DIAZ TAKES OATH

Soldiers and Secret Police at Inauguration.

FEARED A DEMONSTRATION.

In Order to Keep the Crowd Small the Services at the Last Moment Were Transferred to the School of Mines Building.

City of Mexico, Dec. 1.—President Diaz and Vice President Corral were inaugurated today. The ceremonies took place in the School of Mines building instead of the new chamber of deputies, as previously had been arranged. The excuse given was that the new building is not ready for use, but it is whispered about that the change was made to keep a crowd away from the place where the inaugural ceremonies were held. The School of Mines has not one-fifth the capacity of the new building.

All the members of the cabinet and high government officials and diplomats were present. No one else except those holding special invitations, and those were few, attended. The streets were lined with a double row of soldiers.

Diaz and Corral appeared before the speaker of the house of deputies and promised in simple language to conduct the affairs of the country for the next six years as they have done the last six.

The speaker then said: "If you do, the nation will reward you. If you do not, the nation will hold you responsible."

Many hundred secret police were sworn in as deputies for the inauguration ceremonies.

Chuviscar, a town near Chihuahua, is held by the rebels. The mayor of the place, who escaped to Chihuahua, says all officers of the town joined the rebels when the place was attacked. It is difficult to obtain news as to the conditions in the northern section of the country.

NOT GUILTY, SAYS GALLAGHER

Will Be Tried Late Next Year For Shooting Mayor Gaynor.

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 1.—James J. Gallagher, the former employee of the dock department who shot Mayor Gaynor Aug. 9, was arraigned before Judge John A. Blair in the court of common pleas and pleaded not guilty to two indictments, one for assault with intent to kill Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards and the other for carrying concealed weapons. The indictment for shooting Mayor Gaynor, which is for assault with intent to kill, was not pressed by Public Prosecutor Garven of Hudson county for the reason that a charge of murder can be brought against a prisoner under the New Jersey laws a year and a day from the date of assault.

If Mayor Gaynor should die before Aug. 10, 1911, Gallagher could be indicted on a charge of murder in the first degree. The prosecutor prefers to hold the prisoner until that time before trying him on the charge of assault with intent to kill the mayor.

GREAT PUGILIST DEAD.

Jem Mace, Who Made $1,000,000 in the Ring, Dies Poor.

London, Dec. 1.—Jem Mace, the hero of many prizefights, died at Jarroventyne of old age. He was in his seventy-ninth year.

Mace was at one time worth more than $1,000,000, but of recent years he had been dependent upon the assistance of friends. Occasionally he had appeared in music hall exhibitions.

Jem Mace was one of the greatest fighters in the history of pugilism. He was noted even as a boy for his fighting powers, but was about twenty-five years old before he began his career as a professional fighter.

During his career Mace made a fortune of more than $1,000,000, but he lost this during the latter years of his life.

A Duke Loses Appendix.

London, Dec. 1.—The Duke of Manchester, whose wife is Helen, daughter of Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, has been operated on for appendicitis. His condition is dangerous.

COOK CONFESSES.

He Isn't Sure That He Reached the Pole.

SELLS STORY TO MAGAZINE.

Admits That Perhaps Privation Drove Him Mad and Made Him Believe That He Had Accomplished His Great Ambition.

New York, Dec. 1.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook has confessed.

This announcement is made by Benjamin Hampton, editor of the magazine that paid $50,000 for Commander Peary's story of his trip to the north pole.

In his "Own Story," the first installment of which will appear in the January number of the magazine, Dr. Cook frankly admits that he does not know whether he reached the north pole or not.

In the opening article, dealing particularly with the psychology of his adventure, the man who has been alternately lauded as the greatest explorer and denounced as the most colossal faker of the age declares:

"Did I get to the north pole? Perhaps I made a mistake in thinking I did. Perhaps I did not make a mistake. After mature thought I confess that I do not know absolutely whether I reached the pole or not. This may come as an amazing statement, but I am willing to startle the world if by so doing I can get an opportunity to present my case. By my case I mean not my case as a geographical discoverer, but my case as a man. Much as the attainment of the north pole once meant to me, the sympathy and confidence of my fellow men means more.

"Fully, freely and frankly I shall tell everything and leave the decision with you. If, after reading my story, you say, 'Cook is sincere and honest; half crazed by months of isolation and hunger he believed that he reached the pole; he is not a faker'—then I shall be satisfied."

Dr. Cook tells his life story and pictures the overpowering ambition for exploration that beset him until finally it culminated in his effort to reach the pole. He declares that at the time he convinced himself that he had discovered the pole he was half mad.

Cook declares that it would be impossible for any man to demonstrate that he had been to the north pole. He characterizes the far north as a region of insanity, "where one cannot believe the evidences gathered by one's own eyes."

He says he had always looked upon the discovery of the pole as an achievement for his own personal satisfaction—for the satisfaction of a craving and desire that was greater than any other factor in his life. When he found how tremendous a sensation his statement that he had attained the pole created he was overcome with bewilderment.

One of the facts brought out by his story is that in all the time he has been away, with the shrewdest newspaper men in the world on his trail, he has never worn a disguise and has never taken any unusual precaution to conceal his identity.

Part of the time his wife has been with him and part of the time his children too. The children are now in a retreat in France, and Dr. Cook and his wife are in Europe. Most of the time during his exile he has been in London.

With the opportunity for thought that his exile has given him—he says he never even had time to sleep more than three or four hours a night between his arrival in Copenhagen and his disappearance from New York—he was found growing stronger and stronger in the desire to return to his own country to be understood by his countrymen.

"I have been called the greatest liar in the world, the most monumental impostor in history," he says in starting his story. "I believe that in a very undesirable way I stand unique, the object of such vituperation and suspicion as have assailed few men."

Cook will return to the United States with his wife and children Dec. 22 in order to spend Christmas among his relatives.

WAS BAROGRAPH WRONG?

Drexel Will Protest Decision That He Didn't Fly Highest Up.

New York, Dec. 1.—At the request of J. Armstrong Drexel, the barograph used in his altitude flight made at Philadelphia will receive an expert reading. Mr. Drexel believes that he exceeded the record of 9,714 feet made by Ralph Johnstone and is not willing to accept the figures—9,540—accorded him in the expert reading made by the Schneider brothers.

A first test of the instrument made by Clifford B. Harmon and J. King Duffy, officials of the national council of the Aero Club of America, showed 8,970 feet.

For Silver Gray Fox, $800.

Temple, Me., Dec. 1.—Charles Huntington has received $800 for the skin of a silver gray fox he caught in one of his traps the first of this week. With the money the trapper paid off the mortgage on the house, bought delicacies for his sick wife and still there is money in the house.

FALLS 3 STORIES IN SLEEP.

Girl Lands on Grass Plot None the Worse For Accident.

New York, Dec. 1.—Fortunately for Harriet Johnston, a fourteen-year-old servant, who in her sleep walked out of a third story window in the home of her employer, Major Richard Watt, the custom prevails of having grass plots in front of residences on that thoroughfare.

There is a particularly large grass plot in front of the Watt residence, and the soil has been materially softened by the rain.

The young woman struck in the center of the plot of soft earth and landed on her feet. Then she tumbled down and awoke with a start, none the worse for her fall.

TRIES TO KILL SICK GIRL.

Sweetheart Then Shoots Himself After Being Barred From Kissing Her.

Buffalo, Dec. 1.—Leo Gerowski, twenty-three years old, madly infatuated with Helen Furman, fifteen, tried to kill the child as she lay dangerously ill of pleurisy in her mother's home.

He had entered the room and tried to kiss her, and she shoved him away. He then drew a pistol and fired four shots. One grazed the child's temple. The last shot in the gun he sent into his own temple, and he will die. The girl will recover.

A BIG JOB FOR GUMMERE?

New Jersey Man Reported as Taft's Selection For Chief Justice.

Washington, Dec. 1.—William S. Gummere of New Jersey for chief justice of the supreme court of the United States.

W. D. McHugh of Omaha, John C. Pollock of Kansas or George Sutherland of Utah for associate justice.

Fred W. Lehmann of St. Louis for solicitor general.

This is the judicial slate President Taft will send to the senate for confirmation soon after that body convenes next Monday, according to an official close to President Taft.

William S. Gummere is chief justice of the supreme court of New Jersey. He is fifty-eight years old. He has lived the greater part of his life in Newark, where he practiced law before receiving his appointment to the New Jersey bench.

Slide Down Pipe to Escape Death.

New York, Dec. 1.—When flames shot through the garage and automobile repair shop of Charles Barfy & Son eight or ten workmen had to run for their lives. They slid down the water pipe of the building forty feet to the ground through smoke and flame and escaped. But most of them were almost overcome when they reached the bottom.

Edward on the Racetrack.

Derby Day, 1863, the clouds opened and poured down rain in pools, but rain or no rain a great crowd was there cheering to the echo the Prince of Wales (afterward King Edward) when Macaroni beat Lord Clinton a short head. This sealed the Prince's popularity with the masses. Tip maintains there are men who can look at a pedigreed horse and say if such can run the distance and carry the weight, but such men are few. Baron de Hirsch bought La Fleche because the Prince said she was all to the good, and the price, about $27,500, at that time the highest ever paid for a yearling, was not too high, for La Fleche won the Thousand Guineas, Oaks and St. Leger and something like $150,000 all told in stakes.—Tip, in the New York Press.

Drummers in Pairs.

"Yonder comes another pair of 'em," said the hotel clerk, nodding toward two drummers entering the lobby. "It's getting to be a great act among traveling men of late to move over the country in pairs. Those two fellows there always come together. They're in entirely different lines of business, too. They claim they can save money by traveling together not only on their hotel bills but in other ways, and that the scheme has divers and sundry other advantages."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
