The most dreaded thing that could possibly happen on Easter, according to the feminine standpoint, is to have it rain. And it rained. It came just at the time when young ladies and old ladies were in the height of displaying their Easter hats and gowns on their return from the services at the churches. The rain continued most of the afternoon and in the evening, March 7, was substituted for April 7 and the wind howled and Monday morning brought snow. On Saturday the temperature was 78 degrees and on Monday morning it was something like 26 degrees, having dropped 52 degrees in less than twenty-four hours. The extreme drop in temperature is declared by the weather bureau to be very remarkable. More reasonable weather is promised after this but as the weather shark says, there is no telling what April will do until after it is done.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Theatre Prices.

The article in the Herald under the caption "Advance in Prices" was intended to mislead the public. It is not true that the prices charged in Honesdale for tickets on the main floor is excessive. Neither is this price in excess of the price charged in Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and other cities.

Honesdale has a theatre of limited capacity, and the attendance is generally light to our best shows. In order to get shows of good standard, the receipts must come up to a given amount or the best plays cannot be given in Honesdale at all.

A large percentage of the receipts go to the management of the best shows, and a very small percentage to the manager of the Lyric.
