RUSSIA HARD ON THE JEWS.

Their Plight Worse Than Ever. Says Author Bernstein.

CZAR HELPS THE ATTACKS.

He Is Declared to Be In Sympathy With the Attitude of the Antisemitio Press Obstacles Put In Way of Jews' Education.

Herman Bernstein, the author, has fust returned from a visit to Russia to study the condition of the Jews in that country. He said the condition of the Jews there now is worse than ever before.

Mr. Bernstein said that the entire Russian press, beaded by the Nova Vremya, the semiofficial organ, is assailing the Jews. It is charging that the recent murder of a Christian was done by Jews for ritualistic purposes in celebration of the Passover.

"The purpose," he said, "Is to offset proposed liberal legislation in the douma, such, for instance, as the removal of the pale of settlement-that is, the extension of permission to Jews to live in provinces outside of the fifteen to which they are now restricted. The newspapers say that if the Jews were permitted to live outside the pale the lives of Christians in those provinces opened to Jewish settlement would not be safe.

"Such publications and all discussions of Talmudic laws were prohibited in the reign of Nicholas, but now the reactionary newspapers are given free rein. The old libel of murders of Christians perpetrated by Jews for ritualistic purposes has been historically disproved and disproved recently, but is still persisted in.

Liberties Dwindling.

"All the liberties extended to the Jewish race under the constitution of 1905 have been practically nullified or abridged through inaction, subterfuge, trickery and the revival of old and forgotten laws. Russia is now building up a second generation of illiterate Jews, a dangerous proceeding. She has her parliament and her constitution, but they accomplish nothing.

"The reformers of 1905 introduced the public school system for all, but now only 5 per cent of the Jewish children are permitted to attend the public schools. Until recently Jewish young men could study outside and take the final examinations of the gymnasiums for entrance to the universities, the passing of which would also entitle them to live outside the pale. Under an old law just raked up the number is limited to 5 or 10 per cent of the Russians taking the final examinations. Thus Russia is barring her Jewish youth from a university

As to Passports.

Russia gives passports quite freely to those Jews who patronize Russian steamship lines. The trouble is to get into the interior of Russ sian consulates in America do not vise the passports of Jews. Three years ago the Russian consul in New York vised my passport because he thought I would write something to please the Russian government. When I went back the second year he inserted in my application blank, 'What is your re-

"I said that, being in America, I was not obliged to answer. "He said, 'Don't you know that Jews are not allowed to enter Russia? But you let me through last year,"

I replied.

"He then told the vice consul in Russian that he supposed they would have to vise my passport.

"I had no difficulty in visiting Kokovtzoff, minister of finance; Count Witte, member of the council of the empire, and Ambassador Rockhill. Witte said the government would not be prepared to ameliorate the condition of the Jew for years. The Russian government will do nothing for the American Jews until the Jewish question is settled in Russia. "There is no truth in the report that Russia has made concessions to Amerca in the matter of passports. All be protests, resolutions and represenations of this government were ig-

"I think the prejudice against the Jew is chiefly in the mind of the czar. Talebearers find in the czar a ready listener. They tell him that the Jews breed revolution. I know that the czar personally has been helping the anti-Jewish press and has been giving money to its vilest publications."

PRIMROSE QUITS STAGE.

Famous Minstrel Man Retires After

Forty Years. George Primrose, the minstrel, is quitting the stage to tread the life of ease. The member of a famous coterie of burnt cork artists said: "I've got enough money to last me, more than I can spend, and I'm finished. I quit of my own accord before I

Thus the associate of that band of minstrels which included Mosers. Billy Emerson, Charley Reed, Jack Haverly and Billy Birch is putting on his final touches of cork after a career of forty years on the stage.

JAW OF A SHARK IS FOUND IN OKLAHOMA.

Farmer Discovers Bones of Great Age Excellently Preserved.

On the farm of H F. Sears, near Mulhall, Okia. theer has been discovered a large deposit of bones of numerous prehistoric animals. The bones are in an excellent state of preservation. Teeth of the elephant that once ranged from the gulf region to Canada and remains of the mastodon have been identified. The bones of many other animals, both large and small, await the examination of geologists. There has been little exploration for the remains of prehistoric animals in Oklahoma.

The deposits on the Sears farm bear evidence of great age. They are exposed at the base of a canyon wall, about thirty-five or forty feet below the surface of the surrounding region. Above the bones are successive layers of sandstone and earth, while at the top are the natural humus and a heavy growth of large forest trees. Sears was digging in the canyon to build a fish pond when he found the first bones, which he exposed along the face of the wall for a distance of forty feet and to the depth of six feet. The deeper he dug the more numerous were the bones. The bones were in light yellow earth of the consistency of decayed sawdust. Between the strata were layers of strongly cemented gravel The different strata seemed to contain the bones of different animals. One large jawbone was filled with long sharp teeth like those of a shark. The jaw had no articulation joint, but spread laterally in a fan shape.

Mr. Sears is confident that tons or bones may be dug from the canyon He has abandoned his exploration lest he destroy the bones in trying to dislodge them, preferring that they should be recovered by a scien-

Flats Built Especially For Babies Will Now Be Babyless.

The famous "baby flats" at Brockton, Mass., six tenements under one roof, built exclusively for families with babies, will hereafter be rented to babyiess tenants, says John Hill Bartlett, the owner, whose venture has resulted in ex-President Roosevelt sending him a personal letter of com mendation.

Two years ago Mr. Bartlett announce ed that he saw no reason why families should be barred from tenements because they had children. A year ago he married a waitress. Now he says be has renounced his former opinion of bables

Gradually his tenements have been cleared of children until there are now only three in the building, where a year ago more than a dozen romped through the rooms.

Mr. Bartlett does not express himself as opposed to bables, but Mrs. Bartlett frankly admits she prefers families without them.

"Bables are all right, I suppose," she said, "but they make a lot of noise and do much damage. I am not fond of children anyway, and as the letting of the tenements is now in my hands I guess there will be no more children here."

GUNNERY RECORDS BROKEN.

Fine Work With Heavy Coast Defense Guns on Corregidor Island.

All previous records for gunnery work by heavy coast defense guns have been broken by two batteries at Fort Mills, Corregidor Island, the newest fortification to have target practice. One was the record for day firing and the other for night firing. The best night work, so far as records of the war department show, was made by the Thirteenth company, commanded by First Lieutenant W. Watts Rose. This company, firing with twelve inch guns, made four hits out of six shots in a few seconds less than the minimum time recorded for this number of shots. The target was at a distance of 7,500 yards.

A greater degree of accuracy was made by the Eleventh company on day firing with twelve inch guns. This company, commanded by Captain E. L. Bennett, made six hits out of six shots at 8,100 yards. The time was 3 minutes 48 seconds, a fraction more than one and a half hits per gun per minute. This makes a figure of merit of 283. For both practices the target was the regulation target, thirty feet high and sixty feet long and towed at eight

BONBONS LOSING FAVER.

Confectioners Say Girls Demand Some thing More Substantial. The bonbon has passed out of favor, according to statements made by leading confectioners of the country. The young women have become more pracso dealers say, and demand something in the line of confectionery which will take the place of a meal.

Pure food laws and their requirements were the principal subjects before the convention.

"Our greatest problem," said D. J. O'Brien of Omaha, secretary of the National Confectioners' association, "is trying to keep abreast of the rulings of the federal pure food authori-ties. They demand that each separate piece be weighed and labeled. They prescribe how many pieces can be placed in a carton and how much each plece shall weigh. According to their rulings at present, each piece of chew-ing gum or chocolate must be so weighed and so labeled."

A MODEST MAID

By D W. SPRINGER Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

My friend Mrs. Southwick wrote me to come down in her country place. She said she had an especial reason for asking me, but didn't tell me what it was. So one midsummer morning ! took a train to make the visit. On reaching the station-I was not expected till an hour later-not finding a conveyance to meet me, I concluded to leave my baggage at the station and Never having been to Mrs Southwick's place before, I was obliged to inquire the way and was put on to a short route, at the end of which I could enter the grounds at the rear. On arrival I climbed a fence and walked some three or four hundred yards to a clump of trees, which was so invit is tempting. This one was very pretty. There was about her that relevation artists love to get in their pictures and statuary. There was a slow heaving of her breast. Her mouth was partly open showing a narrow line of ivory be tween a pair of pink coral lips.

Well, though the natural consequence of a young man seeing a girl thus defenseless before him is that he cannot resist the temptation to kiss her and get his ears boxed-not for his pains, but his pleasure-I will endeavor to describe what happened. advanced a step at a time, and with every step forward I took ten backward in my resolution not to dishonestly steal what did not belong to me I reached a point but a yard from the sleeper without waking her. She was slumbering so calmly that for some time I dared not proceed farther for fear of awakening her. Had she slept more soundly I might have been bolder. But while halting I was grad ually filling with bravery—or reckless-ness. As soon as I had gathered enough courage for the purpose 1 advanced another step or two, halted, then bent down to see how near I could bring my face to hers without wakening her, then touched my lips lightly to hers.

Beyond a slight spasmodic movement she remained the same. Within a single moment I experienced dread and reassurance. The girl slept on, and I, having achieved my purpose, became suddenly conscious of the frightful risk I had run and was seized with a desire to escape the consequences of my offense. I withdrew as stealthly as possible and proceeded to the house

I was received by Mrs. Southwick with a hearty welcome, and we sat down together on wicker chairs on the plazza. "And now that you are here," she said, "and while we are alone I will give you my reason for inviting you down. I have a wife picked out for you."

"Yes, a very lovely girl, modest, unassuming, pretty-indeed, everything that is maidenly."

'And all this is for me?" "Yes, but you must proceed with her very slowly. She is sensitive, pure The least advance before an offer of marriage would undeniably shock her. "For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed in wardly. "Suppose she should be the girl asleep in the hammock."

"It is this maldenly modesty," con tinued the go-between, "that is Edith's chief charm. I am sure that alone is enough to make you love her." "I dare say," I replied, with prope politeness.

When I was presented to Miss Edith Greer I felt the guilt of Judas Iscariot wedling up in me. I grew red and pale by turns. I stammered out a few words that didn't mean anything. sat down before she or Mrs. South wick had seated herself and jump ed up as if I had encountered a tack on the cushion. Meanwhile Miss Greer stood with her eyes bent on the floor as if I were the first young man she had ever met. Mrs. Southwick came to the rescue by inviting us into the dining room for luncheon.

The fact that the young lady displayed no such embarrassment as she might have done had she been sensible of the kiss I had stolen, that she neither appeared shocked nor indignant, brought a return of confidence. I found her rather too unsophisticated; but, as Mrs. Southwick had said, ber modesty was her chief charm. As I noticed this I shuddered at the enor mity of my offense in pressing those pure lips with mine and gave frequent thanks that the piracy had not been detected.

Mrs. Southwick made the match she intended. The only difficulty in the way was that the young lady was so sweetly innocent that it seemed a sacrilege to me to propose to her. I finally got out a proposition, and, though at first she said she was too young and too inexperienced to trust herself to any man, since she regarded me the soul of honor she would commit herself to my keeping.

The denonement of a love story usually comes with a wedding. In this case it comer at a tin wedding. "What a mo st little thing you were, my dear, I said, "when we were married this day ten years ago?" "Rats!" she exclaimed. "I was laying in wait for you in that hammock and was wide awake when you kissed
