—"Nails have doubled in price during the past few years," said the Democratic orator at the Farmers' picnic. Your dollar will buy only one-half as many nails as it did a short time ago," he continued. "True," interrupted the Wise Farmer, "but one-third as many eggs bring us a dollar now; so we buy more nails for the same number of eggs."

—The Democrats say the Payne bill increased the price of clothing 25 per cent, and then tell the farmer that the same bill decreased the price of wool. There is a screw loose somewhere in that reasoning. The truth is the woolen schedules of the Payne bill are precisely the same as in the Dingley bill so the tariff has had no effect on the fluctuations one way or the other.

—Simeon Brink, of Palmyra township, this county, was found dead in bed, by his wife, by her side, when she awakened last Thursday morning. He was a veteran of the civil war, having served as a private in Co. B, 151st Pennsylvania Volunteers, from Oct. 18, 1862, to July 27, 1863. —It will be remembered that Dr. Harry C. Many, of Tyler Hill, contracted a severe case of blood poisoning last spring, by being innoculated while treating a case of that disease whereby he lost the index finger, to the second joint, on the right hand. It is healing as fast as can be expected and the doctor expects no further trouble from it.

—Dr. E. W. Downton, of Starrucca, met with an accident in Binghamton last week. His big Pierce Arrow car, in which he and some friends were touring, came in collision with the curbing on Main street. The big car was being driven north on Oak street from Riverside Drive to Main, and just in front of it was a small runabout, also running in the same direction. Approaching Main street Downton took for granted that the small car was going to turn into Main street, and he took to the left or wrong side of the street to pass to the left of the smaller car on the turn. After passing it he found that the runabout was going straight north on Oak street, and he was forced to make a wide circle to avoid a collision. The left front wheel of his car hit the curbing at an angle which prevented the wheel from mounting the curb, and the force of the blow at so acute an angle was sufficient to break the spokes of the wheel at the hub. The heavy tire and rim, both undamaged, dropped to the ground and the hub, with the remains of several of the spokes plowed into the grass several inches. The occupants of the car were uninjured and after a new wheel was secured the car was run with its own power to the Arlington garage, where it will remain for repairs.

Sad Accident.

Tunkhannock, Pa., Oct. 24.—A most distressing accident occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Koons, North Tunkhannock, on Sunday afternoon last, when their little daughter, Mabel Melissa, aged a little over three years, was burned so badly that she died within about three hours.

The father works in Wilkes-Barre and so was absent from home. It is said that the mother went out after chestnuts that afternoon, leaving the four children at home alone. It is supposed that they got matches, and in lighting them Mabel's dress was set on fire. She ran blazing into the back yard, where Lee B. Rosegrant, a neighbor, saw her and ran over and wrapped a carpet about her, smothering the flames. The child's clothing was almost entirely burned off, however, and her flesh was cooked from head to foot. She remained conscious up until about the time of her death, suffering greatly.

Mail Order Divorce.

Towanda, Oct. 24.—George Sweet, of Sugar Run, near Towanda, who got a wife by advertising for one, today got a divorce from her. Without having seen his bride, he wooed her by correspondence for eight years, and then married her on June 17, 1908, twenty-four hours after the two met for the first time. Four days later Sweet's wife left him, saying she was going to Cleveland to see about her estate. Later he received a letter saying that she had gone to Canada and he would never see her again.

Among the replies that Sweet got to an advertisement in a matrimonial paper was one from a girl in Winchester, Ky., and it was this girl that after eight years of correspondence he finally married.

It was of the self-playing variety and as soon as it tuned up Layman pulled a small package from his pocket and emptied the contents into his mouth. Medical aid was summoned, but in about an hour Layman died. To several persons during the day he said that they would never see him again, but they only laughed at him. When he left his home in the evening he said that he would never again close the gate. Just before he died he said that it was the death of his sister that had led him to commit the deed.

AMUSEMENTS.

In "The Bachelor" Mr. Fitch is said to have done the best work of his life. The Shuberts have given the piece an excellent setting and are sending it to the coast as one of their early "open door" attractions with the original Maxine Elliott theatre cast and production. The piece has not been seen out of New York, where it was first produced last spring and in Chicago, where it ran during the past summer. The story begins when the bachelor, who thinks committing matrimony is one of the eight deadly sins, is beginning to take notice of the winsomeness of his pretty blonde stenographer. He has taken her to the matinee several times and indulged her in an occasional luncheon, but there his attentions have discreetly stopped. The strange part of it all is, that the bachelor, who is a Wall street broker, does not realize his love for the girl until her young brother, believing that he must protect his sister against "the perils of a great city," and moreover the attentions of a handsome broker, informs him that he must either propose to his sister or suffer the consequences. The scene, of course, is entirely ridiculous but the bachelor, realizing that some may think he has comprised the girl, decides to propose. The stenographer in the meantime learns the part her brother has had in the affair and although deeply in love with the bachelor calls the engagement off. Mr. Paul Gilmore will appear here in Sam S. and Lee Shubert's original New York production of Clyde Fitch's comedy, "The Bachelor," Wednesday, Oct. 26.

The injured man was carried to a nearby house as quickly as possible and Dr. Steele of Monquap Valley called.
