacher Who Does Not Believe in Prohibition.

Rev. John B. Whitford, the Methodist minister of Oxford, who has stirred the state by his criticism of the Anti-Saloon League, now turns his guns on the women promoters of the prohibition propaganda who, he declares, "much prefer to be on the lecture platform talking against in temperance rather than in their homes training their children to self-government and teaching them the natural and necessary results of all excess."

"The glass of wine in the hands of the great Galilean at the marriage feast of Cana was as harmless as pure water," declares Dr. Whitford. "And so it is in every hand obedient to a completely-fashioned will. Men must learn to feel that the light is on the battlefield of their own life for the jewel of their honor and the coronet of their liberty. But as long as agitators and so-called reformers keep to the front the idea of social or world renovation by machinery and that somehow men can be swept into an ideal condition to the accompaniment of hurrahs or a brass band, men are not likely to begin the quiet, lonely unostentatious performance of their daily duty."

"As the country's disordered by labor agitators, who seem to think that by tinkering with the laws of political economy they can usher in the economic millennium, so rank, one-sided, imperfectly developed, ill-formed men think they can work the greatest reformation of the ages by some patent nostrum regardless of individual behavior and personal self-control. The problem of drink, like any other problem, staggering and overwhelming as it seems, must be studied and solved by individuals alone."

"What if every saloon is closed and the door of every brothel shut by force, would there be any new or surprising expansion of intelligence, any large and sudden increase in the number of chaste and temperate people? To state the question is to answer it in the negative. It is not in harmony with the law of evolution or with the philosophical method of individual and social regeneration. Evils are outgrown, not amputated. The master spirit of the ages and the central figure of Christendom said 'I am come not to destroy but to fulfil.' If you take the cup from the drunkard and cards from the gambler, you must provide innocent recreations, healthful occupations, uplifting novelties and excitements and much radiant cheerfulness, that in time shall make them loathe all sensual pleasures and all revelries of excess. If you fail to do this your victims are left in a vacuum without self-control or self-direction. You must give in place of what you take away by furnishing new objects of happiness and activity far in advance of the old. This is the true method of reform; the method of construction and fulfillment. And when each family begins to study this method and follow it then will begin the most wonderful reformation of all the ages."—Port Huron News.

WONDERFUL TYPESETTER.

Newcomer in the Field is a Whole Print Show in Itself.

There is now being exhibited in New York a new multiplex typesetting machine that has aroused comment throughout the country of printers. It is a typesetting and typesetting machine, which casts and sets any style of type from 5 to 42 point, delivering the matter direct into the galley, and attains speed never before equaled.

The machine is so ingenious in its work and construction that it appears to do its work guided by its own thinking powers. But the distinctive feature of this casting and composing machine is that it can produce display type in the order of composition, changing matrices without stopping the machine, and it delivers composed lines direct into the galley in any length from 1 to 30 inches and in type ranging from 5 to 42 point.

The matter is corrected from a galley in the same manner and as easily as typesetting is corrected, and the printer saved the cost and time of distributing the type into cases. The cost of leads and leading by hand is entirely eliminated, as the Multiplex leads automatically.

The machine now on the market and sold for about $2,000 and used in large plants casts all thicknesses of leads in place of the brasses generally used by printers. The same work is done quicker by a small device placed on the Multiplex—costing possibly $15—and the leads are cast in any thickness or length. This makes the Multiplex the ideal machine for newspaper work and magazines. In fine book work air holes in the type are the bane of the printer. By a simple process the Multiplex avoids this annoyance and produces a perfect type. It will cast and set about 6,000 ems an hour under ordinary operation, but that record can be far exceeded by expert operators.

This machine will cast and perfectly justify into lines of any width up to thirty inches, something no machine has ever been able to do. To change from one style of type to another it is merely necessary to press a key and the change is made in a second. There is no shifting of expensive magazines, with the attendant delay. The machine is operated from a keyboard the same as a linotype machine, but no spacing register before the operator is used.

Allen A. Canton, who is the inventor of the Multiplex, has perfected many devices in the mechanical and electrical field. Mr. Canton has placed many labor-saving devices on his Multiplex machine that will be greatly appreciated by the operators of these machines. By the depression of a single key, for instance, any commonly used word or combination of letters is cast. It sets type around cuts automatically and an automatic indicating register indicates the character or words cast in the same as on the visible typewriter.

The construction of the machine is simplicity itself, anyone who can operate a keyboard can run the Multiplex.

Grandson of Samuel J. Randall.

New York, Oct. 20.—Samuel J. Randall Lancaster, 22 years old, son of Charles C. Lancaster, a prominent attorney of Washington, D. C., was found wandering aimlessly near the Columbia campus today and was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he is held for observation in the psychopathic ward.

According to Lancaster he arrived in New York from Philadelphia this morning and, having no money, tried to get a check cashed. He had with him a bank book showing deposits of more than $5,000 in a Philadelphia bank, but because of his unique dress he said the cashiers and paying tellers at institutions he visited told him he was crazy and ordered him to get out. He wore a dress coat over a sweater, striped trousers and canvas shoes.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Samuel J. Randall Lancaster, the Washington youth held at Bellevue Hospital, New York, is a student at the University of Pennsylvania. He is a grandson of Samuel J. Randall, former speaker of the House of Representatives, and is wealthy by his own right through an inheritance from his grandmother.

Charles C. Lancaster, father of the youth, when informed of his son's escapade, said the boy had visited him here last Saturday and that he appeared to be very nervous. He started back to Philadelphia to school Sunday.

A Big Black Bear.

John Brush, of Canadensis, has already been rewarded with the pelt of a bear, in fact he shot one on the opening day, in Greene township, Pike county, says the Milford Dispatch. John says that brush weighed 400 pounds and was a fine specimen of this species of wild animals. He proudly totes the animal to the village. But, according to the reports of the killing, John was not satisfied with the one felled, but kept up his warfare against the bears and when he was through for the day, had wounded two more besides. He will not be fully satisfied until he has cut two more notches on the stock of his trusty rifle indicating that he has brought them down, too.

Summer Home Closed.

Cresco, Pa., Oct. 24.—One of the grandest charities maintained within the borders of the county of Monroe is that of the St. Luke's Summer Home for Women and Children, at Mountantown. So quiet is the work conducted that comparatively few know of its existence even. Yet it is there and the noble work carried on is the means of saving many lives. It is supported entirely by Scrantonians and the men and women who give of their means are to be commended for charity directed in proper channels. The following taken from a report will be of interest in this connection: "St. Luke's Summer School for Women and Children has closed its season with a deficit of $189.22 for the year. Our subscriptions this year amounted to only $439.15, while our expenses were about $639. We entertained nearly three hundred poor women and children, paying their fares to and from the home, and providing them with meals and sleeping quarters. But for the generosity of Scranton merchants in supplying us with about $200 worth of provisions, we should have been obliged to close the home early in the season. As it is, we are over $200 in debt, there having been a small deficit carried over from the preceding year. The broad nature of the charity is shown by the fact that last summer we entertained eighty-one Episcopalians, twenty-four Roman Catholics, forty-six Baptists, thirty-seven Methodists, forty-one Congregationalists, twenty-eight Presbyterians, fourteen from missions, ten Puritans, five Lutherans, ten Hebrews and three from the Salvation Army. The oldest female guest was seventy-nine, the youngest three months; the oldest male guest, fourteen years, the youngest two months. All had from a week to ten days' free vacation in the country."

Trouble Troubles These!

Readers, Pa., Oct. 24.—John Cramer who was injured by a falling tree in the woods near Readers a week ago, has hopes that he may yet live through his injuries. Surgeons at the Philadelphia hospital diagnosed his case as a fractured dislocation of the spine. The broken vertebra will be laid together with metal to knit the spine. The surgeons are confident that Mr. Cramer will be restored to health and strength in a short time.

Broadheads, Pa., Oct. 24.—Mrs. Benjamin Huffman, of Broadheads, who has been confined to her bed for some time with diabetes, has suffered a new affliction. Sunday morning she woke up to find herself totally blind. Happily she has changed for the better and is now able to see a little sunshine when her face is turned to the light.

Mrs. William Werkheiser, of Effort, a sufferer from the same disease, suffered a like affliction last week. But her improvement is not so marked.

It is a characteristic of diabetes that it affects the eyes, and both Mrs. Huffman and Mrs. Werkheiser complained of impaired sight soon after the beginning of their illness. The trouble seems to be functional rather than organic, so that sufferers of this kind usually regain their sight, at least in a measure.
