"I STOOD UPON THE MOUNTAIN TOP." The following verses were composed by Rev. W. B. Signor, Thursday afternoon, May 4, on the top of Sugar Loaf mountain, directly in front of the parsonage at Orson. One of the grandest views to be obtained in Northeastern Pennsylvania can be had from the summit of this mountain. It was while the writer was on the heights and beholding the wonderful view that the following verses came to him:

I stood upon the mountain top, And viewed the landscape o'er; It seemed that I was near to heaven, Nearer than e'er before.

I saw the lakes; I saw the streams; I saw God's land so fair; And when I looked to the skies above, I knelt in humble prayer.

And prayed that God would touch The hearts of sinners far and near, And bring them to the Savior's fold, The fold He loves so dear. It seemed I heard a voice from heaven, A voice so sweet and low; Methought it trembled on the air, "My child, I'd have it so."

But there are hearts whose doors Are closed and will not hear the call; They do not care that I have the cross, Nor drank the bitter gall.

Their eyes are blind, they do not see The awfulness of sin; Their ears are deaf, they do not hear The knock, and let me in."

I looked again, the scene was changed; The throne seemed to appear; The good, the bad, were gathered there, I thought I saw the tears,

Flow down the cheeks of Jesus, God's only begotten Son; And then I knew full well The judgment had begun. I can't describe the awful scene; The books were open wide; Then God came forth and took a seat Close to the Savior's side.

The sinners heard their awful doom, "Depart I know you not." And then He turned to the righteous, Who had a different lot.

The voice was clear, the smile so sweet; 'T was the voice of God's own Son, "Come ye blessed of my Father"; Well done, dear ones, well done."
