It proved to be a genuine surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Smith owing to the fact that they were members of the club and know nothing of the doings of their fellow-members until they bounced in upon them. A delightful evening was spent by all, Alonzo Wood and Charles Denny being nominated and elected as actors and clowns for the occasion. Mr. Wood soon won first prize leaving him the floor for the rest of the evening, while Mr. Denny took a back seat with the rest of the spectators, witnessing some of Mr. Wood's clever tricks and clown work. At a seasonable hour refreshments were served, after which Mr. Denny proposed that the queen of the club, called Queen Dido, must die. A vote was taken in which was decided that the queen must die. Half A Century In The Master's Service.
 The mid-week prayer meeting held at G. H. Knapp's was largely attended. Rev. James Rainey and Mrs. Julia C. Knapp were among those who addressed the meeting. These two faithful servants of God, the former who is nearing his seventieth birthday, and the latter her eightieth, are fine examples of Christian living, each having spent over half a century in the service of the Master.

THE TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

[By Mrs. J. M. Coleman.]
 The question is often asked Why special temperance teaching in the Sunday school?
 The answer is threefold. First: The necessity of such instruction is imperative as the drink habit and traffic, underlying and meeting nearly every other sin, is the Sunday school's greatest enemy.
 A story is told of a wise old Sheikh who gave to a young Arab Prince, from whom he was about to part, a list of crimes and bade him to choose the one which seemed least harmful.
 The young Prince turned in horror from murder, theft and loss of virtue and told the Patriarch he would choose intemperance.
 "You have chosen that," said the wise old man, "which will bring you all."
 Second: We have the children and youth in our Sunday school during the most susceptible years, when the tides of being are set either toward good or evil.
 We should teach those things which concern the every-day life of the child, thereby making them strong allies of God in the contest of evil.
 Through the faithful teaching of temperance truths to children, cider barrels have been taken out of the cellar, wine removed from the table, and brandy left out of the cooking.
 How true it is—"A little child shall lead them."
 Third: It is of the utmost importance that those in our Sunday schools understand the teaching in God's Word upon this subject.
 Intellectual knowledge is often of little avail when unaccompanied by an educated and sensitive conscience. We must stamp God's Word concerning these evils upon the mind and hearts of the young so that no temptation will be able to erase it.
 Dean Stanley said: "Each age of the church has, as it were, turned over a new leaf in the Bible and found a response to its own wants."
 It would seem indeed that a new leaf had been turned by this age in that blessed Book whose teaching on this subject is so clear and explicit.
 Never for a moment let us forget that His Word, "always a lamp to our feet and a light to our path," throws no uncertain beam upon this most perilous way.
 More and more clearly are we coming to comprehend the bearing of the Holy Scriptures upon the temperance question, and how perfectly, both by its whole spirit and trend, as well as by precept and example, it enforces the truest, purest, and highest principles of total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the state and nation.
 It has been wisely said, "If you would know what the theology of the next generation will be, go down into our Sunday schools and learn what is being taught there to-day in that respect."
 Can we not as truly say that the religious temperance sentiment of the next generation will depend upon what is being taught upon this subject in our Sunday schools.

 "Life boats are good when ships have gone to pieces on the rocks, but how much better the light house that saves from wreck."
 It is blessed and Christ-like to send out life boats to rescue the men and women who are lost on the billows of intemperance.
 But it is more blessed and more Christ-like for the officers and teachers of our Sunday schools to be a lighthouse and save the boys and girls from being wrecked on the shores of intemperance.
 The following outline of temperance work has been prepared by the International Sabbath School Association and every Sunday school is expected to endorse it.
 1. Educate every Sunday school member for: (a) Total Abstinence; (b) The Destruction of the Liquor Traffic; (c) The Extinction of the Cigarette Habit; (d) The Surrender of Every Self-Indulgence which impairs or destroys the power to give service to God and Man.
 2. Observe all appointed Quarterly Temperance Sundays.
 (Special)—Anti-Cigarette Day—Temperance Sunday of Second Quarter. (Special)—World's Temperance Sunday, the fourth Sunday in November to be emphasized as Christian Citizenship Day.
 3. A Temperance Department in every Sunday school under the care of a Temperance Superintendent.
 4. Enroll every Sunday school member of proper age as a pledged abstainer.
 If every Sunday school of Wayne county would adopt this outline and live up to its teaching our youth would be saved from lives of sin and unrighteousness, and be a power in God's hand for making Pennsylvania white.

The Temperance superintendents will be able to get help both for the teaching of the lesson and special programmes by sending to the following:
 Your own denominational publishing house.
 National Temperance Publication Society, New York City.
 Mrs. Stella B. Irving, 115 Walnut street, Riverside, California.
 March 1st being the Quarterly Temperance Sunday I trust it will be properly observed and that every Sunday school will have a Pledge Record or Honor Roll framed and hung on the wall.
 This record should contain the names of every officer, teacher and scholar.
 Let us, as members of this great Sunday school army, march with a steady step, following our Captain till the victory is won and Pennsylvania shall be free.

HOME GAMES FOR LENTEN PASTIMES.

A new and very amusing game called the "Novellette" is well worth arranging by those who are looking for amusement ideas. The hostess places about the room as many small tables as there are guests, just as she would in the case of poker parlance, but when space is an object two players can sit at the same table. On the other hand, by the use of drawing boards or pieces of stiff cardboard, no tables need be provided.
 Tables or boards are numbered. The guests in turn draw a number from any bag or bowl, and then take possession of their own place, where they find spread out before them, on a sheet of brown paper, in glorious confusion, a number of illustrations, of which there should be not fewer than twelve.
 When boards are used the pictures are secured by means of drawing pins and are easily moved about by the players.
How The Game Is Played.
 Each sheet of paper also reveals a striking title, such as "The Crime in the Night," "The Breaker of the Law," "The House of Danger," "Where Shadows Lurk," "The Darkest Hours," etc.
 The player finds the pictures allotted varied in character; there may be unnamed illustrated scenes taken from the pages of magazines once used in regular stories, dainty bits of land or seascapes, other things taken from sale catalogues showing figures of every possible form of personal possessions, pieces of furniture, or objects in common use.
 One table may show one or two cuttings depicting passenger steamers or a man-of-war; another a railway train; a third a motorcar. But whatever the picture may be, a very brief novelette has to be put together, and each picture must have a place in the story.
 Sometimes a player may consider that quite a thrilling story has been properly illustrated, and is deeply aggravated to discover a picture that has escaped attention, possibly that of a very large cabbage or cauliflower, taken from a gardening catalogue. But this desirable vegetable must have a place in the story, or there is no chance of obtaining a prize.
The Game of "Who."
 A capital competitive game that affords a whole evening's amusement is called "Who?" The attention of guests is directed to a big bowl, or large vase, from which lengths of ribbon of varied colors dangle.
 If the game is to be played in groups of four there must be for instance, four blues, four violets, four yellows, four greens, and so on.
 All players drawing similar colors form a group; various cozy corners are arranged about the room. At one end of the room, shut off by screens, is a long table covered with a large collection of objects arranged beforehand by the hostess, but with which the guests have no concern at first.
 Each ribbon is fastened through a hole in a sealed envelope; these are numbered from one to four. The player in the violet group, possessing an envelope with the number one upon it, passes it to No. 2, who opens it, reads the word or words written on a slip of paper, and passes it on to the other players in the group; only No. 1 remains in ignorance of what the envelope contains, and has to find out by questioning the others the name of the person whose identity must be assumed, and to make the most of answers limited to "Yes" and "No."

 But the moment No. 1 arrives at a conclusion as to identity it is necessary to pass behind the screen and to fix the envelope with the number one upon it to the object connected with the person to be represented.

Muscle Parade.

No. 1 returns to the violet group and is prepared to receive the sealed envelope from No. 2 and answer questions in turn. The group to complete the guessing of identities first is entitled to a special prize if correct solutions have been formed. If possible, to martial music a grand parade of personages, each carrying a special possession, should take place, and the scene is an amusing one.—[Pittston Gazette.]

DR. W. F. BECK TALKS ON HYDROPHOBIA

bite under all kinds of conditions. To show you still further how extremely rare it is, I have interviewed 40 physicians whose practice has extended over long periods and not one had ever seen a case of hydrophobia. Dr. Osler, the most widely known investigator, reports that he has only seen two cases since 1867. I could cite you other ones of high authority that give the same history of this dreaded disease.
 There is scarcely a day that we do not hear of some mad dog scare but they all fade and end in the poor dog getting the worst of it. While working in a state laboratory some years ago I went with two eminent physicians to kill a valuable dog that had been reported as dying with hydrophobia. The dog was in a wealthy section of the city and had almost caused a riot before we reached the place. Our object was to obtain the brain so as to examine it in the laboratory. We were fully armed for such an expedition. Every one agreed that this was indeed a true case of hydrophobia. The dog was killed, his head cut off and to our surprise there was a sharp chicken bone in his throat. In a few minutes we all slipped off leaving the poor dog, much ashamed for what we had done.

Dog Needs Drinking Water.

Another case wherein a dog showed symptoms of hydrophobia, a thorough investigation revealed the fact that the dog had not had water in any form for twenty days. Among the country people it is the custom to see that all the animals on the place have been watered, but the dog is left to look out for himself. I want to say that if there is anything that will make a man or woman show signs of hydrophobia just let him do without water for twenty days.
 When a dog has pain or is distressed in any way, it is as natural for him to bite as it is for the horse to kick or the cat to scratch. Along this line let me give you an example that I know to be true, and it first started me to thinking on this question. It happened at my home when I was living at 1214 Eighth avenue. I had a young Collie dog. One afternoon he was in the back yard and became violent, jumping in the air and rolling on the ground as well as clawing at his throat. Everyone that saw him declared that he was going mad. Mrs. Beck was the only one that was at home at the time. Against the protest of everyone she firmly held his head between her knees, pulling his mouth open, looking down, saw a large bone wedged in his throat. She took a stick and pried it out, which of course ended the trouble. Now the point that I wish to make is this: With the excitement that it caused, within five minutes some one would have turned in a mad dog scare. The police would have arrived on the scene; the dog would have been shot and the report gone around as a dog killed having hydrophobia.

Nevada's State Anthem.

A Reno, Nev., hotel manager has hit upon this striking—even audacious—perversion of the national hymn "America," on a circular advertising his hotel:
 "Nevada, 'tis of thee
 Sweet State of Liberty,
 Of thee I sing.
 State where our fathers see;
 State that sees mothers free—
 Marriage, because of thee,
 Hath lost its sting.
 "My State that holds the key
 That sets the shackled free,
 I love thy name.
 I love thy lawyers' ways,
 Thy dazzling divorcees,
 The briefness of their stays—
 Their little game.
 "Reno, it is to thee,
 Daughter of Liberty,
 To thee we flee.
 Long may the streets resound
 With freedom's joyful sound,
 Scatter thy light around,
 From sea to sea."
