More About the Fish,

Mr. Editor: Can you tell me why the State allows hundreds of fish to be killed by the running of poison into streams (local rivers included), but if a boy who might be ignorant of the law, as to the size of a fish is caught, arrested and a heavy fine placed upon him?

Of course, if they continue to dump the poison into the river there will not be a partical of ac-quatic life from Dyberry to the Delaware Bay, but after that date, when all the fish are dead, they must stop killing the rest of them. Then the fish commission will begin to stock the river with fish, and after a larse of about eight years there will again be fishing in the Dyberry, Lackawaxen and Delaware rivers. Meanwhile, boys who catch an undersized fish are dealt with without mercy. But-ob, well.
