

FLINN BEATS CASE

Quash Indictment Against State Roosevelt Leader.

BROWN BROUGHT ACTION.

Declared by Sending Out Post Cards in Which "Fake Roosevelt" Candidate Was Mentioned Flinn Labeled Him and Caused His Defeat.

Uniontown, Pa., June 4.—William Flinn of Pittsburgh, state leader of the Roosevelt campaign in Pennsylvania, was indicted by the grand jury of Fayette county on charges of criminal libel brought by Edward D. Brown, a Uniontown attorney.

Brown was a candidate for delegate to the Chicago convention, favoring Mr. Roosevelt for president. He asserted that by the sending out of post cards by Flinn in which a "fake Roosevelt candidate" was mentioned Flinn caused his defeat.

When the case was called in court Flinn's counsel moved that the indictment be quashed, arguing that the publication was not libelous. Despite arguments to the contrary by counsel for the prosecution Judge United granted the motion and quashed the indictment.

GRATEFUL TO CAPT. ROSTRON.

Hero Entertained at Mrs. Thayer and Mrs. Widener Homes.

Philadelphia, June 4.—Captain Arthur Henry Rostrom, commander of the Cunard liner Carpathia, which saved the survivors of the Titanic disaster, returned to New York after a two day visit to this city, during which time he was the guest successively of Mrs. John B. Thayer and Mrs. George D. Widener. The Carpathia sailed for England, and her skipper had to be back on her bridge in time to supervise the final details of departure.

Captain Rostrom was taken to the Widener country place, Lynwood Hall, Ogontz, in Mrs. Widener's motor car. The trip gave the captain an opportunity of viewing many of the beautiful suburbs of Philadelphia. Only members of the Widener family were present at the luncheon which followed the captain's arrival at the Widener home.

INVADES TEMPLE OF TRUTH.

Postoffice Inspectors Break Up Fashionable Women Worship.

Pittsburgh, June 4.—Postoffice inspectors and city detectives descended on the Rev. Jacob D. Buzard's "Temple of Truth," a frame building on the north side, and interrupted the worship of the pastor and twenty-eight or thirty women members of his flock. The federal authorities wanted Buzard on a charge of using the mails to defraud; the city authorities on the charge of fraudulent practices. The women, the majority of whom are married, were allowed to go on proving their identity to the police.

Buzard gave $1,000 bail in the federal court and a similar bond in the municipal court for hearings on Thursday. United States Inspector Craig head confiscated a bushel of mail.

LAD DIES OF LOCKJAW.

Boy Suffered Because Mother Believed in Christian Science.

Philadelphia, June 4.—After suffering more than a week with tetanus without a doctor because his mother had faith in Christian Science treatment Henry Speakman, eleven, died in the Children's hospital, where he was taken by friends.

The boy was helping hang up the family wash ten days ago when a clothes prop broke and a splinter of wood entered his hand. The mother tried to extract the piece of wood, but could not do so, and lockjaw resulted.

NEEDLE IN HER HEART.

Woman Kills Herself, but Not Instantly, With Darning Needle.

Philadelphia, June 4.—With a four inch darning needle piercing her heart, Angelina Leonelli, a patient at the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane, lived six days. The case is said to be without parallel in medical records.

The woman pushed the needle through her heart with suicidal intent. It was not until Coroner Knight's physician performed an autopsy that it was discovered.

$90,000 to Charitable Institutions.

Philadelphia, June 4.—The will of Samuel Kohn, admitted to probate by the register in city hall places $90,000 in trust for charitable institutions. The estate is valued at $221,000. The executor of the estate, Simon I. Kohn, a brother, is directed to create a trust of $75,000, the income to be given to such Hebrew charities as the executor may select, and another trust of $15,000 for the benefit of non-Hebrew charities.

SOLVED SOUTH SEA MYSTERY

Late Dr. Woodworth Made a Study of the Palolo Worm.

PUZZLE TO THE ZOOLOGISTS.

Why the Creature Appeared at 3:45 a. m. on a Certain Day in Early November or Late in October of Each Year According to the Moon.

Dr. William McMichael Woodworth of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard, who died recently, was the discoverer of the solution of a mystery which had puzzled zoologists for half a century. This was the identification of that mysterious worm of the Pacific ocean which makes its appearance on a clockwork schedule once a year, exactly at 3:45 in the morning of a certain day in early November or late in October, according to the quartering of the moon.

This remarkable animal is found on a certain few reefs of a few of the south sea islands. It occurs in parts of Samoa, in Tonga, in Fiji and in some of the New Hebrides and bears the name palolo in the several island tongues. Its recurrence each year is a matter of no little interest to the islanders, for it is esteemed as a delicacy, being used raw, just as it comes dripping from the salt water or cooked by steaming in the pit ovens. Either way it has the flavor of highly salted spinach and is quite satisfactory to the European palate.

Differs From Other Animals. It differs from all known animals by reason of its strict observance of a calendar all its own, yet one which the islanders have learned to compute for themselves. The hour of its appearance is the moment of slack water ebb at the third quarter of the moon which comes nearest the first of November. Five minutes before the appointed time the reef pools are empty, the sweep of the fine nets used in the fishery yield nothing but a water haul. All at once the water becomes alive with a writhing mass of worms, each of the diameter of a pack thread and five or six inches long. The fishers raise one shout of wild glee when the palolo appear, but that is the only shout, for afterward all mouths are crammed with the dainty morsels as fast as the nets can scoop them up.

In the earliest days of the London mission in Samoa the Rev. John B. Stair secured specimens of palolo and sent them preserved in alcohol to John Edward Gray of the British museum. By him their position in the scale of the lower life was determined, erroneously it has since been proved. He gave the specimens the scientific name of Palolo viridis. For fifty years the strange periodicity of the palolo was a perpetual challenge to students, it was the despair of zoology.

He Solved the Mystery. In 1898 Dr. Woodworth determined to solve the mystery, went to Samoa for the purpose and established himself in a Samoan community nearest the reef where the palolo crop was greatest, at Falelatala, on the south shore of the island of Upolu. In the earlier experience which he had had in Fiji the previous year, in the consent of the experience of all other students who had essayed the problem, he recognized that the mere observation of the rising of the worms in the reef pools at the gray of dawn offered no solution. He prepared for the event by establishing a rude laboratory in which he could subject the reef itself to close examination. This consisted of a series of tanks on the shore in which he deposited lumps of coral cut from the outer reef and kept them under a steady flow of water drawn from the lagoon. He established the necessary control by crumbling other coral blocks to pieces and identifying all the worms discovered in the cranial.

On the appointed morning, as soon as the first shouts coming out of the darkness across the lagoon proved that the palolo had appeared, Dr. Woodworth was delighted to discover by lantern light that the worms were rising from the coral in his tanks and that the laboratory was giving him the opportunity for study which the reefs had for so many years refused to two generations of zoologists. In eager haste he picked the coral blocks to pieces and was able to find the source of the edible worms.

Gray in Error. Gray had been in error when he named the worms. His determination was based on mere fragments. Woodworth was able to see the whole process. The worms were not really worms, but only specific spawning organs of a much larger worm which never was seen outside the coral. This worm he identified as a member of a well known genus and established for it a new species under the name of Eunice viridis.

The history of the recurrence of the palolo became somewhat plain. Under the seasonal instinct to spawn the worms in the coral, each as large as a man's finger, shed the palolo to writhers for an hour in the still water of the reef pools and by this means to insure the continuity of life. It is not yet known why this instinct is so true to the calendar of its race, but Dr. Woodworth was able to solve the greater mystery.

Streets of Paris. It is a misdemeanor to throw a piece of waste paper upon a Paris street. If a policeman sees you drop a piece of paper he walks up to you, pats you on the shoulder, begs your pardon for addressing you and tells you you have violated the law and asks you to pick up what you have thrown down.
