He is Attorney Homer Greene. No cleaner man ever entered politics.

—Arrangements have been perfected by the postoffice department at Washington whereby second-class mail matter, consisting of magazines and periodicals heretofore transported in railway mail cars, will be carried by fast freight. —A peep into the first deed book on file in the register and recorder's office, when Wayne was known as Northampton county and comprised Wayne and Pike besides Northampton, revealed a number of interesting and out-of-the-ordinary features. The deeds were written in pen and ink and had the appearance of an engraved piece of art—more the work of an artisan than recorder. Then in those days it is evident that the register and recorder necessarily was a good penman. Every page of the old docket was evenly written, the letters being shaded and the appearance was beautiful. John Broadhead recorded the first deed dated July 10, 1797, which was transferred from John Biddis, of Northampton, to James Humes, of Milford, for land in Northampton county, consideration being $42. A page averaged 840 words, 14 words to the line and 60 lines to the page. At another place in the book appeared the title of the deed written in capital letters, which is very odd.

SEPTEMBER 1 IN NEW YORK STATE.

From Friday on, in this State it will be felony to carry a concealed weapon and misdemeanor to own a firearm. A license costing $10 will enable you to be armed. But that may be more than the old revolver you might think is worth. To be safe you might think it is worth, although it is reasonably safe to let it stay in the trunk, since the police cannot search your house without a warrant and the offence of possession is a misdemeanor only. But it will go hard with the thug or brawler caught with a "gun" in his pocket.

From Friday on, prize fighting will be resumed after eleven years of paper outlawry. The bouts cannot last more than ten rounds and must be fought with eight-ounce gloves in buildings safe-guarded against fire and under the direction of licensed clubs which will forfeit $10,000 if these conditions are violated or if there is a sham fight.

From Friday on, it will be illegal to paint or paste an advertisement on the property of another without his consent or to post advertising on the highways. It will be legal for any one to remove highway advertising, and the Good Roads Committee of the Automobile Club has appointed Friday as "clean up day," when all drivers are urged to destroy these offences wherever found.

From Friday on, the slaughter of wild game in America will be materially checked by the virtual closing of its greatest market. It will be against the law in this State to sell all game save deer, black ducks, mallards and pheasants bred in captivity, and certain stock imported from Europe.

These four laws just about offset each other. It will be profitable to kill game for the market, and with one's pistol taken away it will be hard to kill anything else. But one can legally satisfy his destructive propensities by smashing highway advertisements or by watching duly licensed pugilists smash each other. —New York World.

FINE SALADS.

Pineapple in lettuce nests: Cut a pineapple into small pieces. And one cupful of finely chopped celery, one cupful of walnut meats, and one cupful of orange pulp. Shred one head of lettuce very finely and form into nests on individual plates. Mix one cupful of mayonnaise and stir it lightly with the pineapple, etc.; add more mayonnaise, if the fruit is not sufficiently moist, and heap into the little lettuce nests. Decorate with chopped walnuts.

Salade de la Versailles: Boil six artichokes, separate the "fonds" from the leaves, and cut into small pieces. Put in a salad bowl with an equal quantity of asparagus points that have been cooked in salted water. Take a handful of salted almonds, chop them fine, pound them with the juice of two lemons and a half a pint of cream, salt and pepper, and pour over the salad. A little mayonnaise may be added to the salad, but it is more delicate in flavor without it. With cold chicken nothing is more excellent than a salad of carrots, cucumbers and hard-boiled eggs, all cut in rings and sent to table with this dressing. Two tablespoonfuls of olive oil with one of lemon juice, with salt, pepper and a speck of sugar to taste.

Mushroom salad: Remove the skin and almost all the stalk from some button mushrooms, drop them into boiling salted water, and cook for three minutes. Lay them on a napkin, and when quite cold sprinkle them with pepper and salt and finely chopped parsley. Lay on a dish and pour over two tablespoonfuls of oil to one of tarragon vinegar.

Shrimp salad a la Bretagne: Shell a quart of boiled shrimps and lay them on young lettuce leaves in a salad bowl. Chill some mayonnaise sauce on ice, pour over the shrimps and serve.

THE PIAZZA PARTY.

Some Games for Girls to Play On Hot Evenings.

For some reason or other girls always have more sense than boys. If you don't believe this ask the next girl you meet and listen to her reply. Another proof is that girls do not run around during these stifling summer evenings playing tag and prisoner's base and getting all tired and hot. They are content to sit on the cool piazza and talk and they do not much care whether the boys join them or not. Any girl will tell you this is also true.

But there are evenings which are too pleasant to just sit around and be lazy in and girls want some quiet game to play that will amuse them until it is time for mother to bring out the party and serve the ice cream. There are a number of games that are good fun and do not call for any physical exertion or metaphorical puns. Of course there are always riddles to be asked and answered, but these are a little passe now and the popular "daffydill" has taken their place. Any bright girl can make these up and a little prize may be offered by the hostess of the evening for the girl who thinks up the "daffydill" that will vote to be the keenest. Shadow charades are easy to act as all that is necessary for their production is to stretch a sheet across an open window and place a lamp at the proper distance for throwing silhouettes. Then one group of girls acts out a word in shadow pantomime while the other, seated on the piazza, guesses the answer. When one has been correctly guessed the two groups exchange places.

A game that girls of from eight to 12 can obtain a good lot of fun from is called "What shall I take to the picnic?" Probably mother remembers how it was played. Ask her if she doesn't you can be let into the secret, but you mustn't tell any of your friends, or it would spoil the fun. Suppose you and a dozen or so of your friends are sitting on the front steps. You announce that you are going to give a picnic and ask Betty Jones, who sits next to you, what she will take to add to the luncheon. Maybe she will say ice cream and cake. Well, she can't go, and you tell her so. If she had said that she would butter and jam she could have gone. Why? Because these things begin with the same letters that her names do. So you ask all the other. Only a few will give answers that will permit an invitation being extended to them and it will take the greatest part of the party a long time to catch the trick in the game.

Then there is the "Blind man's singing school." This is a game that will appeal strongly to father, if he is reading his paper, or to mother if she is trying to put the baby to sleep. But it is a good game and they will not care if you play it. Both of them used to when they were little. First you choose one of the girls teacher and blind-fold her. Then the others sit in front of her, but not until after her eyes have been covered so that she will not know the position of anyone. The teacher then tells the girl at the head of the line to begin to sing some popular song. She must only sing the first word. The next girl sings the second word, the third girl the third word, and so on up and down the line. The teacher can stop the song at any moment and try to guess the name of the girl who sang the last word. If she guesses correctly, that girl has to be teacher. By the time you have played these games the party will be ready and the boys snooping 'round to see if they can get some of the cake.

CARRYING OF DOGS.

Railroad Rates Have Advanced Much the Same for Canines as For Persons.

"Dogs not exceeding twenty-five pounds and increased rates of transportation since the new passenger rates became effective on August 1.

The new rates and rules are given under Rule 31 of the recent tariff, as filed, which says:

Dogs not exceeding twenty-five dollars in value, and not entered for exhibition, bench shows or field trials, if provided with properly fitting collars and strong chains, or in crates, and if accompanied by owner or caretaker, will be checked and transported in baggage cars, and charge made at regular excess baggage rates for gross weight. The minimum charge for each dog on chain, or for each crate containing one of more dogs, will be the regular charge for one hundred pounds of excess baggage between the same points, except that between points on the system named the minimum rates and collections will be fifteen cents.

"Dogs on chains or in crates will not be checked beyond points where wagon or ferry transfer is required. "Dogs do not form any part of the baggage allowances."

Under the old rule the minimum rate for the carrying of dogs was ten cents, when a receipt was given the owner, and the dog was practically at the owner's risk and care. This minimum rate has been increased to 15 cents, and while dogs may still be carried under the old system, they may now be checked and transferred at junction points from one train to another without any attention on the part of the owner.

It was said recently that the checking rule was not a hard and fast rule, and that gunners might be permitted to look after their dogs on the train as heretofore, but the charges will be the same and will be based on the excess baggage rate.

The table of excess baggage rates for a hundred pounds, which will be the rate look after their dogs on the train as given in the public published tariff sheets, averages about one-sixth of the price of the highest first class limited ticket purchased for the owner. In other words, when the fare is based on the two-cent-a-mile rate the fare for the dog averages about one-third of a cent.

THE APPLE SEED CHALCIS.

A comparatively new insect is seriously injuring the apples in some portions of Northeastern Pennsylvania. It is a very small fly or gnat which pierces the fruit, and lays its eggs so that its larvae or young develop in the seeds of the apple, and it is hence called the Apple seed chalcis. It results in dwarfed and deformed fruits. Because the insect is not generally observed, and the little maggot itself lives within the seed, few persons know that such fruits are not due to dry weather, starvation, lack of pruning and spraying, and other causes, which might result in dwarfed products.

A correspondent in Bradford, Pa., wrote to State Zoologist Surface, asking how worms get into apple seeds. He stated also that he found a worm in the meaty part or pulp of the apple. The reply of Professor Surface was as follows:

"I am glad to receive your letter making inquiry as to how worms get into apple seeds. This is the Apple seed chalcid. The egg is laid in a seed by a very small fly, with a very long ovipositor or egg guide. This pest is already becoming quite serious in the northern part of our State, but, unfortunately, the people are not ready to listen to what we have to say about it. It may be a few years before they will be willing to act in concert and destroy it. It is not difficult to get rid of the Apple seed chalcid and prevent loss by it, if the people will only do so.

The method is to destroy all the little knotty and deformed apples. This really could be done before or after they naturally drop from the tree. The Apple seed chalcid remains in the seed during the winter. Thus if the apples were destroyed before winter, the pests would likewise be ended.

The chief feature of the work of this pest is that the apples are stunted in size, remain bunched together in clusters, and are often more or less deformed or misshapen. We have worked upon the life history of this insect, and now have it worked out.

While I and my inspectors have known of this insect for three or four years in this state, and have known of its possibilities of great destruction, it is rather remarkable that your's has been first inquiry upon this pest. Persons having clusters of small dwarfed apples should examine the seeds in them to see if there is a little grub or larvae in them. If so, they may know that it is the Apple seed chalcid, and that such fruit should be destroyed. Also, it is important that the seedling and worthless trees in the neighborhood be destroyed to prevent the breeding of such pests.

It is very probable that the worm or larva in the meat or pulp of the apple you mention, is not the Apple seed chalcid but the Railroad maggot. This is the larva of a fly, and it is best destroyed by picking up and destroying the fallen fruit within less than a week from the time they drop. Therefore, pigs or sheep in the orchard to destroy the fallen fruit quite promptly would prove very beneficial in helping to prevent such pests.
