KELLAM & BRAMAN.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Kellam and Braman, Dec. 20.
A very pleasant day was spent at Mrs. Schnackenburg's last Thursday at the L. A. S. There was twenty-five present and the proceeds were $5.90, and five new members added to the small band. The visitors were: Mr. and Mrs. E. Teeple, Rev. F. Bowen, Mrs. John Hill, Lookout, Mr. and Mrs. John Price, Mrs. Geo. Lott and son, Mr. and Mrs. Heenan Cole, Mrs. Lydia Cole, Mrs. George Blum and children, Mrs. T. Caffery and Mrs. Frank Cole from Braman.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Keys, of Cochection, visited his parents last week.
Mr. and Mrs. Will Kellam, Port Jervis, visited Mr. and Mrs. John Skinner and other relatives recently. Emma Stalker attended the fair in the M. E. church at Long Eddy last Wednesday and Thursday.
Frank Lawson and Mrs. Harry Cole are sick and called the doctor last Saturday.

Mr. Turlicover returned home last evening, having spent several weeks in New York city.
Last Saturday night being very rainy the entertainment by the Sunshine Circle was postponed until Tuesday evening. We wish them success as it may bring sunshine into the lives of many as it is for the benefit of the poor and sick.

Frank Rauner, of Susquehanna, visited his parents last Tuesday.
Mrs. Amanda Kellam has moved onto Dr. Frisbie's farm.
Maurice Kellam and Miss Edith Beach were married last Sunday by Mr. Cordman. There is a rumor of more wedding bells soon.

LAKE COMO.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Lake Como, Pa., Dec. 20.
On Tuesday, December 12, at a quarter of twelve, noon, Rufus E. Niles and Ina B. Stanton, were united in marriage by the Rev. William S. German, at the bride's residence near Preston Park, Pa. The groom is a young man well-known in Winwood and has many friends there. He is employed at the creamery, and will make his future home in that village. The bride is the oldest daughter of Oscar Stanton. The wedding was a quiet though pleasant affair, no one being present except the bride's family and Mr. Simpson of Winwood.

The Rev. William S. German has begun a series of special sermons entitled "Nature's Wonders," the first of which was delivered last Sunday evening in the M. E. church at Winwood, entitled "The Heights of Life." A large and attentive audience was present. The second of the series will be given on December 24th.
John Randall is reported as having a fine time on his Western trip. He is at present at Corning, California.

The new pastor of the Lake Como M. E. church was the recipient of a very valuable present in the shape of a fur driving coat and cap, from the people of the church.

CENTERVILLE.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Centerville, Pa., Dec. 20.
Mrs. James Collins, Scranton, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marshall. Her mother expects to accompany her to her home in Scranton on Tuesday.
Fred McKelney, Scranton, called on friends here on Sunday.
William Marshall of Rochester, N. Y., returned to his home here one day last week.

Thomas Garrity, Sr., spent a few days in Scranton recently.
Friend Walker, Hub, called on friends in Centerville on Sunday.
(Deer) season is over now, but never mind girls it will soon be leap year.

LAKEVILLE.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Lakeville, Pa., Dec. 20.
The P. O. S. of A. of this place will serve an oyster supper in their hall here on Saturday evening, Dec. 23, 1911. Everybody invited.
The Christmas tree and services will be held on Christmas eve, Dec. 24, at the M. E. church here. Come out and it will encourage the children.

FALLSDALE.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Fallsdale, Pa., Dec. 18.
About twenty members from Labor Grange at Calkins attended State Grange at Scranton last week and all report a profitable time spent with their brother and sister grangers.
Farmers' Institute to be held here this week is looked forward to with much interest and a good attendance is expected. We have looked the program through but failed to find a single topic on poultry culture. Now, as every farmer here is more or less a hen man there will have to be a change in that program and a hen specialist produced or the institute will fall flat. Of course we have horsemen and dairymen but the hen men are the ones on the front seat when eggs are selling around 50 and 60 cents per dozen. So by all means send along a hen professor who can tell the ins and outs of the poultry business; then the meeting will be something worth while.

Christmas is coming and so is Santa Claus and our big Sunday school Christmas tree will be nice. The weather has been very unfavorable for practice but our little folks have never disappointed us yet and we look forward to a good time. Our Sunday school superintendent, Miss Carrie Clark, is one who never says fail and she is backed by a school of a hundred or more who can do things.

A. E. Sheard attended the Dairy-men's League convention at Albany, N. Y., last week, returning via Scranton; he also attended the State Grange.

L. S. Lybolt visited friends in York state last week.
The North Branch school will give a Christmas entertainment in the school room Friday afternoon. Mr. Newcomb, the teacher, has the good will of both and parents and everything goes well.

WAYMART.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Waymart, Dec. 20.
People will be surprised to hear of the late marriage of Rush Romich of this place and Mrs. Lloyd Oliver, of Carbondale.
Mrs. A. J. Lang and sons have gone to Endicott, N. Y., to spend the holidays.

Darius Swingle of South Canaan, died Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The deceased has been an invalid for years. He leaves a wife and children. The funeral will be held this Friday morning at 10 o'clock at the house, and at the M. P. church, South Canaan at 11 o'clock.

Walter Todman and James Miner were visiting friends in Scranton over Sunday.
Misses Ruth Wittig and Mabel Rice were in Carbondale on Thursday.
Percy Miner is ill with the grippe.

BEACH LAKE.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Beachlake, Pa., Dec. 20.
Only a few more days to add to our 1911 calendar. How quickly the years go by.
Some are afraid the supply of ice will be scarce, but do they realize winter does not begin until Dec. 21? I think it useless to worry on that account. Time enough for plenty winter weather and there will be more ice than will ever be gathered.
Christmas exercises and a tree at the M. E. church Saturday evening, Farmers' Institute on the 22d and 23d inst. We would rather it had been dated for January as it is a busy time preparing for Christmas just now and some cannot attend although it is a pity to let the opportunity pass and not receive the benefit derived from those institutions.

Elwood Ives went to Endicott, N. Y., Saturday where he expects to spend the winter.
Mrs. Alexander Crosby has an aunt spending the winter with her.
Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Budd are contemplating a trip to California.
W. J. Barnes is to leave for Honesdale in a few days but the family may not go for some months.

Mrs. Eberspacher's health is not good this winter.
Mrs. W. P. Budd entertained the L. A. S. Wednesday. She served an elaborate lunch to about forty.
Teachers and pupils away from home are expected home for Christmas.

Spring ploughing going on and Xmas one week away. It seems to be a reversal of weather conditions. We think it will tax the memory of the oldest residents to parallel. We have seen green Christmas trees more than once but never knew it so late in December nor do we learn that any of the weather prophets can offer any explanation. Possibly Halley's comet of last year had something to do with it.
Christmas exercises will be at the M. E. church Saturday evening and at the Free Methodist church on Monday.
Mrs. Frank Wells is entertaining her sister from Indiana, and Ellic Crosby's aunt from Lake Huntington is being entertained at his home in this place.
Iva Mitchell is expected home to spend the holidays; likewise May Brabdry.

The last word from Mrs. L. Woodley, who was so seriously hurt by falling down stairs, is yet too weak for anyone to see her and is still in a very precarious condition but the doctor gives them hopes of at least a partial recovery.
Mrs. W. J. Barnes, Mrs. Henry Brabdry and William A. Davey attended the Sunday school convention last week held at Torrey. They report a profitable and pleasant time.
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Oliver are grandparents to a little girl residing in St. Louis.

Now, wishing the officers and all the readers of this paper a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year, I drop my pen for 1911.

HAMLIN.

(Special to The Citizen.)
Hamlin, Pa., Dec. 21.
Mrs. C. M. Loring is at the present writing recovering from an attack of lagrippe.
Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Gillett returned to-day from Scranton.
Miss D. P. Hamlin left on Tuesday last for Hackettstown, N. J., where she will spend the holiday season with Mr. and Mrs. George Clearwater.
H. F. Nicholson spent Wednesday and Thursday of this week in Scranton.

The W. C. T. U. will meet next Friday, Dec. 22, with Mrs. C. R. Spangenberg.
The Keystone Dramatic Club is preparing a play which they expect to produce during the holiday season.
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Williams and son Robert, Scranton, spent Sunday last at C. L. Simons'.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Simons took a trip to Scranton on Thursday.
Mrs. J. T. Stocker and Miss Mae Walker have gone to Netcong, N. J., where they will spend the holiday season with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Wolfe.

PENNSYLVANIA'S BIG POPULATION

7,665,111 People in The Keystone State

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT WAYNE COUNTY—10.1 PER CENT OF COUNTY'S POPULATION IN THE TOWN—LAND AREA 739 SQUARE MILES.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—Interesting details not heretofore published as to the population of Pennsylvania and its distribution are given in a bulletin of the thirteenth census, just issued by the census bureau.

In this bulletin the official figures of the total population of the state are given as 7,665,111. Compared with a population of 6,302,115 in 1900, this represents an increase during the last decade of 1,362,996, or 21.6 per cent., a slightly higher percentage of increase than that shown for the preceding decade. During the same period the total population of continental United States increased 21 per cent. The relative decennial increase in the population of the state has varied little during the last five decades.

The population of the state, by decades, since 1790, has been as follows: 1790, 434,373; 1800, 602,355; 1810, 810,091; 1820, 1,049,458; 1830, 1,348,233; 1840, 1,724,032; 1850, 2,311,786; 1860, 2,906,215; 1870, 3,521,961; 1880, 4,282,891; 1890, 5,258,113; 1900, 6,302,115; 1910, 7,665,111.

Of the 29 cities in Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton, the first, second and third cities in the state, have 1,549,008, 523,905 and 129,867 inhabitants, respectively. Of the remaining cities, seven have each a population ranging from 50,000 to 100,000, eight from 25,000 to 50,000, six from 10,000 to 25,000 and five from 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants. The aggregate population in 1910 of the 29 cities was 3,096,701, or 40.4 per cent. of the total population of the state. Pennsylvania has 67 counties. Philadelphia city is coextensive with Philadelphia county. The population of these counties ranges from 7,544 in Cameron county to $1,549,008 in Philadelphia county. The second and third largest counties in population are Allegheny and Luzerne, respectively.

Lycum county, with 1,220 square miles, has the largest area and Montour county, with 130 square miles, has the smallest area. Philadelphia county, coextensive with Philadelphia city, has the highest density of any county, namely, 11,646.7 persons per square mile, while Pike county, with 14.8 persons per square mile, has the lowest density. Allegheny county, which contains the city of Pittsburgh, has 1,404.8 persons per square mile. Delaware county, the third in density in the state, has 637.3 persons per square mile.

A comparison of the total population in 1910 of places having a population of not less than 2,500 each with the total population of the same places in 1900 shows an increase of 28.9 per cent. This represents the rate of growth of urban communities as thus defined. During the same period the rural population, comprising that of the remainder of the state, increased 12 per cent. The population of the urban areas thus increased more than twice as rapidly as that of the rural territory. For continental United States as a whole, urban population increased 34.9 per cent. in the last decade, and rural population 11.2 per cent. There were 25 counties in which the population living in rural territory decreased and only 2 in which there was a decrease in urban population.

The population of places having from 2,500 to 25,000 inhabitants increased more than one-half as fast as the population of the state as a whole. Of the increase in the total population of the state during the decade, namely, 1,362,996, nearly one-fifth was contributed by the city of Philadelphia and considerably more than one-third by the group of places having from 2,500 to 25,000 inhabitants.

Facts About Wayne County.

The land area of Wayne county is 739 square miles, with a population of 39.6 per square mile and a rural population of 35.6 per square mile. The urban territory of the state in 1910—that is, the incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more—contained 4,630,669 inhabitants, or 60.4 per cent. of the total population, while 3,034,442 inhabitants, or 39.6 per cent., lived in rural territory. The urban territory as it existed in 1900—that is, the incorporated places then having 2,500 inhabitants or more—contained 3,448,610 inhabitants, or 45.3 per cent., lived in rural territory. There has thus been a considerable increase in the proportion of urban population. For continental United States as a whole, the urban population constituted 46.3 per cent. of the total population in 1910 and 40.5 per cent. of the total population in 1900.

In urban territory in Wayne county in 1910 there were 2,945 people, while in 1900 the number was only 2,864, an increase of 2.8 per cent. In rural territory in Wayne county in 1910 the population was 26,291, while in 1900 it was 27,307, an increase of 3.7 per cent. Thus there are 10.1 per cent. of Wayne's population in the town and 89.9 per cent. in places of less than 2,500.

STATE COMMISSION INVESTIGATE LODORE.

Under instructions from the state water supply commission, of which General Frederick W. Field, of Scranton, is chairman, the officials of the Lake Lodore Improvement company have begun draining a part of Lake Lodore. The water commission issued the order following complaint from residents of Prompton, Seelyville, and Honesdale, which villages lie below the dam which backs up the water to form the lake.

Years ago an old mud dam was built to hold the water in position and two years ago the present owners built a concrete dam some distance below the mud dam.

According to Richard P. Jordan, one of the officers and principal stockholders of the improvement company, the concrete dam is two feet higher than the mud dam and the work now between the two dams so that the one built of concrete may be thoroughly examined by the water supply commission's engineers.

If it is found to be safe, the company will be allowed to fill the lake again, and if it needs repairing, the water commission will probably order the work done. If such repairs can be made without draining off the water behind the mud dam, the expenses to the company will be comparatively little, but if the state engineers insist on draining the whole body of water it will be a severe blow to the owners.

The stream that drains the lake runs directly through Prompton, Seelyville, and Honesdale and its course is through a narrow valley that has no outlet, except that followed by the stream.

Ever since the breaking of the big dam at Austin last summer, residents of towns lying below dams and lakes have implored the water supply commission to inspect such dams and the commission has been working early and late to comply, as far as possible, with the numerous demands made upon it.

John H. Jordan, president of the Lake Lodore Improvement company, made the following statement:

"We gladly invite the most critical inspection of the two walls and are now drawing the water off between them so that the state water supply commission shall be able to make the fullest examination. I am confident that when they have done so, that the report will be in our favor. The inside wall, built by the D. & H. over sixty years ago, is reported to be strong enough for all time, you might say. The new wall we built a few years ago, is stronger, and the two together surely ought to answer the purpose."

"Although the lake is a large body of water, it is so winding in its shore line that the real pressure against the walls is exerted by a comparatively small section near the outlet, as the pressure is broken against the shore line by numerous indentations farther up."

CATHOLICS IN THE WEST AP- PROVE STRONGLY OF SCOUT MOVEMENT.

Festus J. Wade, a banker of St. Louis, Missouri, and many other Catholics in the West have announced their approval of the Boy Scouts of America. Wade has written a letter analyzing the manual of the Boy Scouts of America and pointing out that the play and the work which it prescribes for Boy Scouts is aimed to help them in every way possible. He says that Catholic Sunday Schools and Clubs should organize Scout troops if they wish to keep to the front in the development of a boy. Wade's statement is approved in an editorial in "The Sunday Watchman," leading Catholic Journal of the Middle West.

Such commendation of the Scout Movement, which also has been made by Monsignor Thomas J. Shahan, D. D., President of the Catholic University of Washington and by the Rt. Rev. George A. Dougherty, Vice-Rector of that institution, is important because Catholics in various parts of the country at first were inclined to oppose the Scout Movement, holding that it was a Protestant propaganda. Study of the Scout Manual and of the work of the scout showed Catholic investigators, however, that Boy Scout troops may be organized as a supplement to the work of any club or church, and that the boys are taught to cling to the religion which they get at home. In other words, the Scout Movement helps to strengthen the church and not to tear it down. As this fact is appreciated by the Catholics, they are urging the organization of Boy Scout troops, and the commendation of Catholics in the Middle West undoubtedly will give still greater stimulus to the work of the Boy Scouts of America.

Death Of George W. Holdridge.

The many friends of George W. Holdridge will regret to learn of his sudden death at his home, 472 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., Monday night a week ago. Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge spent many happy days in Honesdale. The Citizen is indebted to its New York correspondent for the following detailed account of his death, as well as for a brief sketch of his life:

George W. Holdridge, for the past four years employed as compositor in the Register office, died very suddenly at his home, 472 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn, on Monday night. The deceased always enjoyed good health, but before rising Saturday morning told his wife he dreamed he was helpless. He arose and while dressing became blind and dizzy, with the remark "I am dying" fell back unconscious. In a few moments he regained consciousness and spoke only to relapse again. When the doctor arrived he pronounced it apoplexy and gave no hope.

George W. Holdridge was the son of Ira and Martha Holdridge and was born on a farm near Fort Miller, Washington county, N. Y., July 26, 1839, and remained there until 1845, when his parents emigrated to the West and settled at Little Fork (now called Washburn) Illinois. One brother is still living at that place. In 1859 he came to New York city and in '61 enlisted with the Twelfth New York Militia to Washington, serving three months. He then returned to New York City and after several months' stay there went to Erie, Pa., and then to Westfield, N. Y., where he stayed until 1859. He then went to Honesdale, Pa., where he was in business for three years with his uncle, David Hoyt, who was one of the older Honesdale merchants. He then came to Brooklyn and for thirty odd years was a trusted and capable employe of the Standard Union. On Jan. 8, 1889, Mr. Holdridge was united in marriage with Miss Alice Frame of Brooklyn, but who spent her girlhood days in Honesdale.

The marriage of nearly twenty-three years was one of happiness; the relationship and home atmosphere were ideal and the influence has been felt by all their young friends who were always made so welcome. Both Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge were of a hospitable nature; the former was a gentleman of the older type who still regarded women as superior and his courteous, kind treatment gave him the respect of all who knew him and now miss and mourn him. His wife, sympathetic and unselfish even in her many sorrows, made the home a true home where kind words and affection reigned and cross words never crossed the threshold. Truly lives like these have not been lived in vain when their impression is graven so deeply on those who knew them best. The widow who is in very poor health, is alone with the exception of one sister, Mrs. Mary Evans, who has been a mute since childhood and for some years has made her home with Mrs. Holdridge where she is tenderly cared for.

The funeral services were held at his late home on Wednesday evening and were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Chamberlain of St. Ann's church, New York, and in deference to the number of deaf mutes present Dr. Chamberlain repeated the services in the sign language. The interment was at Forest Hill cemetery, Scranton, and was in charge of Rev. Walker, pastor of the First Baptist church of that city.—From the Milanville correspondent. Will the Scranton papers kindly copy.

WHAT OUR VISITORS THOUGHT.

Now that the Governors have come and gone and the whole stirring incident has become a pleasant memory, the Telegraph wishes to touch briefly upon a few phases of the visit. First, it is gratifying to know that the number of persons who showed their friendliness toward the Governors by visiting their exhibition cars was larger in Harrisburg than it was in any other city visited, including New York and Philadelphia.

Second, the Governors appreciated the popular phase of their reception in the Capital City, as well as the extraordinary smoothness with which the formal program was carried out.

Third, they were tremendously impressed with Harrisburg and Harrisburg's hospitality. They thought our parks wonderful, our streets models; our river front exquisite.

Fourth, they stood in open-mouthed amazement before the State Capitol. They could not find words suitable to describe its grandeur, and they were the more dumbfounded because they had rarely, if ever, heard of our Capitol except in terms of reproach. They had supposed it was tinsel and papier mache—a cheap imitation—and they found it one of the architectural marvels of America.

We may choose to attach a reputation for "grat" to our Capitol, or we may choose to laud it for its true worth. Which, do you think, would be the better for you, for Harrisburg and for Pennsylvania?—Harrisburg Telegraph.
