For Women by a Woman

GREAT LATITUDE IN WEDDING GOWNS—VELLS A NECESSITY—BEWILDERING ARRAY OF PARASOLS.

June brides wear exactly what they like. That is to say, there is no hard and fast rule as to the wedding gown. A stiff gown of white satin is no longer the only one deemed possible. The more the bride has been in the habit of studying her own individual needs in the matter of dress, the more original her wedding frock will be. Often very artistic also, and most picturesque, the whole wedding party.

Soft white satin generally forms the foundation, veiled with embroidered chiffon. The plain satin train starts from the high waist in a gown of empire effect, while the chiffon tunic extends from the neck. Often the chiffon is embroidered with pearls as well as silk floss. Point lace and pearl embroidery trim the corsage.

Quite recently at a church wedding, a short bridal gown was seen of white satin veiled with white chiffon. A lace coat was worn with this, and a big picture hat.

Pink is the favorite color for the maid of honor. Empire effects prevail here also, with variations.

A very elaborate evening church wedding was recently shown in the Citizen Fashion editor. It was of ivory satin hand-embroidered and dotted tulle. The train to this was square and the band of embroidery, which started at the shoulders, was carried down the sides and around the corners. In the center of the train, the band ended in an elaborate design. The sleeves and bodice were cut in one with the embroidery outlining the top of the corsage. The decollete neck was filled in with point lace. On another wedding dress, a fichu of point lace was noted, which draped the corsage from right to left, and then extended down the side of skirt in a cascade, ending at about the knee in a sash of tulle. This sash was caught to the skirt with sprays of orange blossoms.

Most quaint and bewitching are the little caps, which are such a feature of late weddings. They are coquettish affairs of lace and tulle, to which the veil is attached. Bridesmaids' gowns are short enough to show their little slippers. Two tones prevail here, one color over another, as lavender over blue, light shimmering pink over a deeper shade, or white over ecru.

To obtain a soft indefinable fleecy pink, one modiste used mousseline de sole of pale biscuit shade over pale pink liberty satin. These bridesmaids' gowns were most aesthetic, also dainty and girlish. The trimming used was crystal and silver embroidery with scarfs of the mousseline de sole. As far as can be judged there is only one rule for the June bride, and that is that she must wear the symbolic bridal veil. Her wedding gown may be simplicity itself, embroidered mul or voile, or just a "tub" lined, but there must be a veil. When there is no "real lace veil which her grandmother wore," then she buys one, or lacking the funds for that, she contents herself with an imitation lace for $25.00, and truth to tell, if it be a pretty girl, the quality of the veil doesn't matter.

What does matter is that the frill shall be the right width and the cap the right shape to be most becoming, then the bride is perfectly adorable, no matter what the price of the veil.

Next in importance to the bridal gown is the "going away" gown.

A marriage license was issued Wednesday, June 7, to John Ewain, Ewain, and Oma F. Lord, Equinunk.

A marriage license was issued Thursday, June 8, to C. H. Bennett, Winwood, and Bertha A. Snyder, Winwood.

Mr. Erk expects to open the store for business on Saturday. Mr. Erk is a former resident of Honesdale.

The Taylor Reds, the only team that won their series of games from Honesdale the last year that Fred Schuerholz pitched, will arrive in town at 9:55 a. m. Saturday, June 10, in order to start the game at 2:30, early enough to have plenty of time to settle as to which team is the best. A good game is almost certain. The home team has a hard schedule ahead of them for June and July and the fans will have ample opportunity to see good baseball this season if they give the boys their hearty support and cooperation. The schedule follows: June 10, Taylor Reds, at home; June 17, Taylor Reds, at Taylor; June 24, "Phoebe Snows," at home; July 1, South Scranton, Lackawanna county league team, at home; July 4, undecided, possibly Archbald, at home; July 8, Famous Pittston Bros., at home; July 15, Jermyn, at home; July 22, Taylor Athletics, at home; and a picnic and dance will be given at Bellevue Park in honor of the Taylor team on the night of July 22.

Shall it be white and bride-like, or shall it be just the opposite? For the white suit, serge is the accepted material, though wool and mohair are both used. The hat also may be white, or fashion allows a colored toque. If a lavender toque is chosen, then the parasol must match, and this reminds us of the new parasols.

Was there ever a girl who didn't desire a parasol for every costume? They are more tempting this year than ever. Even the woman who has outgrown fashion's rule cannot help admiring the 1911 creations. Is she fond of green? There is a little beauty of emerald green trimmed with three little rows of narrow black lace gathered in round the edge.

Aeroplane is a new shape; at least a so-called new shape to attract attention. Then there is the Pagoda and Canopy. Dolly Varden parasols are the most alluring. The name is rightly chosen for such dainty dainty conceits, and as no heroine of Dickens was more enticingly feminine than Dolly, so no summer parasol is more coquettish.

Such an array! There are Pongees with Persian borders; white taffeta with colored print borders; black taffeta with black and white borders. Then there are stripes ranging through many varieties, also checks, and again, all-over Persian designs.

Hand embroidered linen ones are truly elegant. Velvet borders are also noted. One exclusive little affair is embellished with tinsel beading. Another is trimmed with lace that is worth more than the whole costume. Then there is the fringed parasol, and of course, the hemstitched.

Imported fancy handles! Aren't they stunning? So exclusive too to pick out your handles yourself to match parasols made to order for each and every costume.

All these little elegant trifles are what bring the summer wardrobe of the fashionable belle up into the thousands. Neckwear alone may cost a neat sum. Real Irish lace Jabots are neat and serviceable because they wash well. Cascades of lace are pretty.

The best bargains in silk are found at this time. Many of the New York stores begin to clear out their silks in May, and all, in June. Here are a few of the bargains noted the past week:

Rainproof bordered foulards, forty inches wide at $1.75 per yard, formerly $2.50.

Double width all-silk imported Marquisette 60 cents per yard. All-silk changeable Marquisette or chiffon cloth $1.15.

Glaze striped taffetas, one yard wide, at 98 cents a yard. Bordered Messaline, forty inches wide, $1.50 a yard. Twill foulards, dotted with white, make good all round summer frocks, dainty and cool looking. These can be had at this time, forty inches wide, for $1.00 a yard, a short time ago they were $1.50. One foulard frock is almost a necessity. Pippings of white or green with lace yoke and lace undersleeves are the only trimmings needed. Thin filmy net is preferred by many instead of the lace. Tussock, the Shantung, Messaline, the Peau de Cygne are all favorites.

Occasionally during June one can pick up a good silk as low as 69 cents a yard. Many of these wrinkle easily, however, so that unless one is sure of the quality, the better grade is advisable, especially as the dressmaker charges the same to make the poor silk as the good one.

Silk covered buttons are used on blouse waists of silk.
