Last November the deceased had an affection of the throat that rendered him speechless, which developed into tuberculosis of the throat. He has been confined to the house since last July. Mr. Wilson was an expert glass cutter, but owing to his condition could not work steady at the trade. He was a member of the Honesdale Baptist church and was always very active in every department of church work. For some time he was a deacon in the church. His pastor Rev. G. S. Wendell, conducted the funeral last Saturday afternoon from the home of his uncle, Dean Reynolds, Torrey, Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Interment was made in the Union cemetery, Calkins. He is survived by his mother, of Torrey, and one brother, Irving, living in North Dakota. The deceased was Honesdale's census enumerator for 1910 and was an exemplary young man.

DEATH OF PROF. F. A. MARCH.

Prof. F. A. March, Sr., father of Prof. Thomas S. March, of Greensburg, formerly of Honesdale, died at him home in Easton Saturday afternoon. He was 85 years of age. In January last he fell and suffered a broken hip, since which time he had been confined to his home. Dr. March had a world-wide reputation as a philologist. In his long career as one of the leading English scholars of the world he wrote many books.

Dr. March also took the direction, in 1878, of the work in America for the "New English Dictionary on Historical Principles" of the Philological Society of England, published by the University of Oxford.

He was considered almost from the beginning of his career, a final authority on words concerning whose origin there was a dispute among scholars. His work as chief consulting editor in the compilation of the "Standard Dictionary" is viewed as a notable achievement by etymologists.

The writings of Dr. March were not confined to philology. In 1860 he contributed articles on philological subjects to "The Princeton Review," which were reprinted in London the next year and led to a correspondence with Victor Cousin. He edited a series of text-books to be used in the study of Christian classics entirely preparing a selection of Latin hymns.

At the outbreak of the Civil war he published a series of letters, outlining a scheme for amending the Constitution of the United States, intended to bring about a peaceful settlement of the difficulties between the North and the South. They attracted much attention, and were read in Congress, in the Virginia Legislature and elsewhere.

Dr. March received recognition of his work in Europe as well as in America. He held degrees from Oxford and Cambridge universities. Princeton and Amherst gave him the degree of L. L. D. and Columbia that of L. A. D. He was president of many societies in America, England and France. In 1891 he succeeded James Russell Lowell as president of the Modern Language Association.
