—William H. Ham, one of Honesdale's best known citizens and former councilman of this borough, stated to a Citizen representative on Tuesday that upon his recommendation the borough purchased steam fire engines to replace the hand pumps. "The boys," he stated, "became lazy and would not work at fires. The borough could not stand for anything like this as the town might burn up just on account of the lack of ambition on the part of the firemen by not working the pump engine. I believe it was in 1862 when I was on the council and I held out for steamers to replace the old pump engines. It was two years afterwards before the steamers were ordered. The 'Atkinson' was purchased first and this was followed shortly by the 'R. W. Ham.' I was thinking how nice it would be and it would also furnish something for the people to talk about if the firemen in their parade on Friday would divide their procession into sections. For instance, in the first section have men carrying pails, representing the bucket brigade. Then if an old pump engine could be secured or rigged up it would demonstrate in a way the facilities we used to have to fight fires. In a second division the firemen could wear red shirts and caps, showing an advance. The third section could represent some of the oldest members of the original companies, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, and the fourth section would consist of the up-to-date firemen with their chemical engines and other modern apparatus for fighting fire."

—Scout Master E. G. Jenkins returned Monday from Tarrytown and Brewster, N. Y. In Brewster there is an active Troop of Scouts organized about a year ago. Scout master Jenkins was invited to attend their meeting Friday evening and told the boys of the doings of Honesdale Troop. Among other things he spoke of the Bob White signal used by the Scouts here and was pleased the next day when each Brewster Scout he passed gave him the signal and salute. The boys at Brewster have been making a study of trees, flowers and birds found in that section. One Scout read a list of 47 birds he could identify. Many of the boys wear their suits Saturdays and indeed few days pass without seeing Scouts in uniform there. They are always on the lookout for some thing to do whereby they can fulfill their scout law in doing at least one kind deed without pay every day. As Scout Master Jenkins returned by auto, he passed through the towns of New York state, and frequently gave the scout sign to groups of boys and in nearly every case was saluted by scouts. The Honesdale Troop will meet Thursday evening at the school house. A number of the boys are nearly ready for second class Scout tests and the Scout Master believes that he will have several first-class scouts before the end of the year. The first aid work which the doctors have been giving has been most instructive and interesting and the boys greatly appreciate the willingness with which they have given their services.

WHAT IS THE USE?

[By S. S. Robinson.]

Oh, what is the use of complaining, When Poverty knocks at your door?

While Fortune, to smile, is disdainful, As shyly she treasures her store.

Oh, what is the use to be grumbling, When clouds hide the sun from your view?

And thunders are angrily rumbling, Behind is perpetual blue.

Oh, what is the use to be whining, When things in this world go awry?

There's nothing to gain by repining, All things will come right by and by.

Oh, what is the use of complaining? Be brave, in the Battle of Life! Each conquest some victory gaining, Rejoice, in the midst of the strife!

It is interesting to find that while there was a great increase in exports that with very few exceptions the position of the nations as customers was little changed. Denmark was the only customer that purchased less from us in the last fiscal year than in the previous one.

MOVING PICTURES.

Ingenuous Methods of Producing Startling Effects.

The ingenuity of man is exercised to a wonderful degree in the creation of novel and seemingly impossible situations and episodes for production in the moving picture shows, and audiences are often bewildered in trying to decide how the curious effects, which at times seem to contradict the laws of nature, are secured. Yet, like the conjurer's tricks, it is all very simple when the veil is lifted.

There are some scenes depicted which while amazing enough in their way do not puzzle the critical beholder in solving the ways and means of their making. There are the railroad accident, obtained by means of children's toys; the warships and the aeroplanes, which are also photographs of playthings; the burglar in his unheard of performance of climbing the front of a house, and—last, but not least—the man clinging to the ceiling of a room. The pictures explain themselves.

But when we see a man jumping out of a fourth story window, see him fall fifty feet to the ground and then get up and run away unhurt, we ask: How is this possible? The origin of the picture is very simple. The fugitive jumps out of a low window in the studio, which is fitted up in the style of the desired room. Then the photographing process is interrupted. The next picture is taken in the street in front of a real house. A life sized puppet is dropped from one of the windows. When it has reached the ground the machine stops, the actor puts himself in the place of the figure, the reel is started again, the man gets up and runs away.

In like manner auto accidents and similar episodes are arranged. Another impossibility—a man swims through a river and on the other side he climbs a ten foot wall without difficulty. Origin of the pictures: The man is photographed sliding from the wall into the water, but in taking the picture the reel is turned wrong way, so the motion is reversed when the picture is reeled off in the right direction.

The last obstacle in representing the seemingly impossible was cleared away when some clever mind conceived the idea of stopping the photographing process, not after a series of pictures, but after each single picture or after each two or three of them. The work involved was enormous, as eighteen pictures are taken every second—that is to say, about 50,000 pictures are required for a reel, which is to amuse the public only ten minutes! But human perseverance has accomplished the task,

OUR BOYS

EDITED BY

ONE OF THEM

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA.

The motto of the Boy Scouts is "Be Prepared" and means that the scouts are always in a state of readiness in mind and body to do their duty. The boy of to-day is the citizen of tomorrow. The Boy Scout movement aims to teach the boys those qualities of self-reliance, usefulness and patriotism which will make them good citizens. Before a boy becomes a scout, he takes the following promise:

"On my honor I will do my best. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout laws. To help other people at all times.

"To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

This is the Scout oath. When a scout salutes, he does so by holding up his right hand, palm to the front, thumb resting on the nail of the little finger, and the other three fingers upright and together. The three upright fingers are to remind him of the three points of his oath.

The first point of the scout law is that "A scout is trustworthy." His honor is to be trusted. If he were to violate his honor by telling a lie, or by cheating, or by disobeying when trusted on his honor, he may be directed to hand over his scout badge. He is not to "swipe" fruit, nor be dishonest in school, nor try to slide out of anything he deserves by telling a lie. This point of the scout law is perhaps the most important of them all.
