

ARMY TO MEXICO.

Force of 20,000 Men Being Rushed to Border.

ONLY WAR GAME, SAY OFFICIALS

British Demands For Protection From Insurrectos In Chihuahua Given as Reason by Outsiders to Protect Americans.

Washington, March 8.—An army of approximately 20,000 men, representing all branches of the service, is mobilizing along the Mexican border of the United States. It is officially stated—and the administration made special efforts to substantiate the statement—that the sole purpose of this unusual mobilization was maneuvers on a grand scale for the training of officers and men.

While every effort was made in official circles here to give this great movement the appearance of a simple preparation for maneuvers, there were persistent rumors that the government was preparing for more serious trouble.

Confidential reports from Mexico of late have encouraged the belief of many that conditions in the Mexican government are far from being as satisfactory as official assertions seek to indicate. Immense foreign interests are at stake in Chihuahua, for example, and their owners have been very uneasy as to what would happen to them in case of widespread disorders.

There was a report in Washington that urgent representations had been made to the state department that unless the United States government immediately made adequate preparations to protect American and foreign interests in northern Mexico appeal would be made to Great Britain to do so.

The United States interests in Mexico have been estimated as high as $1,500,000,000, and the protection of these interests would alone account for the mobilizing of troops if the officials of this government were convinced that the Mexican government might not be able to cope with the situation. There is, however, another consideration which undoubtedly has influenced the president and the state department officials to make this formidable demonstration.

Great Britain also has extensive railroad and mining interests in Mexico. The Pearson syndicate, a large British constructing firm, has complained bitterly to that government of interference by insurrectos in Chihuahua. The company asked the British government to extend protection, which it has failed to receive from the government of Mexico.

The general impression in Washington is that the attitude of the British government has had a good deal to do with the sudden decision on the part of the war and navy department officials.

The troops at Galveston will be under the command of Brigadier General A. L. Mills. The troops in the Los Angeles district will be commanded by Brigadier General Tasker H. Bliss. Major General William H. Carter will command the provisional division.

When England Heard News.

London, March 8.—Newspapers here give great prominence to the cables announcing the mobilization of the American troops on the Mexican frontier and the rumored action of the British government in asking the United States to protect British interests in Mexico.

The report of the British government's action was received too late to be verified, but the Morning Post editorially says that this would be the natural result of the recent interpretation of the Monroe doctrine and its acceptance by the European powers.

It adds that should the United States see fit to send an army into Mexico it would hardly be within the power of the American government to limit the consequences of its intervention. It would in all probability open a fresh chapter in American history. The intervention in the Cuban disturbances gave fresh accentuation to the national policy of the United States and intervention in Mexico could hardly be less far reaching in its results.

PLEADS TO KILL HIS SON.

"He's Disgraced His Family," Says Father of Boy Charged With Larceny.

New York, March 8.—Israel Kaloties of Bayonne, N. J., stopped before the bar of Recorder Mara and, pointing his finger at his sixteen-year-old son, David, exclaimed, "Let me kill him, judge; he has brought disgrace upon his family and race."

David was charged with breaking open a quarter-inches slot gas meters. When arrested he gave his name as Patrick Murphy. He was held for further examination.

Prisoner Sets Jail Afire.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 8.—Sparks from his pipe setting fire to his cell while he slept in the village lock-up, Fred Lasher of Tivoli was nearly dead when rescued by Deputy Sheriff Arriner.

Italian Police Catch Murderer.

Rome, March 8.—The police of the village of Sonnino have arrested Agostino Desanctis, who has confessed to the murder of Constantino Rimondi last August at Austin, Pa.

GENERAL MILLS.

One of the Army Commanders on the Mexican Border.

SHEEHAN AS STRONG AS EVER

Caucus Nominee Still the Favorite in the Albany Contest.

Albany, N. Y., March 8.—The strength of William F. Sheehan, the Democratic caucus candidate for United States senator, was identically the same when the result of the last joint ballot was announced as it was during the several weeks before Governor Dix wrote his letter last Friday. Disappointment was evident as the balloting progressed and the Sheehan forces remained steadfast. It demonstrated more than ever the genuineness of the strength of Sheehan from a personal as well as from a party standpoint.

Some of the insurgents are saying that the Osbornes and members of the "kitchen cabinet" of Governor Dix who persuaded the governor to write the letter aimed at the elimination of Sheehan from the contest upon the pretense that it would disintegrate the Sheehan support really needed the Dix letter in order to permit them to head the present insurgent strength against Sheehan.

AN ACTRESS A LADY NOW.

Clara Taylor Becomes Bride of an English Lord.

London, March 8.—Mrs. Clara Elizabeth Taylor Stirling, formerly an American musical comedy actress, and Lord George Cholmondeley, second son of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, were married here.

The bride is the daughter of Charles Henry Taylor of Washington and at one time lived in Newark, N. J. Her first husband was John Alexander Stirling, lord of Kippendavie, by whom she was divorced in the spring of 1909, five years after their marriage. The suit was a sensational one, Mr. Stirling naming Lord Northland. A cross suit in which Mrs. Stirling named Mrs. Mabel Louise Atherton was dismissed, and the husband was awarded the custody of their child.

Lord Cholmondeley by his alliance loses a legacy of $15,000 which the late Lady Meux left him on condition that he married "a lady in society."

DOG HEIR TO $1,000 DIES.

Owner Had His Life Insured So Pet Would Be Provided For.

Pueblo, Colo., March 8.—Brown, a greyhound in whose favor a life insurance policy for $1,000 was recently taken out by its master, William Payne, is dead.

Dog and master were inseparable until two months ago, when the animal was seized with a strange malady. For fear something would happen to him and that the dog would not receive proper care Mr. Payne had his life insured for $1,000 in favor of the animal. Mr. Payne has ordered a gold mounted button photograph, which, he says, he will wear in memory of his dead companion.

ITALIAN COUNTS IN A DUEL.

Murder of Countess Triglona Is Cause of Personal Encounter.

Florence, March 8.—Count F. di Bruno and Count Bastoni fought a duel with swords in the garden of a secluded villa on the outskirts of the city as a result of revelations made by Count Bastoni concerning Lieutenant Paterno, who recently murdered the Countess Giulia Triglona di Sant'Elia and who was a close friend of Count di Bruno.

Bastoni was wounded in the scalp, whereupon the antagonists announced their honor was appeased, and the men kissed and embraced.

FIRST VETO BY DIX.

Governor Kills a Bill by an Insurgent Assemblyman.

Albany, N. Y., March 8.—Governor Dix exercised for the first time his veto power when he disapproved the bill of Assemblyman Miller, an insurgent, authorizing the Maple Grove Cemetery association of Worcester, Otsego county, to accept a gift or bequest of at least $1,000 in trust, to use the income for the care and improvement of a certain private burial lot.

The governor says the bill is unnecessary special legislation.

Packey McFarland In New York.

New York, March 8.—Packey McFarland has come east to begin training for his ten round go with Owen Moran at the Fairmont Athletic club next Tuesday night.

IN AN ICY SEWER.

Four-year-old Eddie Burrell Falls In Manhole.

HARBOR SERGEANT TO RESCUE

While Chasing a Puppy Child Plunges Into Dark Vault and Is Carried a Block and a Half Before Help Arrives.

New York, March 8.—When the doctor patted Eddie Burrell on his wet curls and said, "Now, kiddie, I guess we'll have you all right again soon," Eddie opened his eyes for just an instant and then resolutely closed them tight. For Eddie believed that dead people's eyes are shut, and he knew that he was dead.

How near to death he really had been this four-year-old youngster will probably be told when he grows up. He was for an hour and fifteen minutes in the black vault of the sewer under Eighty-sixth street with the freezing water lapping his chin and with the river mouth of the sewer less than a block away. Policemen searched the cavern only for his body. They found Eddie alive and with his face turned toward the light.

Eddie is the son of Edward Burrell and lives at 320 East Ninetieth street. Eddie's mother went to call on a friend and took Eddie along. They walked down East End avenue, Mrs. Burrell chatting with an acquaintance, whom she joined on the street. At East Eighty-sixth street and East End avenue a street cleaner had the cover of the manhole off, and he was pushing piles of slush into the mouth of the sewer.

Just as the street cleaner had gone to the other side of the street a puppy dog came down the street. Mrs. Burrell and her friend had passed the open manhole and were stepping on to the curb across the street when Eddie made a dash to capture the puppy. Mrs. Burrell turned to look for him, but she did not see him. But she did see the round black hole in the middle of the asphalt and a yellow puppy standing at the edge, with head cocked looking down into the blackness. The mother sensed disaster and she screamed.

The street sweeper said that he had seen no little boy fall down that hole.

People came running, and the mother appealed hysterically. Her Eddie had fallen into the sewer. A quick alarm was sent to headquarters, to the bureau of sewers and to the station of harbor police precinct at the foot of One Hundred and Twentieth street. From the last point came effective aid. Sergeant Mulhall and Officer Culben appeared. Mulhall went to the manhole nearest the river and with a lantern and rope disappeared down the hole. He waded slowly up in the direction of the shaft of light which marked the opened manhole a block away. He soon saw a round object outlined against the light ahead. Three steps and he had Eddie in his arms.

An ambulance came from the Presbyterian hospital on the chance that the boy might be found alive. Dr. Terry had Eddie's clothes off in a minute and was rubbing his body with alcohol. "Nothing at all the matter with him," the doctor said, "except that he is chilled through and scared. We'll keep him down at the hospital for a while to look out for pneumonia, that's all."

GOES WITH KING'S BLESSING.

Dr. Jowett Will Preach First Sermon in New York Next Month.

Portsmouth, England, March 8.—The annual council of the evangelical free churches opened here and the council presented an address to the Rev. Dr. John H. Jowett, the retiring president, on the occasion of his departure for the United States.

Dr. Jowett, in acknowledging the address, alluded to his meeting with King George at a dinner March 4. He said his majesty said to him on that occasion, "You go away with the good will of your king and queen."

Dr. Jowett will preach his first sermon at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York city, next month.

AN ANARCHIST A SUICIDE.

Spanish Officials Believe Carbonell Sought King's Life.

Alcazar de San Juan, Spain, March 8.—A heavily armed anarchist named Ventura Carbonell, who was arrested at the railway station here just before the arrival of King Alfonso, committed suicide in jail by hanging.

His suicide convinces the police that he was commissioned to kill the king and feared the vengeance of his comrades over his failure.

The English Country.

"In the English country of Wiltshire," said a customs official, "the natives are called 'moonrakers.' There's a Wiltshire story, over a century old about some rusties who were found one night raking away in a pond in the reflection of the moon, which they took for a cheese."

"That's a very good story, a very funny skit on the men of Wiltshire but ask a Wiltshire man about it and with a contented chuckle he will say: "Oh, yes, people tell us how they give the name of 'moonrakers' to us Wiltshire people because a pussel of stoopids one night tried to rake the sladder o' the moon out o' the brook, tatin' it for a thin cheese. But that's the wrong end o' the story. It's altogether the wrong end. Them chaps as was doin' this was smuglers and they was fishin' up some kegs o' brandy and only pretended to rake out a cheese. The policeman as axed 'em what they was about had a good laugh at 'em, but, by Harry! they had a better laugh at him when they got home with the stuff."

The Tough Chicken.

There are several ways of transforming a venerable fowl into a respectable family piece de resistance. In fact, by the following method such fowls have been made as tender as spring chickens: Let the bird, after drawing, seasoning and stuffing, simmer until over half done. Then place it in the oven with a piece of pork laid over its breast. Pour the liquor over and around the roast in the pan. Finish the cooking in a very hot oven, basting frequently with the drippings. When ready to serve skim off any superfluous fat that may be in the pan before preparing the gravy. The pork prevents the fowl from becoming dry, and if a small onion is also added it will have a more savory flavor. The simmering lessens its toughness. In fact, slow simmering is just the thing for any tough meat, but it should simmer, not boil. Boiling will toughen the tenderest of meat.

A Death Lure.

According to tradition, Kenneth, the legendary king of Scotland, was allowed to his death in a most novel manner. Kenneth had slain a son and brother of Fennella, who to be avenged ordered Wilts, a famous silversmith, to construct a death dealing statue of silver. In its right hand the statue held a basin and in the left hand an apple of pure gold, both set with diamonds and other precious stones. To touch the apple was to defy death, it being so arranged that any one guilty of such vandalism would be immediately riddled by poisoned arrows shot from openings in the body of the statue. Kenneth was invited to inspect the wonder, and, as Fennella had hoped, he tried to pluck the precious imitation fruit. When his hand touched the apple he was wounded by the arrows and died where he fell.

Animal Life on Venus.

"There are many physical reasons for thinking that if any other planet besides the earth is inhabited it is probably Venus," says Professor Pickering. "It is about the same size as the earth, and its density is about the same. The force of gravity upon its surface is only slightly less than that on the earth. The temperature on Venus is probably the same as in our own tropics, and the dense atmosphere may be of a composition such as enveloped the earth when in the carboniferous period. As to the existence of intelligent life, the question is still open. If it is ever established that the planet Venus is inhabited it will be less surprising than if the same were proved conclusively of any other planet, owing to the similarity in many respects of Venus and the earth."

A Cotton Legend.

Cotton was the theme of one of the most fabulous nature stories on its first introduction into Europe. Travelers related that in Tartary there grew a shrub and that when its ripe fruit was cut open within was "a little Beaste in fiesche, in bone and blode as though it were a little Lamb with outer wolle." The flesh of this "vegetable lamb" was eaten, ran the story, and the wool made into cloth. The basis of the legend is the way in which the cotton pod ripens and bursts, showing the white fluffy raw cotton, which closely resembles wool. Raw cotton is still called "cotton wool."

A Hint.

The Speedier Way.

He simply couldn't help it. He was born lazy.

As a rule, if not too sleepy, he could get through a shave in about thirty-five minutes. But today, after only fourteen hours' sleep, he appeared even more sluggish than ever. As he applied the lather to his customer's beard his brush lingered haltingly, as though loath to leave the stubby chin to which it was being applied.

His customer was a patient man and stood this for a considerable while. But at last his patience began to ooze, and he interrupted a forty winks' interval with a cough.

"Sere, lad," he suggested, "An're an idea. Hold your hand, keep the brush still, an' an'll wag ma head for ye!"—London Answers.

Making Things Hum in Rome.

The Romans had three recognized methods of applauding—the bombus, the imbrices and the testae. The word bombus did not carry any allusion to explosives. On the contrary, this form of applause was the most decorous, inasmuch as it consisted merely of a humming or buzzing noise. Thus in a way the Romans were the first "to make things hum" in a public assembly. The bombus was not the chief feature the Romans had to offer in the way of applause. The imbrices meant a demonstration made with the hollow of the hands. The testae meant the striking together of the flat portions of the hands. From this we may conclude that the Romans clapped, but there is no certainty on this point.—New York Herald.
