Asthma!

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Jack McInnes, Athletics' Crack Young First Sacker.

When Connie Mack in an effort to stop his team's slump and to check the series of disasters at Detroit pulled Jack McInnes out of the lineup something was shown that seldom, possibly never, had been done before. To better the general effectiveness of his club he benched a man who had hit .361 in sixty-two games and who is neither a bonehead nor a bad ball player.

He had not secured a wonder to replace him, for he merely turned back to Harry Davis, who was never the hitter that McInnes has been this season and whose baseball days are numbered. The change incidentally lasted only two days, McInnes being placed back at the position. Taking .361 hitters out of the lineup to gain strength is something entirely new in the national pastime, especially when these hitters have been in nearly all of the games of their clubs.

In five of the ten seasons no batter hit as well as McInnes has done. In but one of the years has any man playing the same position, first base, reached his mark.

How Corhan Broke Into Baseball. Roy Corhan, the little shortstop on the Chicago White Sox, who is playing like a fixture just now, was discovered by the late Frank Selee some years ago when Selee was in charge of the Pueblo club of the Western league. Selee went down to Albuquerque, N. M., where they have a big baseball tournament every fall, and in looking over various players his eye fell upon Corhan and a young third baseman named Casey.

Selee took Corhan and Casey to Pueblo, and the former made good from the jump. Selee always contended that Casey was just as good a natural player, but the youngster never got to going good in league company and finally disappeared. Corhan was his particular pride, and he always contended that with a full opportunity he would make good anywhere. Corhan is a very fast fielder, but until recently was regarded as a light hitter. He has commenced to pick up in that line, and it looks like he will stick at the short field the balance of the sea-

New Record For Running to First. John "Rabbit" Burke, center fielder of the Columbia South Atlantic league team, broke the world's record recently, it is claimed, for bunt and run to first base, three times getting to the bag in three seconds flat, according to two stop watches. The world's record, made by Thoney, now of Boston, at Cincinnati in 1907, stood at 3 1-5 seconds. Burke's record was made at the field day benefit for the Columbia and Albany players held at Columbia.

New Ball Much Faster. Speaking of the cork center ball, Neal Ball says: "It comes off the ground like a billiard ball taking English off the rail. I don't exaggerate when I tell you I've had the ball come at me so fast that I didn't have time to get down to it. Don't you see the troubles even the outfielders are having with bounding balls?"

Coach Rice Signs Long Contract. As a result of the excellent show ing of the Columbia crews in the recent big regatta at Poughkeepsie, Columbia university has signed Coach Jim Rice for ten years and, besides, has raised his salary $500 a year. The sum now paid Rice is said to be the largest of any paid rowing coach in the country.

Jennings Likes College Players. Hughie Jennings has suddenly taken a great liking to college ball players. He had one of his sconts scoming the eastern schools recently. He caught six possibilities in his dregnet. They will be tried out for use next season providing they are needed

A BASHFUL MAN'S LOVE STORY

How He Came to Win the Girl of His Choice.

'Henry Teale is a gawk!"

I heard the words across the garden wall. I am Henry Teale. The speaker was Kate Harker, who was talking with her cousin, Marion Drowne.

"But he knows things," replied Mar-

"What matters it if he does. He is too bashful and reserved to tell what he knows. There isn't a girl in the place who doesn't dread to be left alone with him."

"Don't you think some of them might overcome their aversion if he should suddenly become wealthy? "I don't think I could stand him if he were worth"-I was lying in a hammock in the back yard reading. I got up and went into the house, but as this scrap of conversation occupied but a few moments I could not very well avoid hearing it. To do myself justice, I did not wish to hear myself discussed. Kate Harker's semarks were intensely painful to me, so painful that I resolved to leave the place of my birth and go forth into the great world, hoping to forget them.

I did not forget them, but I had the sensitiveness knocked out of me very quickly. I made money, made it out of nothing, and to do this I was obliged to master my feelings. "To those who have shall be given," and by the death of an aunt I inherited a fortune. I owned the little tumbledown house with the acre of ground about it in which I had lived with my mother, and since she was no longer living resolved to go back and dispose of

The day after my arrival I rigged hammock in the back yard and tay down in it with a cigar and a book. Pretty soon I heard voices over the

"Have you seen him?"

"Yes; I was peeping through the blinds when he came."

I recognized the first voice as that of Marion, the second as that of Kate. This was all I heard, for the two girls

In the evening I called on my neighbor. Kate Harker received me as if I were her oldest and best friend, making no attempt to conceal the favor I had found in her eyes since she had pronounced me a gawk. Marion was very reserved. Indeed, had I been as unsophisticated as when I had heard her say "But he knows things!" I should have concluded that she had turned against me. But a man can't make money without gaining a knowledge of human nature. I suspected that Marion now held aloof from a feeling that since I had become a desirable "catch" it was not her place to court me.

"You young ladies must be more careful as to your words," I said. "Before I went away I overheard a scrap of conversation with regard to me that gave me great pain."

Both looked at me uneasily.

"You two were talking in the garden. One said, 'He's a gawk!' the other, 'But he knows things!' " The two girls looked at each other

"I remember no such conversation," id Kate. Ma "Do you, Marion?" I asked

"No, but candor compels me to say that at that time the criticisms were "The first surely was, though I am not so certain about the second. But the justness of it all could have no effect on a boy of nineteen. I have for years felt harshly toward the one who called me a gawk and kindly to her who said 'But he knows things!'

"Then you recognized their voices," said Kate, paling slightly. "Tell us who called you a gawk."

"I may have attributed the remark to the wrong girl, but to whomsoever toss this pin let her stand accused." Taking a pearl pin from my scarf, I cossed it to Marion.

The distress on Marion's face was painful to see. Kate blushed, and the guilty look on her face was equally distressing. She struggled with herself to take the blame that she knew belonged to her, but without success. I waited to see if Marion would place it where it belonged, but she did not. She handed my pin back to me.

"Keep it as a token that you are for given," I said. But she was resolute, and I at last placed the jewel again in my scarf. I waited a week, leaving the girls free, the one to assume her just burden, the other to place it upon her friend. I paid Kate marked attention and treated Marion with indifference. I had learned selfishness myself, but admired that sense of honor which prevented Marion from throwing the blame on Kate. Meanwhile I took satisfaction in Marion's distress. The fact of baving called me a gawk was nothing to her discredit. I know that it was the loss of my favor that pain-

"Marion," I said one day, "have you epented having called me a gawk?"

She gave me no reply. "Well, you had better dismiss the matter from your mind. In the first ptace, I was not only a gawk, but a nimy. In the second, it was not you who spoke the word, but Kate. In the third, I love you and want you to go back with me as my with So indignant was she at the pain I had given her that she keet me waiting a year and then only consented on condition that I apologize
