James Pratt, Clemo, was a caller in town the first of the week.

There will be no legislative recess this month or any other month dur-ing this session, the plans for an intermission between February 16 and 27 having been abandoned Tuesday after Senate and House leaders had seen the Governor. The Governor has all along been opposed to any recess, contending that the Legisla-ture should stay here and work. Legislators contended they should have time to digest bills. To-day after Chairman James F. Woodward, of the House compositions com of the House appropriations committee, had seen Governor Tener he said there would be no recess.

Later on Senators McNichol, Keyser and Wolf called on the Governor but found him firm in his opinion that there should be no recess. The mat-ter was gone over at length, but the Senators gave up trying to win the Governor over to their side and the word went around about noon that there would be no recess.
