A DANGEROUS CROSSING.

The road leading to the coal pockets which passes over the different railroad tracks, is very dangerous. Wednesday afternoon the freight was being switched. The engine had gone down the line and a short distance behind it followed a freight car, which was unobserved by the driver of the Gurney Elevator team. The horses had partly crossed the track when the freight car was fast approaching them. The driver could not advance and was compelled to back the team off the track. It was a close call. Had there not been a brakeman upon the car in all probability the men and horses would have been killed. This is a dangerous crossing at all times and the company ought to provide in some manner, either by gates or a watchman, for the protection of the many teams and drivers who daily pass over this crossing.

HOW SUGAR HAS JUMPED IN ONE MONTH.

One of the most remarkable commercial incidents in the present sky-rocket market for raw sugar was developed when a vessel laden with sugar from Java arrived in Philadelphia to establish the fact that, in its voyage of little more than a month, the price of the commodity had advanced to an extent almost equal to the duties on the cargo, which were about $150,000.

The Philadelphia consignees, in other words, found that the rise in the sugar market while the cargo was on the sea had in effect nearly paid the duties and that they stood financially in about the same position they would have been if they had received the sugar duty free.

It was the British steamer Kwara which brought 6000 tons of Java sugar to Philadelphia. When the Kwara sailed from Java on August 1 the ruling market price for Java sugar was 14 shillings 6 pence for 112 pounds. Upon her arrival here the market quotation for 112 pounds of Java sugar had advanced four shilling to 18 shillings 6 pence. Mathematicians of the Commercial Exchange quickly figured that the enhanced value of the sugar cargo during the voyage represented in our money within a few thousand dollars of the $150,000 to be paid in duties at the Custom House.

We suppose that the owners are sorry now they didn't make a longer voyage, because if the present increase in price keeps up they could probably have bought another steamer out of the proceeds.

THE STATE HOSPITAL.

Scranton is well favored in the matter of hospitals, without which it would be seriously embarrassed. In a community such as it is, where so many people are engaged in occupations considered hazardous, hospitals are especially needed, particularly one controlled by the State, which is in duty bound to care for the homeless or for those unable to provide for themselves, especially in emergency cases.

The work of providing maintenance for the hospitals of Scranton furnishes one of the brightest and most interesting pages in the city's history. Naturally, the State hospital takes first place among these institutions because of its superior advantages.

What the State hospital is doing for the community was shown at the annual meeting held there on Tuesday when the Hon. E. B. Hardenbergh of Honesdale was elected President of the Board of Trustees. The year just ended has been the busiest in its history. Two thousand, three hundred and seven patients have been admitted. An aggregate of 43,178 days were spent in the hospital by in-patients. In addition to all these, 3,004 dispensary cases were treated during the year and 5,496 dispensary visits were made. The average number of patients in the hospital each day in the year was 114. The total expenditures for the year were $73,514.65.

These figures are eloquent and speak for themselves. What our needs require is even more liberal treatment by the state in the way of appropriations. Private charity is already taxed to the straining point in caring for other institutions.

EXTRAVAGANCE AS A CAUSE FOR DIVORCE.

Fifty men in Pittsburg in one day applied for divorce on the ground that their respective wives are extravagant. The majority of these men are in fairly comfortable circumstances, or would be, according to their contentions, if their wives had any idea of the value of money. One, a salaried man getting $70 a week, stated that in a year his wife had bought forty-four hats and twenty-nine gowns, eating up entirely $1000 he had saved besides using up all his salary. Others reported similarly.

The money problem has undoubtedly become one of the principal reasons for dissension in families, and is one of the most fruitful causes of domestic infelicity. An extravagant wife can work havoc with a man's peace of mind, but there are two sides to the story. Many men are not so frank with their helpmeets as they should be. The wife oftentimes knows little of her husband's financial condition. She sees the money come in regularly and, feminine-like, argues that there is always more where it came from. In a great many instances, too, men have married women who were accustomed to having more than their husbands can give them.

Where real affection exists reason, of course, can be used. Absolute frankness on the part of a husband may bring to a wife a realizing sense of the wreck she is making of the happiness of both. Where love does not exist the conditions are different and it appears that there is but one of two courses to follow. Either he husband must take a firm grip on the reins himself or they must go their separate ways.

Candor in the first place, however, would save the divorce courts a lot of work. If marriage were looked upon not only in the light of a partnership for mutual return of affection, but as a business agreement as well, and a thorough understanding were reached before the twain were united there would be few requests for divorce in which the dollars and cents figure as the principal cause. But then this may be too much to expect. Love is blind and the sordid, vulgar question of money has no place in the scheme of destiny which the average man and woman figure out for themselves—before marriage. After it—well, that's just what we have been trying to explain.

VOTEISMS.

Be on the winning side and vote a straight Republican ticket.

The campaign promises to be an interesting one. You are interested in the election of the Republican candidates nominated. Do your part to elect them.

Only two of the Republican nominees live in Honesdale. Six out of the seven Democratic candidates are residents of Honesdale.

Vote the representative ticket. The nominees on the Republican ballot spell Wayne county, while the Democratic candidates—Honesdale.

When you stand before your ballot on election day make an "X" mark in the square marked "Republican," and you will never regret it. By doing so you will help elect men who have been tested. Stand by your party, boys.

ANNIVERSARY OF A GREAT FIRE.

The people of Chicago observed the 40th anniversary of that city's "big fire," on Monday. The announcement serves to recall that tremendous conflagration, one of the greatest ever known in an American city, and having few parallels in the world's history. The Chicago fire began about 9 o'clock on the evening of Sunday, October 8, 1871, the current reports stating that it was due to the kicking over of a lamp by a cow which was being milked at the time. The flames originated in a small barn in the western part of the city, and spread with unexampled rapidity through the heart of the municipality, carrying destruction to the finest buildings the place could boast. It was not until the early morning of October 10 that the fire was checked, and by that time the burned space was 2,124 acres in extent. The main business and residential sections were devastated, there was large loss of life, estimated at about 300, and the value of the property consumed was placed at $200,000,000. These are impressive figures.

Moscow was burned in 1812 to prevent the city being the place of shelter for Napoleon and his troops; but the Moscow loss was $150,000,000. Even the ruin wrought by the Paris Communists in 1871 did not equal that at Chicago, for the total charged to the fanatical incendiaries was $150,000,000. There have been other big fires in the United States, including that in Boston in 1872, but they did not rival the Chicago conflagration, Boston's loss being $75,000,000. Baltimore had a $50,000,000 blaze in 1904. The only visitation that surpassed Chicago in the actual loss inflicted was that at San Francisco in 1906, when $350,000,000 damage was done. But in that case responsibility was divided between the earthquake and the fire. One feature of the Chicago celebration will be an effort to secure a general cleaning up of buildings and yards, with a view of removing inflammable refuse. That is a good idea, and the lesson should be impressive. Care of that kind constantly exercised would be effective in reducing the fire loss of the country, now so lamentably large.

MARRIED AT CAZNOVIA SEMINARY.

The marriage of Jeanne Marie Guyot of Pueblo, Colo., and Paul Edward Illman of Syracuse, N. Y., was solemnized in the spacious parlors at Caznovia Seminary by the groom's cousin, Dr. C. D. Skinner on Tuesday evening, Sept. 3, 1911. The bride, who is a beautiful western girl, was attired in a white gown which added to her girlish simplicity. Mrs. Illman is a 1911 graduate of Wellesley College, Mass., and will be associated with her husband in settlement work. Mr. Illman is the second son of Dr. Walter Illman, who for many years practiced in Port Jervis. After Dr. Illman's death the mother, who was Abigail Skinner Illman, came to her old home in Milanville in which place Paul spent his boyhood days. Mr. Illman was the first graduate of the Damascus High school from there he attended Caznovia Seminary for one year. The next three were spent at Wyoming Seminary where he made a good record in both studies and athletics and graduated in 1904. The next two years were spent in hard work at Syracuse University. From there he entered Harvard and graduated with highest honors in 1909. While at Harvard Mr. Illman became interested in charitable work in Boston and after his graduation was appointed secretary of the United Societies of Charity at Buffalo, N. Y. During the past year Mr. Illman was made head of the Syracuse Charity work where he is at present doing excellent work. During this winter Mr. Illman will give a course of lectures (pertaining to his work) at the Syracuse University) and at Caznovia Seminary. Mr. and Mrs. Illman went directly to their furnished home on State street, Syracuse. The only guest beside Dr. Skinner's family was the bride's intimate friend, Miss Madeline Jean Randol of Cleveland, Ohio.

THE STOURBRIDGE LION.

(By S. S. Robinson)

A little boy with golden hair,
Sat on an old man's knee,
"Was that old Stourbridge Lion fierce?"

He said, "Grandpa tell me."
"Ah, no my child," he then replied,
"It was no beast at all—
It was a very queer machine—
A locomotive small!"

CHORUS:
"Choo, choo, choo, choo, it smoked and puffed,
Choo, choo, choo, choo it went,
Choo, choo, choo, choo it fairly flew,
Till all its force was spent,
Choo, choo, choo, choo, choo—
The wheels went swiftly 'round—
It was the first machine like that
To roll on Freedom's ground."

"The villagers came out to see
The Lion run by steam,
They gazed with wonderment and awe—
It seemed just like a dream,
To see that mass of iron and steel,
Go like a thing possessed—
As if it was distressed."

"Horatio Allen was the man
Who was the engineer,
He pulled the throttle open wide,
And had but little fear,
As on the narrow track it went
With all its strength and might,
The people cheered and waved their hats,
Till it was out of sight."

THE AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHER

Taking Pictures.

When attempting to photograph children who are not familiar with the Kodak or the process, place the Kodak in position and then go about doing something else for a little while until they become accustomed to its presence, even allowing them to handle the Kodak if they so desire.

Simple costumes photograph best, and the children feel more at home in them.

White and the lighter colors are especially well adapted for children's costumes, not only adding to the youth of the subjects, but aiding you in that you may employ a shorter exposure.

When it comes to the grown ups a certain amount of posing is necessary, though as you become accustomed to the work it may be minimized by so arranging the seat they are to occupy, or the other incidentals of your picture, that they will involuntarily assume the pose desired.

For Amateurs Eastman Kodaks & Films lead all others. Eastman Chemicals are tested. Ask or send for free copy of the new Kodak catalogue and booklets.

NEVILLE HOLGATE.

Neville Holgate, Democratic candidate for County Commissioner, was born in Texas township in the house now owned by Gates Douglas and situated on the Honesdale and Prompton road, west of Fortonia. At the age of about three years, a trifle over half a century ago, his parents removed from his birth place to Mt. Pleasant township. A few years later, Benjamin Holgate purchased a tract of forest land in West Damascus. Here his early youth was passed, helping to clear off the woodland and make tillable the soil. Mr. Holgate remained with his father in this place until he was 24 years old. The farm is still owned and occupied and operated by her grand-son, Chester Holgate.

Mr. Holgate married Tamsen daughter of the late John Dennis of West Damascus, Oct. 14, 1875. The then young couple first settled on a farm in West Damascus, but subsequently purchased a place at Girland in Lebanon township where Mr. Holgate was postmaster for eleven years, having held the office under both Republican and Democratic administrations. He still owns and operates this farm. During the past thirty years he has been engaged as a salesman for Martin Caulfield's marble and granite works at Honesdale. Fourteen years ago he removed from Girland to this place in order to be in closer touch with the headquarters of his employer.

The fact that Mr. Holgate has been such a large number of years in the employ of one establishment, speaks well for his faithfulness, honesty and integrity and competency as a business man. His clean, irreproachable life as a citizen merits for him the fullest confidence of his fellowmen. He has a wide acquaintance throughout Wayne county and numerous friends, all of whom will doubtless extend to him their assistance in securing his election, because such efforts will mean the placing of a man in the County Commissioners' office who will perform its duties honestly and competently and in the interests of those whom he will be placed there to serve.

Though past sixty years of age, he has never before asked the voters of Wayne county for any office and pledges himself, if elected, to do everything in his power to protect and serve the interests of the taxpayers of Wayne county.
