SPIRITS FOR COOK

They Say He Was Nearch Pole Than Peary.

HAVE SIR JOHN'S WORD FOR T

Arctic Explorer Who Died In 1847 In sists That He Traveled With the Doctor Until the Last Day, Then Quit Him.

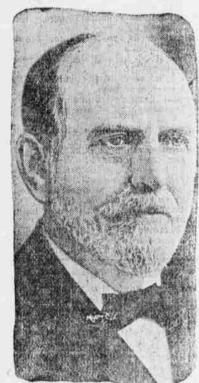

Washington, Jan. 18 .- According to the testimony of prominent disembadied spirits, neither Dr. Cook nor Commander Peary reached the north pole. but Cook got nearer to the goal than Peary.

This somewhat astonishing state ment is contained in a letter from Wil Mam T. Stead of the Review of Iteviews of London to Arthur Rollinson Colburn, a lawyer, of this city and forwarded by Mr. Colburn to Representative Roberts of Massachusetts. member of the house committee on no val affairs, who has been outspoken in his opposition to the proposition that congress reward Peary for his artiexplorations.

In Mr. Stead's letter to Mr. Collins

"With regard to the pole control versy, the only message which w have received on the subject was on from Sir John Franklin last year. 11 did not say anything about Peary, but said he had personally conducted Conmearly to the pole and then left him to complete the journey himself. Mr. Colburn believes the stranges feature about the communication from Mr. Stead is the statement that who near the pole the spirit of Sir John Franklin, the arctic explorer, who died in 1847, left Dr. Cook to finish the journey alone.

"With a friend of mine, the pasties of a corporation here in Wasnington I visited a physician of great psychi power. He received through his ow hand the signatures, correctly, of proably fifty friends of the doctor including one of whom my friend had never heard.

"Then Sir John Franklin, in his own proper handwriting, gave an extended message on the subject of the pola controversy. Giving it from memory as best I can, it was that be, Sir John was the inspirer and sustainer of Cool in his quest; that the cold was so in tense that the breath would free upon the instruments, welding or i terfering with their working parts and rendering them useless.

"That the effect of the cold on th mind was to render it dreamy and un able to think in a normal way, or ! make observations; that the monoton mirages, hardships and exposure man everything around seem unreal an fantastic and that any observation made under such eireumstances we valueless and that reliable eviden tould not be obtained. My friend of not know the handwriting of Sir John but on comparison it was found sails factory."

Mr. Colburn concludes his letter by stating that:

"Lieutenant Booth Lockwood ba communicated with us at our home through great trance mediums and sustains Cook as against Peary."

Representative Roberts is mucl cheered up as a result of these com munications from the spirit world.

Three days out from Bocas del Toro and not far from the entrance to the South pass, at the mouth of the Mississippi, he was awakened early in the morning of Jan. 13 by feeling the prow of his ship strike something soft that resisted the progress of the ship. He rushed on deck and saw a huge whale. which he estimates as seventy-five feet long, backing away from the forward quarter of the Mount Vernon. Blood was streaming from the monster's

A hundred yards or so from the ship the whale stopped, threshed the sea with its tail and then drove straight at the boat. The massive head struck just below the point where the frightened skipper stood. The force of the blow was tremendous. The heavy steel plates buckled. Falsen was thrown to the deck.

But naturally it was the whale that suffered most. With the rebound of the blow he was hurled back. His crushed head upreared for a moment and the body sank out of sight.

Good Form

Hostesses at dinner must put guests of honor at the right of themselves and the bosts even if the usual sitting places are changed to suit the occasion. When a married weman en-tertains at dinner she puts at her right the husband of the woman whom they so wish to honor, and the wife must be at the right of the host. To place the guests of honor in any other position is to deprive them entirely of the distinction intended.

With a round table the matter of eating guests becomes simple, for there is no head and no foot, and the desired position arranges itself without change. Frequently the hostess does not have a seat directly opposite to the host, but in a circle this is not conspicuous

With an ovel or square table and eight guests the arrangement becomes complicated. Three persons on a side means that the hostess must abandon her usual place or she will have two women together and two men, than which nothing could show greater ignorance. There is nothing for the hostess then to do but to change her position, leaving her husband in that which he always occupies.

The woman guest of honor then goes at his right, and, if possible, the husband is put at the right of the hostess on the side of the table. When all the guests are married couples even the husband of the honor guest cannot be at the hostess' right, though she has abandoned her regular seat.

An English Custom.

The very sensible English custom of mentioning the date of departure in writing invitations for visits has become almost universal in this country the exception being in the homesteads south of Mason and Dixon's line. There a friend or relation is asked to come and stay as long as convenient, and the stay sometimes stretches over months or years. There are always relations who are disposed to overlook any little discomfort that such a visit brings as well as the positive inconvenience they may be causing their hosts, and such is the courtesy of the people of this part of the country that the visit only ends at the visitor's will. Instances could even be given in which the visits of poor relations or friends have lasted the rest of their lives, the greatest courtesy and consideration being shown to them by host and hostess even where they became helpless in

At the Dance.

A woman waits to be sought by her partner. When the music for the dance which she has promised him strikes up should be fail to seek her out she may expect an apology and plausible explanation for his delinquency.

If a man is doing duty as an escort on coming from the cloakroom he awaits his companion's appearance ward Thaw, brother of Harry Thaw. somewhere outside the ballroom door, The bride is a daughter of Professor at the head or the foot of the stairway or in the hall, having agreed with her beforehand just where they are to

Before he fills his dance program with other names he asks a dance or two of the woman in his charge. He also holds himself in readiness to accompany her to the supper room if he sees that no one offers to serve as escort in that capacity.

On Letter Writing.

The girl who has a correspondence of about half a dezen or so of her schoolmates has formulated the following rules concerning her letter writing, to which she adheres:

Write name and address legibly and correctly on each envelope. Write your own name and address in

Place on each the correct amount of postage.

Before sealing see that in each envelope you have inclosed the correct

Keep as close a duplicate of every letter as it is possible to do. Never write personalities.

Clever Idea.

A girl who has just returned from a long visit, during which she collected a number of spoons which are souvenirs of the various places visited, recently made them the key to a table talk at a little luncheon. Beside each plate were two spoons bearing pictures or seals of various cities, and during the luncheon the guests were asked to tell some interesting fact about that partieular city. All the guests declared that it was not only a unique method of directing the conversation, but the means of making the occasion most in-

Hint For Speechmaking.

The frequent reason of failure in so called impromptu speeches at wedding breakfasts is the fact that the speaker is not brief in what he says. It is far better to utter only a few sentences, stopping whi v the others would have n person go en than to occupy much to each other were they given the opportunity. Then, too, if there are other speakers to follow the evening grows boresome if all talk for many minutes.

Congressman James A. Tawney of Minnesota.

@ 1910, by American Press Association

Congressman James A. Tawney of Minnesota, most prominent of the standpatters who fell by the way side last fall, may enter President Taft's cabinet after March 4. Rumor first selected Mr. Tawney for the Panama canal commission, but later asserted that he would succeed Sec retary Ballinger when congress ad journs. Friends are working in his behalf and assert there is no doubt of his fitness and that the appointment would be popular.

Twice chairman of the house com mittee on appropriations, Mr. Tawney for many years has been a prominent figure in congress and in national pol-Itics. Nine successive times he was the choice of his constituents in the First district of Minnesota, then he was defeated in the primaries for renomination. This reversal of the opinion of the voters was due to insurgency. Mr. Tawney was criticised for his ac tion on the Aldrich-Payne bill. for his support of Speaker Cannon and for his stand pat attitude generally.

Congressman Tawney is a native of Pennsylvania and learned the blacksmith's trade in the shop of his father. In 1877 he removed to Winona, Minn. and worked at his trade until admitted to the bar in 1882. He was elect ed to the Minnesota state senate in 1890 and the following year began his congressional career.

Commander Sims of the Navy. Commander William Sowden Sims of the United States ship Minnesota, whose speech at the recent dinner to the American navy in London has been the subject of international correspond ence, was for several years naval aid to President Roosevelt.

The banquet at which the speech was delivered was given in honor of fleet in the English channel and was one of the functions which marked the visit of the vessels to English and French ports. Replying to the welcoming speech of the lord mayor of London, Commander Sims, according to the press dispatches, said that, speaking for himself, he believed that if the time ever came when the British empire was menaced by an external en emy they might count on every man,

In addition to the regular sea duty, he served for several years as naval attache in Russia and in France. In recognition of his work as inspector of target practice President Roosevelt assigned him to command the Minnesota, Commander Sims thus becoming the first officer of his rank to have time in which guests might be talking charge of a first class battleship. In a letter of commendation the president said that Sims was largely instrumen tal in building up a system of gunnery that had "enormously increased our ef ficiency as a sea nower."

Wasted on Him.

"Occasionally," remarked the visiting Londoner, "I see in some American pa per a supposititious colloquy referring to an aeroplane line to Mars. Do you know, that strikes me as being exceed ingly funny. Evidently the writer is ignorant of the fact that our atmosphere does not extend upward more than fifty or a hundred miles and becomes more and more tenuous as it nears the limit. He does not seem to know that the air is absolutely necessary in flying an aeroplane. It is high ly probable that no aviator ever wil ascend to a higher elevation than ten or fifteen miles even if he can endure the excessive cold he will encounter as that altitude. The idea of sailing an aeroplane through the imponderable ether is ineffably absurd." - Chicago

Scottish Names.

No country has experienced the diffi culty arising from the commonness of one surname in a district more intensely than Scotland. With a whole countryside populated by Campbells, Frasers or Gordons, some more distinguishing nomenclature had to be found. And no doubt this was the chief reason why at one time men were always known by the name of their estate or farm. Dean Ramsay remembered an old cowherd who was always known as Boggy. His real name was Sandy Anderson, but he had once owned a wretched farm called Boggendreep, and he was Boggy to the day of his death.

At the Top.

"I take a good deal of pride in my cousin Hector," said Mrs. Lapsling. 'He paid his own way through the medical college, got his diploma, and now he is a full fledged disciple of Oscalapius."—Chicago Tribune.
