-Philip Ryan, who for about 40 years had been employed as track foreman on the old Gravity railroad, stated to a Citizen representative this week, referring to the recent railroad disasters, that the time would come when the State would appoint an inspector to examine the railroad tracks and see if there were anything wrong in the construction of the roadbed ties, or track and if so have it made right at once. The inspector should be employed by the individual railroad company. By this means it would be the saving of thousands of lives that are now being lost owing to defective railroad tracks. Mr. Ryan suggests that a bill be passed at the next legislature. The suggestion is a good one, the inspector of course to be a practical railroad man.

CLEANING LACE.

When lace is only slightly soiled may sometimes be satisfactorily cleaned by rubbing lightly into it a mixture of equal quantities of fine salt and flour, leaving a while, then shaking the powder out, and, if necessary, brushing with a soft, clean brush, and dry magnesia will sometimes serve the purpose.

When cleaning old or valuable lace at home another method may jar, having a piece of linen sewn tightly around it, making sure that all points and edges are well pulled out into their proper position, and that no crumpling or folding occurs, The winding will be easier if the end of the lace is sewn to the linen on the jar, and the other end must also be finally tacked down to keep it in position.

For short lengths or shaped pieces of lace use linen in place of the jar, tacking them carefully to it so that the cotton holds every single point securely in its right place; then fold the linen smoothly. Next thoroughly saturate the lace with the best sweet oil and leave it for a few hours, until next morning, if it is convenient when it must be boiled in a lather made of white castile or other good soap and boiling water until the lace is quite clean, which will take about twenty minutes for fine kinds, longer for those made of coarser thread.—Philadelphia In-

CROP CONDITIONS.

While the wheat crop has been a care to keep the edges in good disappointment, according to the shape, threads straight, etc., and Wall Street Journal, yet the situation does not justify extreme pessimism. The carry-over from last year is estimated at 80,000,000 bushels; and, with the indicated yield of 664,000,000 bushels, would give us a total of 724,000,000 bushels. Seed and consumptive requirements call for about 540,000,000 bushels, for about 540,000,000 bushels, leaving at least 124,000,000 bushels for reserves and export without considering the Canadian crop. Weather conditions in the North-west for the next few days will decide whether our wheat yield will be more or less than the government's indicated yield of 664,000,-

> The corn crop is being watched with unusual interest this season. The last estimate of the government placed the bay crop at more than twenty-two per cent. less than the five-year average, a loss of nearly 15,000,000 tons. This in part has been made up by the farmers sow-ing catch-crops. But the entire loss cannot be retrieved. As for feeding purposes (not fattening) a ton of hay is equivalent to thirtyfive bushels of corn, or a corres-ponding weight in oats, it will be seen how seriously this one shortage will be a drain on the corn yield Over some of the corn belt the drought has been broken, but while this will benefit the late plantings yet it will not put ears on corn that is tasseled and past the earing stage. In a large portion of the belt drought has caused poor earing. While it cannot be said that to date the crop as a whole has lost ground since the last government report, it certainly has not gained materially. The crop is not as well rooted as it was last season, and therefore is not as able to withstand adverse conditions. Plowing is going on for Winter wheat seeding with an acreage esti-mated as well above that of last year. The worst of it is there is a general lack of subsoil moisture. We have no right to assume that the usual Autumn rains will not come in due time and be sufficient to make up the present deficiency Nevertheless over large areas of the agricultural regions the moisture supply is deficient, as shown by the precipitation records, and has been since 1910. Wheat last Fall in western portions of the Winter belt western portions of the Winter belt was sown in what was practically dust, and the other cereals went into the ground this Spring where moisture supply was lacking, to take their chances with nature against them. The result is now apparent. The effects of heat and drought in a great measure can be overcome by cultural methods. The whole country would be immensely benefited if from this the farmers would learn to depend upon cultivation rather than acreage for their gross returns.-Tribune-Republican.
