Fred Rickard is still carrying the mail to Hoadleys via star route, where the mail matter is placed on the Scranton Erie train. This train now leaves Honesdale daily at 6 o'clock p. m., and Mr. Rickard starts for Hoadleys a half-hour earlier to meet this very same train at that place. He claims he has received no notice from the government to discontinue the service neither has Postmaster Allen been notified to make the change. Until then the service will remain the same. Mr. Rickard claims that he expects to receive notice any day from the postal authorities to discontinue his services. As the train is only for the summer he states that perhaps the government will make no change in the delivery.

Probably for the first time in the history of the Erie railroad its change of time-table went into effect on Saturday instead of Sunday, as heretofore. Even old-time railroad employes claim they do not remember anything of the kind ever occurring on the road.

The morning train now leaves Honesdale at 7:20 instead of 8:25; arriving at 1:40 p. m., five minutes later than the winter schedule. The afternoon train leaves Honesdale seven minutes later than formerly, going out now at 2:57. In the evening it is scheduled to arrive here at 6:55, one minute earlier than formerly.

In addition to the above mentioned trains, the Erie company has made the Saturday only train a daily, arriving at 3:50 p. m., and departing at 6 o'clock.

This service is very much appreciated by the business men of Honesdale.

A swimming pool for the boys of Honesdale. What an ideal proposition?

Honesdale is in need of a public place for its boys to learn the art of swimming. True, boys swim in the river, but not all boys will go in a stream near town. Then, too, the river is no place for them as the stream is frequented by young women taking pleasure rides in canoes and boats.

There are now enough amusement places in Honesdale. Why not now create something new and at the same time instructive and helpful, for who can tell at what moment he or she will be thrown into the water in the course of life?

The proposition could be handled in an economic manner. It is not necessary to plunge into debt on the initiative of the plan, but proceed moderately. A professional instructor could be secured to make weekly visits to Honesdale at a nominal cost.

Let us hear about the proposition in the People's Forum of The Citizen.

Benjamin H. Helwig, the painter, has a dog which is faithful to his master. One day last week Mr. Helwig had occasion to go to Prompton to finish some work. The dog followed him to the train and as he boarded it he bade the faithful pet go home. When he reached his destination he had occasion to go to a nearby house to get some brushes. He had left other material near the track. After an absence of about five minutes he found the dog guarding his belongings.

The tongue of a large sprinkling wagon owned by C. A. Cortright & Son was broken Monday morning in a slight runaway which occurred in front of the Main street watering station.

A new horse, hitched to the borough street sprinkler for the first time, looked around and seeing water descend in a way he had never seen before, took fright and galloped away from the impending flood.

His mad race was of short duration however. His mate, more accustomed to the sound of falling water, didn't want to go. And so the horse on the offside, the new horse, shoved the team right into a tree, seventy-five feet from the starting point, breaking the tongue of the wagon. Driver Sam Wadze caught the frightened animals. And if the streets of Honesdale were only partially sprinkled on Monday blame it on the "temperance" horse who didn't take to being on the water wagon.
