ARLINGTON. (Special to The Citizen.) The following is taken from the Daily Express, London, March 20, 1912: Missing Minister Found. In consequence of the publicity given to the case by the Express, the Rev. H. T. Purkiss, the missing American Methodist minister, has been restor-ed to his friends. Mr. Purkiss left the Rev. and Mrs. George Bird, on February 13, and visited Winchester and Worthing. His friends lost all trace of him from Feb. 19, when he left Worthing. This news published in Saturday's Express brought a letter from Brigadier Frank Aspinall, of the Salvation Army which showed that Mr. Purkiss had been in London from Feb. 25 to March 8, studying ways of dealing with distress. He attended mission meetings at Great Assembly Hall, Mile End Road, E., for several days up to Mile End March 11. Mr. E. H. Kerwin, J. P. the secretary of the mission, read about Mr. Purkiss' case in Saturday's Express and telegraphed to Mr. Bird, who came to London from Rochester on Monday. It was as-certained that Mr. Purkiss had staylargely attended Sunday, services at certained that Mr. Purkiss had stay-Hemlock Grove church by Rev. CABBAGE ROOT DISEASE.

Virginia's Experience and Advice on Methods of Combating Pest.

In describing the cabbage clubroot disease, which has inflicted injury on the cabbage growers of Virginia, the agricultural experiment station of the state says:

When a field is badly infected with this disease it may appear at the seedling stage as a dwarfing of the young plants, but the fields are not usually badly enough infected the first season to manifest the disease until the cabbage is half grown. In districts where the disease has just begun to get a footbold the grower notices that the Misses Bertha Seipp, Bessie plants which are being infected show a Welsh and Sadie Welsh visited the tendency to wilt on bright sunny days, although at night they recover and do not wilt on the following day unless it is again bright and warm. Such plants may succeed in making enough growth to produce a salable cabbage, although station.

WELL DEVELOPED CASE OF CLUBROOT. loose. The earlier the plant is infected with the disease the smaller is the head produced. If the diseased plant is pulled up one finds that it has a swollen and contorted root in place of the fine fibrous roots of the normal plant. This explains the wilting when one remembers that the soil and its dissolved food substances are taken up through the fibrous roots. When the plants are infected at the seedling stage they are usually killed before the season is balf over, and the infected areas may be seen entirely bare of cabbage. swollen, contorted roots, which have robbed the plant of its food material, begin to decay in the soil in the latter part of the season and continue the process of decay, aided by frosts and soil bacteria, so that nothing of them is seen the following spring. The disease is caused by a fungus, and the following methods of treatment are recommended:

Avoid introducing any material into the field which may carry the germs of the club root from diseased fields. Guard especially against diseased soil and diseased cabbage plants.

Practice crop rotations which will al low at least three years between crops of cabbage, rutabagas or turnips.

Apply stable manure to the crop which precedes cabbage, but not to the cabbage crop itself. If acid phosphate is applied the same rule would hold.

Lime will more successfully counteract the club root disease than other substances. Apply it at the rate of 100 bushels or more per acre one or two years previous to planting the cabbage.

Coal Ashes Kill Hen Pests.

In the spring of 1909 my henhouse. a small one, but large enough for my small flock of hens, became badly infested with mites. Two large window openings on the south side of the house have no glass, but are covered and I find it well to have the roosting place protected by a muslin curtain during the cold months. This curtain was swarming with mites, and I removed it and subjected it to a bath of advice of an acquaintance who keeps a few hens, I dusted all parts of the house thoroughly with fine sifted coal ashes and placed a supply of the ashes in the house for the hens to dust them selves with and have kept up the sup ply ever since. I have had no more trouble with mites, and the hens keep remarkably free from lice .- Rural New Yorker.

Handling a Celery Bed. Sow celery in February. March or beginning of April in rows in fine, rich soil and if dry enough press the soil firmly with a roller or the back of the spade. Keep the seed bed well wa tered, as celery germinates very slow ly. Transplant from June to August Celery does best in a moist, mucky soll and in situations where plenty of water is abundant in the soil.

ADVICE ON SUGAR BEETS.

Cultivation Points Found Good by the Ohio Department of Agriculture.

Have good loam land. That which raises the best corn is the best to raise beets.

Land must be deeply plowed. are after a root crop, not something that grows above the ground.

Use plenty of seed. If you do not get a good stand you will not get a good crop of beets.

Seed is cheap and is furnished by the factories at cost price. Roll the beets well. Roll again. Watch the hand labor at the time they are thinning and blocking the beets. This is important. Cultivate thoroughly. Do not stop at any time. You cannot fire beets as you can corn. It is the cultivation that puts the sugar in the beets. The German farmer says, "You have to boe in the sugar." The land must be thoroughly tillednot because beets will not stand more water than corn, but because the hand labor costs so much that the farmer should not run any risk on land that is not well tiled.

Beets take a little more of the fertil ity from the land than corn. According to Professor Hopkins, it takes 100 pounds of nitrogen, 18 pounds of phosphorus and 150 pounds of potassium for a twenty ton crop of beets. The fertility can be returned to the land by plowing under the tops and feeding the pulp to cows and putting the manure back on the land.

Sugar itself is twelve parts of carbon to one part of water chemically united. Beets get the water from the rain that falls upon the ground; get the carbon from the air through the leaves, Beets raised on clover sod, the land of which has been thoroughly tiled. could make easily twenty tons to the acre.

Sugar companies now pay $4.50 for beets testing 13 per cent and 3314 cents for every 1 per cent additional. The farmer should endeavor to increase the yield of sugar in the beet. This they can do by thorough cultiva-
