A man has paid $50,000 for a Bible. The unsuccossful bidders can console themselves with the mought that it's so old he can't read it.

-000-A woman has brought a $50,000 breach of prombe suit against a man who signed one of his love letters "Yours to a crisp." If she gets it, he certainwill be well done, all right.

-000-"And I'll have you know, gentlemen that the way of the philanthropist is hard," said Andrew Carnegie, feelingly, to the grand jury. Nevertheless the jury managed to repress their desire to weep.

-0000-Things have come to a pretty pass in Philadelphia. It has been discovered that even the commumion wine is "doctored"; that it contains large quantities of salicylic acid and coal tar. Thus we see that the greed for money holds nothing sacred, not even the sacraments.

-000-The official figures of the ravages of the bubonic plague in the central provinces of India show the appalling total of 95,884 deaths from the disease in March. The fatalities during February were 43,-$08 .- Exchange. Even India can't stand it very long at that rate.

The total product of the automobile industry in the United States increased in value from $4,748,000 in 1899 to $194,722,600 in 1909, an increase of 400.1 per cent. In the same period the number of automobiles manufactured increased from 3,723 to 127,289. -Exchange. We wonder how many mortgages on homes are represented by those 127,289 apparent evidences of prosperity.

Andrew Carnegie testified Tuesday before the grand jury as to his relations with the defunct Carmegie Trust company, which adopted his name, but with which he has had no connection, aside from fimancial assistance rendered when the institution found itself in difficulties and appealed to him.-Tribune Republican. Most men would think the $700,-•00 or $800,000 whichever it was that Andy loaned the company, considerable connection.

THE WIFE, THE SLAP, AND HUBBY'S POCKETS.

Of course, the judge who declared the other day that a man was justified in slapping his wife if she goes through his pockets was speaking facetiously and without any idea that his remark would be literally construed. Whether a man would be justified in slapping his wife under any circumstances whatever is a point upon which it would be extremely difficult, not to say dangerous, to express an opinion. Old Blackstone thought it an evidence of the tender-heartedness of the common law that it prohibited the husband from beating his wife with a stick thicker than his thumb, so that in his day a slap could evidently have been administered without any apprehension as to the consequences from a legal point of view, whenever the man felt like it. Needless to say, however, things are different now, and in these days of women's rights and easy divorce it is questionable whether it would be safe to slap no matter how great might be the exasperation.

Another judge not long ago indicated the proper course for the husband to pursue when the lady of the house is threatening to drive him to distraction with her wordy assaults. He mustn't slap her. He mustn't sell her to "shut up her mouth," or anything like that. He mustn't even enter a protest when some innocentlymeant comment of his own is being distorted out of all resemblance to its original phrasing and intended sigmificance. No, indeed, for that would only be pouring eil upon the fire and adding fuel to the flame. What he must do under these trying conditions is to refrain from saying a word. It may not be easy, but it is necessary to exercise a strict self-control and to allow the most injurious misrepresentations pass without a protest. If this is done the storm will gradually blow itself out and pretty soon the clouds will have rolled away and the sun will again be shining. Should the man be constitutionally incapable of these tactics, then all that is left him is flight.

But if the husband may not slap the wife of his bosom when she is applying to him all the injurious epithets a fertile and entirely untrammeled fancy can suggest, how absurd it would be to hold that he might properly do so when she has been guilty of no more serious offense than that of going through his pockets? Why, everyone whose experience is at all extended knows that this is one of the wife's inalienable and immemorial privileges. Whose pockets should she go through if not her husband's, and what are pocketshusband's pockets-for anyhow if not to be gone through? If they should happen to contain anything which it is not intended for the wife to see the man has only himself to blame for that; he should have been more careful; while as for the rest, isn't it as much hers as his anyhow?

But a judge will have his joke.-Philadelphia In-

000-E. HUBBARD ON ADVERTISING.

Advertising is simply announcing to the world in an effective way where you are, who you are and what you have to offer in the way of human service or commodity.

On Governor's island, New York City, there is a testing laboratory for cloth. A specification of the weight per linear yard of each kind of cloth is mentioned; each boilt of goods is weighed, and if it falls short of the proper weight it is thrown out.

All live men are advertisers, and the only man who should not advertise is the man who has nothing to offer to the world in the way of human service, and such a man is a dead one, whether he knows it or not. Advertising is a legitimate and ethical proposition. Life is too short for you to hide yourself away, mantled way. in your modesty, and let the world hunt you out. Even the dead are advertisers, for on visiting a beautiful cemetery I noticed that on nearly every marble slab was given a list of the virtues, talents and beautiful qualities which the dead man was supposed to have

This is what you call non-productive advertising or advertising from an emotional standpoint.

Personally, I do not indorse it. Advertise while you are alive, and send flowers to the man when he can appreciate them.

The Government a Careful Buyer.

This is Especially True in the Purchase of Cloth in Big Lots, Says Writer,

The men of the United States army come nearer knowing to a certainty what they are buying in the way of cloth than do any other consumers in the country, says Mary Heaton Vorse in Success Magazine. When the government gives out a million dollar cloth contract it sees to it that it gets material according to speci-

The specific contracts for various sorts of cloth are elaborate and go into the technical side of the matter the number of threads to be used to the yard, the kind of wool to be used in the manufacture—for the United States soldier has to be well dressed in clothes that will stand the strain of weather and of work.

On Governor's Island, New York

of the proper weight it is thrown out. Next the question of wear and tear is considered and again the specification is stated that each special kind of cloth will stand a strain of so many pounds to the inch filling So after weighing the next test is to cut a sample and try in a machine the strength of the cloth. If it will not stand this test the cloth is thrown out.

After the cloth has been pronounced perfect for weight and strength, the dye tests are made; it must stand two acid tests for perspiration and the material must stand boiling for ten minutes in a certain soap sol-ution, showing that it will stand Personally, I do not indorse it. Advertise while are alive, and send flowers to the man when he can help to live, but we do not need any help to live, but we do not need any help on the roof without changing color appreciably.

If the cloth has passed its examinations successfully each yard of each piece of cloth is inspected, being run over machines for the purpose, while inspectors watch for any im-perfection in the weave. An eighth of a yard for each imperfection is charged to the manufacturer.

So when the cloth is finally sent to the contractor to be made into uniforms it is known to be of really good material. Each spool of thread, each button, each lining, each filling used in the clothes of soldiers has its own special test.

GETTING TIRED.

Fatigue That Follows Monotony of Work or Exercise.

It is said that for horses the hardest road out of London is the most level one. There are no hills to climb and descend, and the tired horse has no chance to rest one set of muscles while another works. Monotony produces fatigue, and be-cause this particular road is one dead, monotonous level more horses die on it than on any other leading out of London. We can even take a charitable view of the time taken daily by the typewriter girl for the arrangement of her hair. Her fingers are con-gested by the work of writing and tired by contact with the hard keys of her machine, and the different feeling of her hair and the little plays and movements of her fingers in adjusting it are a distinct stimulation and relief. Fatigue following long continued exercise is really a mild form of ill-ness which arises from overexerting some one part of the body. In writing, for instance, the fingers move up and down hardly more than a quarter of an inch as they travel across the page. Yet this is hard work for their little muscles and burns up tissue in the fingers very fast. rest intervals are too short and infrequent, there is not time for the removal of the waste products of this destruction through the normal channels of the body and congestion re-The feeling of fatigue or pain that follows long continued use of any of the muscles is due to the influence of such poisonous material, as well as to the stretching of the tissues caused by the pressure of the blood which settles there.—Paul W. Goldsbury in Atlantic.

His task his been rendered measarably difficult by the boastful de-clarations of Democratic leaders that the reciprocity bill is Democratic doctrine, and his efforts have not been helped by the assertion of Republican leaders that the claim is founded in truth. The President says that it will be a very poor ad-ministration victory if less than a majority of the Republican members of the House are a party to it. Senator Penrose, during the time that he has been in Washington, has devoted himself mainly to reorganization of the Senate committees. He has succeeded in reasoning the regular Republican Senators out of their None of you are in the race, attitude of belligerency toward the Just send it when you can, insurgents and he has gained the confidence of the latter in a remarkable degree. He has conferred with in-surgent Senators individually and collectively. They have visited him singly, in pairs and in threes.

Since his return from Philadelphia he was in conference with half a dozen or more of them at one time. A good understanding has been established and the insurgents are thoroughly convinced that Penrose insignments will be in proportion to their numbers and activity—that they will be treated in the makeup of they will be treated in the makeup of was added to the treasury.

Penrose has been so busy with Senate reorganization that he has not been able to consider legislative matters. It is known that he is convinced that reciprocity is stronger in the Senate than it was previous to March 4, when there was a majority, though a small one, for it. Therefore, he sees no good to be achieved by making a fight against it. It is his policy to let it come to a vote as speedily as possible, which, to his mind, will complete the work for which the special session of Congress was called by the President.

With regard to other items on the Democratic House caucus program Senator Penrose says:
