

IRONQUILL, THE POET, IS DEAD.

Pen Name Under Which the Late E. F. Ware Wrote.

SAMPLES OF HIS RHYMING.

First in United States to Publish Pun on Dewey After Battle of Manila. Was Pension Commissioner Under President Roosevelt.

It was under his pen name of Ironquill that the greatest fame came to the late Eugene F. Ware, an ex-commissioner of pensions, who died recently. Under that name he published "The Washerwoman's Song" and many other poems. It was not only as a poet that he was known. He was author of many books on law and also translated and edited many ancient legal books. His history of Iowa's troops in the civil war is accepted as authoritative.

Mr. Ware considered his poetry writing as a pleasure, and although some of his books of verse went into several editions he refused to accept the profits on them, giving the proceeds to some worthy cause.

Besides being a poet, Mr. Ware was noted as a soldier, lawyer and political leader.

Ware was born at Hartford, Conn., in 1841. While still a child his parents moved to Burlington, Ia., where he was educated in the public schools. He enlisted for the civil war in Company E, First Iowa volunteer infantry, serving afterward in Company L, Fourth Iowa volunteer infantry, and Company F, Seventh Iowa cavalry, finally becoming captain in the last named organization. His re-enlistments were for such periods as to keep him in the army for five years and three months.

His Career.

In the various Indian wars which followed the close of the civil war Mr. Ware served on the staff of General R. B. Mitchell, General C. J. Stolbrand, chief of artillery; under General Thomas, General Washington M. Elliott and General G. M. Dodge. In these campaigns he saw much severe service and was badly wounded. After leaving the army he removed to Fort Scott, Kan., where he was admitted to the bar in 1871. He was elected to the Kansas state senate, of which body he was a member for five years. He was twice a delegate to the Republican national convention. He removed to Topeka in 1893, entering the law firm of Gleed, Ware & Gleed, and took part in much of the important litigation in the west. Mr. Ware was a prominent railroad attorney, having been associated with the attorney general of Kansas in conducting litigation involving irrigation questions between Kansas and Colorado in the supreme court of the United States.

As Pension Commissioner.

President Roosevelt appointed Mr. Ware commissioner of pensions on April 11, 1902, to succeed H. Clay Evans of Tennessee.

According to friends, when Mr. Roosevelt offered Mr. Ware the place of pension commissioner Ware declined, saying he did not like the work. To this Mr. Roosevelt replied: "That is just the reason I want you to take it. The longer you hold the job the less you'll like it."

The Kansas accepted the office May 10, 1902, and it is said his resignation was placed at the disposal of Mr. Roosevelt May 11, 1902, to be accepted two years later.

Mr. Ware married at Rochester, in 1874, Jeannette P. Huntington. They had three daughters and one son. He was the author of many sketches, pamphlets and legal essays, and under the nom de plume of Ironquill had written many poems. Some opposition was made to his confirmation as commissioner of pensions by persons who took offense at alleged expressions of agnosticism in his "The Washerwoman's Song," the first verse of which follows:

In a very humble cot
In a rather quiet spot
In the eads and in the soap
Worked a woman full of hope,
Working, singing all alone
In a sort of undertone,
"With a Saviour for a friend
He will keep me to the end."

Mr. Ware is said to have been the first man in the United States to publish a pun on Admiral Dewey after the battle of Manila. The verses follow:

Oh, Dewey was the morning
That Dewey first of May,
And Dewey was the admiral
Down in Manila bay.

And Dewey are the Regent's orbs,
Those eyes of heavenly blue,
And Dewey feel discouraged?
We Dew not think we Dew.

Sendai a Great Town.

Sendai, with 100,000 inhabitants, is regarded as the greatest town in northern Japan. It is not only great in industry, rice, wheat and tea, but has many advanced scholastic institutions. The civilization of northeastern Japan is represented by Sendai.

Great Britain's Size.

Great Britain is about two-thirds the size of Hindustan, one-twelfth of China and one-twenty-fifth of the United States.

PRESIDENT TAFT IN THE ROLE OF CUPID.

Helped Along Love Affair of Senator Warren and Miss Morgan.

When Francis E. Warren, the sixty-seven-year-old senator from Wyoming, married Miss Clara Le Baron Morgan, thirty-five years old, President Taft's stock as a matchmaker went up several points. Senator Warren was one of the members of the Taft Philippine party, from which several marriages have resulted. On that trip it was reported that he was extremely attentive to Mrs. Mabel Nagle, the divorced wife of George H. Nagle of Cheyenne, Wyo. Their engagement was announced by Representative Grosvenor. That caused much comment, because it had been supposed Mrs. Nagle was to be married to Senator T. H. Patterson of Colorado.

Senator Warren entertained Mrs. Nagle lavishly in Washington and in Cheyenne, but there was no marriage after all.

Warren met Miss Morgan at an entertainment given by Mr. Taft seven years ago, when he was secretary of war.

"Would you like to own a ranch in the west and live among real, sure enough cowboys?" asked the secretary on that occasion.

"Indeed I would," replied Miss Morgan.

"Then I'll have to talk to Senator Warren about it," retorted Mr. Taft, who had seen the senator approaching through the crowd.

A short time ago, at the White House, Senator Warren sidled up to President Taft and informed the nation's chief executive that the seed he had sown seven years before had borne fruit.

Warren's first wife, Mrs. Helen H. Warren, died in 1902. His daughter is the wife of Major General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., and his son, who is associated with him in the conduct of their vast affairs in Wyoming, is a graduate of Harvard, 1905. Senator Warren is the only undertaker in congress, for among his many activities in his home state is an undertaking business.

Before Warren entered congress he was territorial governor of Wyoming. When Wyoming became a state he was elected governor.

AVIATION TOWER.

First of Its Kind Will Be Erected at Calais—To Be 450 Feet High.

Calais is to have the first aviation tower in the world, and, with poetic justice, this tower, which will be 450 feet high and 15 feet in diameter at the base, is being erected on the very spot where on July 25, 1909, Bleriot started on his memorable flight across the channel.

The object of this tower is to serve as a beacon or signal tower to aviators crossing the channel. It is to be trestlelated of wood without being entirely closed in. This is supposed to improve its visibility at a great distance and to distinguish it more easily from other objects in the landscape. The tower when complete will be easily visible at a great distance to aviators flying at a height of 1,500 or 2,000 feet. The tower is behind the semaphore of Barrages, and its position with regard to the points of the compass has been marked out by the captain of the steamer Pas de Calais.

FREAK IN ROSES.

One White and One Pink Grow on the Same Stem.

A deep, rich pink rosebud and a white one having a shade of yellow and both growing from the same stem was a freak discovered in the garden of A. F. P. Schneider of San Francisco and presented to the California development board, to be made one of the permanent exhibits in the board's museum.

The roses were produced by a ten-year-old Count de Pausen bush, and the white bud is accounted for in the influence of a white La Marque rose growing a few feet from the Count de Pausen bush.

Schneider is an enthusiastic grower of roses. His garden is always in bloom, but never before did it produce anything like the freak found recently. Both roses are perfect blooms, the Count de Pausen a long, pointed bud of perfect color, the white bud a shorter one, inclined to spread and to show its beautifully shaded center. Both roses have delightful perfumes.

TALLEST WOMAN TO WED.

Miss Powers is Seven Feet—He is Over Six Feet.

Mary Ellen Powers, for years Barnum's tallest woman, is to be married to Maurice T. Stapleton of Lockport, N. Y., one of the tallest men in the vicinity.

Miss Powers is owner of local real estate. She is seven feet in height. Stapleton is over six feet. About three years ago Miss Powers and Mr. Stapleton were to be married, but the event was called off on the morning set for the ceremony. No reason was given.

Korea's Gold Mines.

Korea has valuable gold mines, mainly owned and operated by Americans. Iron ores of excellent quality are mined, and there are copper mines in several places. The silver output is small.

WILLIAM, SON OF S. SIDIS.

At 13 years of age William Sidis has completed his second year in Harvard. He has studied trigonometry, geology, chemistry, zoology, rhetoric, grammar, ethics, physics, Latin, Greek, French, German and speaks Bostonese with ease. His father is a Harvard professor, and is ready to admit that William is the most wonderful boy that ever buried his nose in a book. From the heights of his learning William and father look down with disdain upon the boys who are plodding their way along in benighted schools held down by tyrant teachers.

Four old college owls, academic barnyard fowls, worn-out, sickly school bats," exclaims Professor Sidis in a tribute to the educators of the present day, "you are panic-stricken by the power of sunlight! You are in agonizing, mortal terror of critical, reflective thought. You dread and suppress the genius of the young." From this we infer that the owls and bats on the Harvard faculty must be jealous of William.

Not even his warmest defenders will contend that the present system of education is perfect. Professor Sidis, a psychologist of reputation, considers of paramount importance the period in the child's life, from 5 to 10 years of age, when he is "very inquisitive, asking all kinds of questions." Some parents and teachers, dull as they are, doubtless have noticed this tendency, but few have suspected that endless questioning is "the acquisition of control over the stored-up, latent energies of man's genius." Professor Sidis believes that if this tendency is encouraged "the child will acquire by his tenth year, without almost any effort, the knowledge which at present the best college graduate obtains with infinite labor and pains."

Dr. Sidis incidentally paints a charming picture of American home life—the mothers and daughters are in a wild rush after fashion, devoting their whole time to dress, gossip, society and show, while the father immerses himself in trade and spends his spare time in sports and games. "Not a spark of refinement and culture, not a redeeming ray of love of knowledge or of art light up the commonplace and frivolous life of the family," he remarks. He does not wonder that at 10 or 11 the children are ignorant little "brutes." He concludes that "commercial mediocrity is raised at home and cultivated in the school."

Yet out of the shadows of this dark age emerges a ray of light; it is the halo around the head of William.

This might lead us to hope, save for the fact that William is not the only infant phenomenon that ever astounded the world. We have had them before, babes and sucklings who surprised their elders. But few of them have ever fulfilled the promise of youth. The child wonder often subsides into a very commonplace man; and the boy who was not particularly bright at school many a time distances his fellows who lauged at his dullness. The race of life is not always to the swift, and the lasting successes are generally achieved by the plodders who have stability, persistence and have carved their way up step by step. How often have we seen the young man who took off all the college honors and led his class struggling vainly to make a living, while those not so brilliant climb to the top in the professions and in business. The big things have not always been achieved by those who were "quick at figures" and who "swallowed the book whole," who had the gift of eloquence. The boy who develops his body as well as his mind, who enjoys the games and sports of childhood and youth, will, as a rule, excel the lad who buries himself in books. Mere to-nook learning," is by no means the whole of education, and "education" in the collegiate sense is inadequate preparation for the duties of life. The student who learns with great ease is not infrequently superficial, for it is the common experience that the things we acquire with most expenditure of effort are those we retain longest.

The son of Sidis is a phenomenon, but the measure of a man cannot be taken until he has arrived at maturity, and often until he has reached middle age.
