

SEWS MAN'S HEART

Nine Stitches In Organ to Save Negro's Life.

WAS VIRTUALLY CUT IN TWO

During Fight Colored Man Is Slashed. Wives Quarreled In Daytime and Their Husbands Continue It at Night—Similar Operations Have Been Successful.

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—Nine stitches were placed in the heart of John Thompson, a negro, in the Pennsylvania hospital after that organ had been cut virtually in two. Several similar operations have been successful at that institution, and doctors believe Thompson will recover. The operation was performed by Dr. Mitchell. Thompson, who lives in this city, was hurried to the hospital shortly after he had been stabbed by British Shaw, another negro. Dr. Mitchell had him placed on the operating table and in less than five minutes had an incision and sawed away portions of three ribs.

Laying bare the heart, he quickly sewed up the wound, placing a stitch in the organ when it rose with each pulsation.

According to the police, Thompson was stabbed during the fight with Shaw. The wives of the pair quarreled during the day, the police say, and the men took up the fight when they returned at night.

ESCAPES FROM POLICE.

Man Believed to Be Broker Lewis Gets Away at Erie, Pa.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 1.—A daring escape by one of the most clever confidence men known in national police circles took place within the shadow of police headquarters when Joseph Barr, believed by detectives to be Broker Lewis, wanted in many cities, threw a suitcase between the legs of Detective Allen as he stepped from the patrol wagon and dashed madly through the grounds of the Strong residence and escaped in the darkness. As Barr ran Allen groped about the sidewalk in an attempt to regain his footing and recover the cartridges from his revolver, which were spilled on the sidewalk when he fell.

Barr, prior to his escape, was arrested at the Union station. He is still at large.

IN HOSPITAL FOR BITES.

Mosquitoes Nearly Killed a Sleeping Sailor in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—James Hood, an English sailor, was so badly attacked and bitten by a swarm of mosquitoes while he lay asleep on the deck of an oil freighter at Greenwich piers here that he is now in the Pennsylvania hospital.

He has blood poisoning and may lose the sight of one eye, which is badly infected from the bites which he received.

Hood was discovered by a shipmate on the afterdeck of the ship, and his face and arms were literally covered with blood. Both eyes were swollen and closed, and his pain was so great that the physicians had to administer an opiate before they could treat the man for his injuries.

ARTIST'S WILL PROBATED.

Thomas Pollock Anshutz Leaves His Estate to His Wife.

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 1.—The will of Thomas Pollock Anshutz, the artist, was admitted to probate here. The will is dated Feb. 20, 1912, and reads: "I, Thomas Pollock Anshutz, being ill and unable to transact business for myself, do empower my wife, Edith Russell Anshutz, to attend to all of my affairs, taking charge of all my moneys, stocks, properties—i. e., real and personal estate, etc., and deal with them as she may elect until such time as I may be able to attend to the same, or, in event of my decease, to hold them as her own, knowing them she will administer them for the greatest real benefit for herself and my son, Edward Russell Anshutz."

BROKER COMMITS SUICIDE.

Had Been Under Treatment For Drug Habit In Hospital.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1.—William Lyons, aged fifty-three, a broker with the firm of Darr & Moore, Frick building, was found dead in a bathtub at the West Pennsylvania hospital. While his nurse was out of the room Lyons went to a bathroom and locked the door. When he was found he was dead, having drowned.

Lyons, who was one of the best known brokers in Pittsburgh, was admitted to the hospital July 23, suffering from the drug habit. He was extremely nervous and was under guard of a nurse continually.

He Scores Mayor Gaynor's Treatment of Rosenthal Murder Case.

Following the murder of Rosenthal, Mayor Gaynor, defending the police, resorted to a certain class of "degenerate foreigners." Rabbi Wise characterizes Gaynor's treatment of the case as "an angry squeak."

ONE MURDER A DAY IN JULY.

That is Average Figured Out in New York by Homicide Bureau.

New York, Aug. 1.—A murder a day in New York during the month of July was found to be the average when the homicide bureau of four of the five boroughs of the city and the district attorney's office added up the killings at the end of the record month and got ready a fresh page for the coming days of August. Records show that the hot weather always stirs the murderers to action, but during the month just passed they outdid themselves in activity.

In Manhattan and the Bronx there were twenty-three murders. Kings county reported six murders, the borough of Richmond one and Queens none, or a total of thirty killings. During July, 1911, the homicide bureau of Manhattan and the Bronx had a busy month with fifteen killings, or eight less than this year.

The twenty-three murders listed in Manhattan and the Bronx during the month just ended include all deaths where murder was obvious or where the circumstances indicate a violent taking off, even though the murderer has escaped detection. The list, however, may be incomplete in that it does not include recent violent assaults, the victims of which may die.

Gang fights, or hired gangsters, are given as the cause of at least five of the murders in Manhattan and the Bronx and in a number of the remaining eighteen murders, where no important arrests have been made, gambling men are thought to have been back of the killings.

Crane Again Committeeman.

Boston, Aug. 1.—United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane was elected national committeeman from Massachusetts for the next four years at a meeting of the Republican state committee. The election devolved on the committee because of the deadlock in the Massachusetts delegation at the Chicago convention in June.

WAYNE CO. POULTRY ASS'N

often times that these are the most profitable hatches of all the season. In the first place the stock should be fully matured. Many authorities claim and advocate the using of two year old hens only, to produce our eggs for hatching. I have had equally good results with early hatched pullets or those a little over one year old.

Breeding stock must be kept in comfortable quarters with plenty of chance for exercise, being made to scratch for their living, and supplied with the necessary food for making the kind of eggs we want. One especially important item is green food, one of the best, easiest and cheapest to procure being sprouted oats, also they must have that constitutional vigor and vitality that will send them to their roosting place at night with their crops full and off the perch the first thing in the morning looking for some thing to eat. I really believe that Nature intended that every egg laid should hatch a chick and that that chick should live and develop to a full grown fowl.

The next thing in importance is the care of the eggs. Nature never proposed that a hen should lay or a chick should hatch when the thermometer plays around the freezing point, consequently eggs intended for hatching should be gathered several times a day and for best results should never be kept over two weeks as after this time eggs evaporate and lose their vitality very rapidly so that every possible effort should be made to avoid holding them longer. Right here is one of the best arguments advanced for the small incubator for the small producer. Washing eggs is very undesirable and a cool dark place of about 50 to 60 degrees is the best place to keep them, a little higher temperature to be preferred to a lower one as the chilling of the eggs has to a certain extent an undesirable effect upon the hatch. If eggs are to be kept any length of time they should be turned occasionally to prevent the yolk settling and adhering to the shell. One of the best ways to do this is simply to change the eggs from one basket to another.

If eggs are to be hatched with hens only those of good shape and strong shells should be placed in the nest as nothing is more disgusting than to have a hen break an egg or two every few days. The nest should be rather flat with plenty of room, rather than deep and narrow to allow the hen to turn the eggs which is very necessary. If an incubator is to be used it should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected after each hatch. This is very important. While there are two kind of incubators, hot water and hot air, and having practically no experience with the latter and exceptionally good results with the former, I naturally favor the hot water machine. I do not think there is any best machine as different conditions produce different results and the condition of the eggs is the most important part of all. Modern science has not yet produced a perfect incubator as there are some things such as moisture and ventilation that are not completely understood and unless we are of an experimental turn of mind, the wisest thing for us to do is to follow the instructions of the manufacturer as it is to his advantage as well as ours for us to procure large hatches.

Experience especially in the poultry business is the best teacher. In regard to temperature, most instructors say 102 degrees to 104 degrees; a lower temperature than a higher one. I have often seen the thermometer on the eggs register 107 degrees and have had it as high as 110 degrees and still get 70 to 85 per cent. of hatches. While this is not desirable I do not think it necessarily injures the hatch. The temperature in most machines should be watched quite close so sudden changes of the weather are apt to effect the temperature of the room and no thermostat can regulate this to any great extent. When the hatch is coming off the temperature should be raised to about 105 degrees and kept there as near as possible. The hatching of an egg is a drying out process consequently we must apply moisture in some manner either by placing a receptacle of water under the tray or sprinkling with warm water. The dryer the atmosphere and the more ventilation, the more moisture is required.

Another important item is the turning of the eggs. This may be done in several different ways. I have found that simply taking two or three rows of eggs from around the outside of the tray and placing them in the center does the work very effectively also changes the position of the eggs in the tray, making up for different temperatures in different parts of the tray. This should be done twice daily from the second until the nineteenth day after which they should not be disturbed. I do not think that the eggs can be turned too often if they are kept warm enough, as this exercises the embryo chick which produces and promotes activity and strength.

Death of Charles Smith.

Charles Smith died at his late home in Indian Orchard, near the Half Way House, on Wednesday afternoon, at the age of forty-two years. Deceased was born in Germany and came to America with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. David Smith, who survive him.
