CONVICTS ON THEIR HONOR

Colorado Builds Roads Without Ball and Chain.

HOW THE SYSTEM WORKS OUT

Prisoners Reduce Their Sentences by Read Work-Only One Escaped In a Year-Another Ran Away, but He Came Back.

Out in the mountains of Colorado they've been building roads with man's honor. Much rock, many teams and some concrete, of course, were used in constructing the smooth highways that now wind along the Royal gerge and other mountain passes of the state. But honor, says John F. Shafroth, governor of Colorado, built the roads.

"We tried utilizing our convicts in road building under the ball and chain method," Governor Shafroth said, "but it was too expensive. The guards cost more than the roads were worth. Then my warden, Thomas Tynan, introduced a plan which I believe is going to solve the rock road problem.

"Convicts build our roads still. But there isn't a guard or a ball and chain around the road camp. The warden calls a convict into his room and gives him a talk on manhood. It generally winds up like this: 'Now it's up to you to make a man out of yourself. I'm going to give you a chance. Raise your right hand. (The convict raises his hand.) Now swear before Almighty God that you won't violate your pledge and run away.' The man swears, and that is all there is to it."

How does that build the roads? The convict is sent without guard to one of the road camps. Here he goes to work along with a number of other convicts. There are two overseers. engineers, at the larger camps to direct the work. But there are no guards. The man is on his honor not to run away.

To encourage the convicts at their work Warden Tynan takes ten days off a man's sentence for each thirty he works on the roads. Instead of becoming pale and emaciated in prison the men finish their terms, Governor Shafroth says, browned, full of hope and ready to begin life all anew The roads cost just what the men eat and the salaries of the two engineers to direct them. The road along the Royal gorge, which contractors said would cost $50,000, required an outlay of just $6,000. Lost Just One In a Year.

"The first year we tried the honor system we lost just one prisoner," Governor Shafroth added. "And we had more than 300 convicts out at work on the roads without guards. Another ran away, but surrendered. The warden had lost all hope of catching him when he received a letter postmarked from Michigan. 'I don't mind my escaping,' the convict wrote, 'but it's been worrying me nearly to death my holding up my hand and swearing before God that I wouldn't violate my pledge to you. I'm coming back.'

prison under the old system laughed. 'You'll never see him,' they said. The morning came of the day when the escaped convict said he would be back. Sure enough, he failed to arrive. At noon the guards began to ask the warden about his man. 'Just wait,' he answered. One o'clock, 2 o'clock, 3 passed. No man came. The warden still hoped. Just five minutes before the prison gates closed for the day the man arrived. He had paid his own railroad fare clear from Michigan to return and complete his sentence."

The young woman had served one term of a year in San Quentin, but soon after her release was arrested charged with stealing jewelry. Her case was brought to the attention of Dr. H. N. Rowell, who diagnosed her ailment as bone pressure on the brain. He took out a sec tion of bone over the frontal part of the brain, removing pressure which was believed to have been the cause of her uncontrollable pilfering tend-

The operation was conducted under methods followed by Dr. Horsley of St. Bartholomew's hospital, London. and of Dr. Cushing of Johns Hopkins.

The young woman has now fully recovered from the operation and will be released on probation. She says she is changed and no longer feels the overwhelming impulse to steal things. She will be taken to the country, and the surgeon predicts a complete cure.

Where Every One is a "Majesty." Who are the politest people in Europe? If common speech is any criterion, surely the Spaniard must carry off the palm. The author of "Heroic Spain" tells of many high flown phrases still in common use. You bid farewell with "Beso a V. la mano" (1 kiss your hand) or "A los pies de V." (I am at your feet). The Usted, shortened to V., wift which you address high or low, is a corruption of "your majesty." The love of abbreviations is a curious trait in a people with such leisurely ways; thus a row of cabalistic letters ends a letter: S. S. S. Q. B. S. M., which means that your correspondent kisses your hand-"su seguro servidor que besa su mano."

A King Who Could Change the Wind. King Brricus of Sweden publicly confessed that he was a sorcerer and magician. He was the owner of an enchanted cap, which he pretended enabled him to control the spirits and change the direction of the winds at pleasure. So firmly did his subjects believe in the supernatural powers of their ruler that when a storm arose they would exclaim, "Ah, the king is again wearing his magic cap!"-London Mail.
