Industrially Honesdaie is far ahead of other towns and cities. Parties derwear, at different times in their lives who, Shoe the turn of the tide of circumstances have left Honesdale, invariably return to this place to make their fortune and live the balance of their lives in their home town.

Honesdale is the county seat of Wayne and is located in one of the most picturesque places in Pennsylvania. The Maple City, as it is some-times called, is not only noted for its shady streets; beautiful parks and pure spring water, but also as a man-ufacturing center and place of residence. It is rapidly forging ahead in this line which has made it a live town and one that is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf to Canada.

The opportunities afforded in Honesdale and Wayne county are many and diversified. There are several waterpowers developed and others possible of development. Within a few miles of Honesdale a dam is being constructed for the largest power in this section of the country and in the State of Pennsylvania, that of harnessing the waters of the Wallen-Paupack river. This will insure cheap power, which alone will be an incentive to locate in Honesdale.

SPOONING BARRED AT CAPITOL

Cannot Even Hug and Kiss on Potomac Boats.

"No more spooning on the upper decks in the dark corners," is the edict that has gone out from the offices of the addition to two steamers, four other St. Johns and the Charles MacAlester, fire companies are within a radius two pleasure boats that ply the Pototwo pleasure boats that ply the Potomac river between Washington and Marshall Hall.

"Stop promiscuous hugging, kissing the town and help keep down the and flirting on the approaches to the capitol," is an order issued to capitol policemen.

The new rules on the St. Johns and the MacAlester prohibit kissing, embracing or squeezing hands. "Break water which is especially adapted for away there," is the command given boiler purposes. It contains no by the officers on the vessels and at the capitol when they come upon spooning couples. If the mandate is not obeyed a brilliant searchlight is turned on the guilty persons.

For many years dark spots about the approaches to the capitol have been used by spooners. It was not unusual to see as many as twenty-five couples in the cozy nooks that flank the senate and house wings.

ANECDOTES OF GENERAL BOOTH

Late Head of Salvation Army Was Many Sided.

HIS PRECEPTS FOR LONG LIFE.

Urged "Faster" In His Motor Missionary Campaign-Why the Anti-suicide Bureaus Were Founded-Could Tell a Good Story to Make a Point.

The death of General William Booth, founder and head of the Salvation Army, removes the grand old man of the world. Yet so well had his work been done that the army itself will not be appreciably affected by his re moval. Seldom has one man in his own lifetime built up an institution so numerically strong in all parts of the Many anecdotes are told of the dead leader to illustrate his many sided character.

In discussing the anti-suicide bureaus of the army he once said:

"Kindness and charity are factors of these bureaus. The charity will be of the right kind, I trust. There are, you know, two kinds of charity, and too much of it is like the barber's.

"There was a poor deacon in Warwick who had no money and needed to be shaved, and he went from barber to barber, but none of them, despite his holy office, was willing to shave him for nothing.

"In the end, though, he found a barber who, on hearing his tale, said

"'Sit down there in that chair." "Suddenly the barber's dog in the adjacent room set up a terrific howl-

"Be still, there!" cried the barber. And he muttered anxiously, 'What can they be doing to him? "'Alas,' said the deacon, 'I shouldn't wonder if some one was shaving him out of charity."

Needed No More Prayers.

On another occasion General Booth was talking to a New York reporter. "Are you saved?" he asked suddenly. The young man flushed, stammered and hesitated. "Well," said the general, "do not despair. There is a chance even for New York reporters." Then, discussing prayer, General Booth told a story, a story with a moral.

"There was a young clergyman ap-pointed to a small country town," he began, "and a short time after his arrival a horsy looking man in leggings stopped him on the street one day, bowed respectfully and said in a tremulous voice:

"If you please, sir, would you mind next Sabbath offering up a bit of a prayer for Milly Dean?

"The minister, of course, assented. The man, whose look was worried and haggard, took leave gratefully, and on the next and the two following Sundays Milly Dean was prayed for from the pulpit.

"Then one afternoon the man in leggings met the minister again.

"Thank you for them prayers, sir," he said, 'but you needn't pray no more for Milly Dean.

she dead?

"'Dead?' said the man in leggings. 'No; she's just won the Blue Ribbon handicap by a length and a half."

An instance of the fire and feverish anxiety of General Booth to compress as much work as possible into the closing years of his ministry was provided on his missions by motor. "Faster" was the word that impelled the general ever forward, and it is to be feared that in his anxiety to carry the message into the remote villages that are still off the train track he did not always observe the speed limit. He frequently exceeded thirty miles an hour.

When his chauffeur was getting all he could out of the engines the general's cry was still "Faster!" The car was capable of thirty-five miles an hour. That did not satisfy him. He always wanted to move quicker. He would sit on the front seat by the driver, whispering every now and again, "Faster!"

Precepts For Longevity. Seven pithy precepts for the attainment of old age were given by General Booth in explanation of his surprising activity and vigor. He said:

"Eat as little as possible. The average man eats too much. Instead of nour. ishing his body he overtaxes it, compelling his stomach to digest more food than it has capacity for.

"Drink plenty of water in preference to adulterated concoctions. Water is wholesome nourishment.

"Take exercise. It is just as foolish >= to develop the mind and not the body as it is to develop the body and not the mind. Perform some manual labor; dig, walk, chop wood or, if you 🔀 can talk with your whole body, why, then talk, but do it with all your might.

"Abstain from indulgences which overtax the body and injure not only yourself, but the generations that come after you. "Have a purpose in life that predominates above all else; that is beneficent to those about you and not to your own greedy self alone. If there is one thing for which I am glad it is that I have found a purpose which involves not me alone, but all humanity."
