GOOD EVENING!

(In The City.)
When we left our hotel to go down to business, Tuesday morning, the thermometer registered sixteen degrees above zero. "Old Sol" however was out in all his glory, and did his level best to make it an ideal winter morning.

"He's a good fellow. He gives a cheerful 'Good Morning' to you. That's the kind of a man that makes friends." We quite agreed with the gentleman who remarked this to us, in the course of conversation on a D. & H. train last Sunday.

Then there's another kind of a man. "He's no good to the town. He's all for himself."

Dear Reader, to which class do you belong?

GOOD MORNING!

(On The Farm.)
"Oh, Ma!" cried Mary breathlessly, running in to kiss her mother after a shopping trip to Honesdale with her father, checks all aglow with pleasure and excitement. "Oh, Ma!" I got the dearest set of real mink furs. Do look at them. Aren't they too nice for anything?"

"Yes, Mary," answered her mother. "My, they must have cost a lot of money! I never had such things when I was a girl," sighed her mother. "Your Pa must have been in awfully good humor to get you such a lovely set."

"Yes, Ma, and he is just the dearest and best Pa on earth. Furs are cheaper too after Christmas. I wouldn't dare tell you how much they cost."

"Now you need a fur hat for every day, Mary. Your big hat will do for Sundays. Run along, dear, and give your Pa a good old-fashioned hug."

"I will, Mother dear!"

MIXED METAPHORS.

When our esteemed down-the-avenue contemporary accuses us of "espousing the cause of a new fake religion," we think that he errs in several important particulars.

First. We espoused the cause of no religion, but merely endeavored to correct certain misstatements made by our esteemed contemporary.

Secondly. We question very much whether it can properly be called a "new" religion, since its principles are taken from a volume thousands of years old.

Thirdly. If we judge a tree by its fruits, and estimate a cause by the number of adherents it secures, and the power and influence of its followers, we do not see how the term "fake" can properly be applied to it.

VOTE TRAFFICKING.

By the indictment and punishment of hundreds of voters in Adams County, Ohio, the question of whether it is right or wrong to traffic in votes has been revived. According to the newspaper reports, this business has been carried on openly and without rebuke in that section, for many years.

The buying and selling of votes has not always been contrary to law in this country. Statutory prohibition and penalties are indeed of modern origin. It used to depend upon the individual conscience, or upon the sentiment and opinion of the community, whether it should be condemned or tolerated.

The ballot has been looked upon in enlightened communities, for many years, as a sacred trust, as something to be held aloof from the slightest taint of commercialism. And so the public press of the country has treated the Adams county revelations with amused surprise, mingled with contempt and disgust.

And yet those people, who were found out in their questionable practices, were no worse than their forbears. It would appear that the people in that region had the habit of trafficking in votes. Both parties indulged in it. There even seems to have been a religious sanction thrown about it as it is said church elders and even the clergy sold their votes.

This lamentable state of affairs could only have been possible in a backward and isolated community. These good people had proper views upon most matters, but it would seem as though in this particular matter, their consciences were not awakened.

The Court, in administering salutary and condign punishment, has made it impossible for those people ever again to plead ignorance of the civil or the moral laws involved. As it was, the penalty of five years' disfranchisement was quite severe enough. The people of Adams county have learned a sad lesson. They learned it well. And it may safely be taken for granted that never again will such flagrant and wholesale bartering of votes occur in Adams county, Ohio.

"The voteman dance and the voteman sing.
The voteman he do everything;
And when the voteman comes on shore
He spends his money and he votes for more."

Let us sincerely hope that no one of the thousands of "votemen" in Wayne county may be forced to confess that the best use of a vote is to sell it to the highest bidder. The temptation will be very great in the forthcoming campaign, but it is to be hoped that the prospect of being boarded at the county's expense as a consequence of yielding to the wiles of the tempter, may have a deterrent effect.

HARRISBURG LETTER.
Capitol Statuary Becoming Draped—Uneasiness About Governor Tener's Appointments—Stuart A Popular Governor—Always Kept His Promises—Capital Chat.

January 7, 1911.—For several days past a gang of marble setters, under the direction of Picarelli Brothers, of New York City, have been engaged in placing on the pedestals in front of the State Capitol, the sculptured masterpieces executed by George Gray Barnard, under a commission from the Capitol Building Commission. You can always find a curious crowd watching the performance, making criticisms, giving advice and exchanging opinions.

So far only one or two pieces are in place and the hope that all would be ready by the time Governor Tener is inaugurated will probably not be realized, for the work progresses very slowly. The pieces must be handled with the greatest care so as to avoid all danger of breaking or chipping, and must be set exactly right.

The expression, curious crowd, was used advisedly. While only a few persons have been given a glimpse at the statuary, which still reposes in the rough boxes, made of two-inch plank, somehow there has crept into the minds of many thoughtful persons an idea that these masterpieces, viewed as they will be by everybody who comes to the Capitol, for business or for pleasure, ought to be becomingly draped. It was generally supposed they would be, but they are not. And now protests are being made to the Commission, urging a covering if the figures are erected according to the present plan, while art lovers are insisting that the statuary be put in place just as it is, as the artist meant it should be. Some of the local papers have opened their columns for an interchange of opinions, but the question is agitating the State and art students all over the country are watching the outcome.

Concerning the statuary itself, there is no difference of opinion. Competent judges aver that no finer examples of heroic work have been done since the days of Michelangelo, and the fame of Barnard as a sculptor has been established for all time. It is recalled, with pride and pleasure, that he is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born in Centre county. He is in this country at present and will remain until the groups are in place. It is likely that the Legislature will make an appropriation to reimburse the gentlemen who financed Barnard, for, like all great artists, he has not the business faculty well developed.

As indicated in a previous letter, the Senate chose Hon. W. E. Crow as its President pro tem, and the House of Representatives elected Hon. John F. Cox to again preside as Speaker. These are good officers and the business of the session will move along smoothly and promptly under their guidance. U. S. Senator Oliver was also re-nominated and will be chosen for the full term of six years next week. These preliminaries out of the way and Governor Tener inaugurated on the 11th, things in the law-making branch will settle down to business.

There exists more or less uneasiness about the Hill with respect to the attitude of the new Governor with respect to appointments. He has named Walter Gaither as his Private Secretary and Samuel Todd as his Executive Comptroller, but has not indicated his wishes on any other offices. He desires that Dr. Dixon retain the office of Commissioner of Health, though the Dr. has not given a decisive answer. Gossip has been busy concerning the Attorney General's office, and several gentlemen have been suggested. Sheriff Joseph Gillilan, Geo. S. Graham, Alex. Simpson and P. S. Brown, all of Philadelphia, are mentioned. Also Senator John S. Fisher of Indiana county, Judge Taylor of Washington county and District Attorney Blakeley of Allegheny county.

It is said that the State Highway Department will be given a new head, though Mr. Hunter will be retained in the office, by reason of his knowledge and experience. Extensive work in the direction of good roads will be undertaken in the near future.

Governor Stuart goes out of office a more popular official than most of his predecessors. He has given the people of the state an excellent business administration, has corrected a number of abuses, put some splendid laws on the statute books and has religiously kept every promise he made while a candidate and at the beginning of his term. He will be glad to turn over the reins of government to his successor on the 17th.

NECROLOGY.

Death of William Ellison.
William Ellison died of dropsy at his home in White Mills, Sunday, January 4, of tuberculosis. He married a daughter of Rev. McDermott, who was pastor of the Methodist church at one time. Mr. Oliver moved to St. Louis, and was principal of the High school. His illness compelled him to resign his position. He spent his last days at his father's home at Beach Lake. The funeral was held Saturday. The body was placed in the vault at the Glen Derry cemetery. Mr. Oliver was a man loved and respected by all who knew him and an educator of unusual ability. His untimely death was a shock to his many friends who looked forward to a splendid future for him in his chosen profession. He is mourned by a large number of relatives and friends in this community.

Death of Mrs. Bayley.
Miss Mehitabel Ann Bayley died at the Bayley homestead at Elk Lake, Clinton township, Wayne county, Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock after a brief illness of pneumonia. The deceased was the daughter of the late William and Mary Ann Bayley, who came from Massachusetts and settled in Clinton in 1814, being among the first settlers of that township. She was born February 16, 1834, being, therefore, in her seventy-seventh year. Her girlhood days were passed on the farm, after which she lived for a number of years in the Southern and New England states, or until the failing health of her mother compelled her to return home, and after her mother's death in 1890 Miss Bayley continued to reside on the homestead with her brother, Charles W. Bayley. Being a devoted Christian woman she early in life united with the Episcopal church, of which she had been a communicant for nearly fifty years, being at the time of her death a member of Trinity Episcopal church, Carbondale. Her many acts of kindness, her purity of character and her charitable deeds will long linger in the memory of those she held so near and dear. Surviving her are two sisters, Mrs. Hattie H. Marshall, of Newburyport, Mass., and Mrs. Mary J. Newman, Berkeley, Cal.; three brothers, John M. Bayley, Gibbon, Neb.; S. N. Bayley, Carbondale and Charles W. Bayley, at home. Funeral services were held from her home Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, being conducted by the Rev. A. L. Whitaker, rector of Grace Episcopal church, Honesdale. Interment was made in the family plot at the homestead.

Death of William Penwarden.
William Penwarden, one of Wayne county's most prominent men, passed away Sunday, January 8, at his home in Carley Brook at the age of 87. He was born in Devonshire, England, September 23, 1823, and came to this country with his parents when a child of seven. He was educated in the schools of Berlin township and began his business career at an early age, working as a farm hand for $13.00 per month; afterwards he took charge of the Bunnell saw mill and for nine years he proved himself to be an honest, faithful workman, although receiving but 56 cents a day for his services. In 1856 he entered into partnership with his employer, Henry Bunnell, and purchased a large tract of wood land in Berlin township upon which he erected a sawmill. After operating the same for some time he purchased his partner's interest for $20,000 and for years his output of sawed lumber annually was close to 2,000,000 feet. He acquired other tracts of lumber until he became the largest lumberman in Wayne county.

He also purchased from B. F. Fralley the large wood working factory at East Honesdale which business he has conducted for years under the superintendency of his brother, Richard, giving employment to a number of men.

Mr. Penwarden was married Feb. 26, 1854, to Miss Olive De Pen. They have been blessed with a large family—Leroy, Charles L., Levi, Edvanna, now Mrs. Frederick Bryant, Richard, Willis and Elmer Darwin, all of whom survive him. Mr. Penwarden was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church and has been generous in extending a helpful hand to all the institutions of that church. Mr. Penwarden was a wonderful example of what persistent, honest endeavor can accomplish in life. Starting at the bottom of the ladder with nothing but his own labor as his capital, he, by perseverance and honest application to his work, has forged ahead until he became one of the wealthiest men in this section of the state. He was a model husband, a most excellent father and a kind neighbor and leaves a record of citizenship, clean and unimpaired. His funeral will take place on Friday, notice of which will appear in a later issue.

BERMUDA TOURS

Work now as you have never worked before and win a prize that will always remain in your memory as long as there is life.

These special ballots will be issued in addition to the prevailing scale of votes, and it should be remembered that the scale during this period is 50 per cent. in excess of the regular scale. If you are at the bottom of the list get busy and win one of these ballots and go to the top. If you are among the leaders capture one of these ballots and "Clinch" the Companionship Tour. The winners of these ballots will not be announced until the last week of the contest, but will be mailed direct to the lucky candidate.

You must realize by this time that the vote is growing smaller as each week passes. Last week more votes were given for a single subscription than ever before. As each period closes you must work that much harder to secure as many votes as you did at first. While at first glance this offer may seem large, yet it is not near as easy as the opportunity offer of a couple of weeks ago. On the other hand there are forty large ballots to be awarded this week. Will you get the first or the last? It's up to you. The Tour manager will write which ever one you show you want. These ballots will be awarded regardless of district.

"Does money turned in on new subscriptions toward the 50,000 bonus votes also apply on the 400,000 ballot competition?"
Such were the substance of questions put to the tour manager yesterday. The answer is yes, and every candidate should secure every possible new subscription this week and also collect up on every available old subscription.

The winning of one of the big competition ballots and the securing of a number of the new business ballots for 50,000 votes each, means much toward victory on January 30. Just think of a 400,000 ballot, and you get it all for one week's work. This is the opportunity for the "weaker" candidates to make a big killing just this one week.

Some say that they are working hard and they are proving what they say by the number they are turning in. They are taking advantage of the six days' new business and competitive offers.
Now, what these cheerful candidates can do can be done just as well by those who are crying that their work is over for lack of field to work in. If others can get subscriptions why can't you? Don't let other candidates get the advantage of you by the simple method of "try, try again"—especially during this week.

The Bermuda Tours and Prizes in this contest are meant for you. Win it. A contest is an enterprise for those in it to work—not part of the time—but from the start until the close.

Are You PLANNING for To-morrow?

No man ever accumulates a fortune unless he has the habit of making sacrifices today in order that he may have something to work with to-morrow.

The small amount that you are able to save every week may appear very small, but in time systematic saving, with the aid of 3 per cent. compound interest, will give you some substantial capital as a basis for investment or to live on when you can no longer work and earn.

A Question for Candidates.
A question for all candidates to ask themselves at the close of each day is: "Did I do all that was possible to gain votes to-day?"
If you cannot honestly answer in the affirmative then you are not doing well enough and you should decide firmly to improve to-morrow.

Some newspaper contests which have been conducted in this part of the country have been arranged so that contestants with money had the advantage over those who depended upon hard work to win the prize. For instance, in one contest votes have counted double during the last week of the contest. This easily made it possible for a candidate who had money to spend it during the last day and smother the candidate who had been working hard throughout the contest.

In order that nothing of this sort may happen in THE CITIZEN'S contest it is hereby announced that no bonus votes or special inducements of any kind will be allowed during the last few days of the contest. There will positively be no deviation from this announcement.

The Citizen Publishing Company wants the candidates who have worked to win the tours and prizes, and this announcement is made with the idea of taking the affair out of the hands of the candidates who may wish to spend their own money.

Candidates should look over their "yellow slips" before sending them in to make sure that every name and address is complete. When writing about a subscriber or ordering a change of address, be sure to give the complete name and address as well as the number. A little care given to these details saves much time and trouble and permits us to give them our immediate attention.

Voting Rules.
No more than 5,000 subscription votes can be voted per week, above the leader in the district until Jan. 23, after which date there will be no limit or restrictions on the number of votes candidates may vote each day.

The coupon printed in each issue of THE CITIZEN is redeemed to-day to 5 votes.
The tour manager reserves the right to discontinue printing the coupons at any time during the contest.

Simple Interest Rules.
Seven per cent.—Compute the interest for six per cent. and add one-sixth.
