

FLOOD AGAIN RAGES

New Cloudburst Adds Hundreds to Homeless.

FOOD IS RUSHED TO VICTIMS.

Heavy Rains Hit Washington County and Part of West Virginia—Caravans of Wagons Carrying Supplies Into Stricken Region.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.—Heavy rains that fell in Washington county and in parts of West Virginia added to the destruction wrought by Sunday night's storm. The rains continue to fall in torrents, with no prospect of abatement. Hundreds have been added to the host of homeless, who have seen raging streams carry their homes away. Relief is being sent into the stricken region.

The Wheeling board of trade raised $10,000. An appeal has been sent to Governor Glascock of West Virginia, and state aid is assured. At Wellsburg, Follansbee, W. Va.; Martin's Ferry and Steubenville, O., public subscriptions are being raised.

The Associated Charities in Wheeling and Pittsburgh have arranged for the shipment of food and clothing. As no railroads or trolleys are running in the flooded district, great caravans of wagons are carrying supplies, toiling over the mountain roads.

In Washington and Green counties and in the Pocahontas district of West Virginia many of the great coal mines have been flooded, and thousands of miners are out of work.

The Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio and Wabash railroads, however, are offering all these men work repairing the miles of track swept away. Five big concrete bridges on the Wheeling division of the Baltimore and Ohio were washed out last night.

The Wabash railroad announced that the losses to that road in Washington county alone would exceed $150,000. Six miles of the Wabash Pittsburgh terminal were shifted by Peters creek.

Coal operators in Washington, Greene, Fayette, Westmoreland and Cambria counties have during the last three weeks taken out of Pittsburgh practically all the big mine pumps that were held in stock here. At many of the mines it will be weeks before the water is pumped out and mining resumed.

MORSE BACK IN WALL STREET

Pardoned Banker, Reported Dying, Rents Offices at Old Stand.

New York, Sept. 5.—Reports long current in Wall street that Charles W. Morse, the banker sentenced to a long term in prison at Atlanta but later released by President Taft because of medical reports stating he could not live long, would soon be back in the game, were confirmed this afternoon when Morse appeared in his old office building at 40 Exchange place and rented an elaborate suit.

Morse arrived at the building unaccompanied. He was neatly dressed and appeared in perfect health. His cheeks were red and his eyes sparkled with the fire of ambition.

Many of the old attendants of the building recognized him as soon as he entered. He knew them, too, and gave all a hearty handshake. He was in exuberant spirits and did not seem conscious of the fact that he was the cynosure of all eyes as soon as the report flew around that "Morse was again back on the job."

The financier, who was convicted of violating the federal banking laws and who got into trouble as a result of skyrocketing financing, has been home from Germany two months. He was taken to Norheim springs for his health and was accompanied by his devoted wife, whose untiring efforts caused his parole by the president. It was rumored on his return that he would soon rehabilitate himself in the street.

WILSON KEPT BUSY

Confers, Talks With Foreigners, Makes Speech.

TAKES CRACK AT PROTECTION.

Talks of "Exaggerated Protective Policy" as Set Forth in Platform of Republican Party—Appeals for a Merchant Marine and Broader Banking.

New York, Sept. 5.—Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey laid before a very attentive audience in Yorkville Casino his view of what he described as "the exaggerated protective policy" set forth in the platform of the Republican party. He declared that its whole effect had been to make this country more and more a provincial country, and in elaborating that idea he made an appeal for a merchant marine and a banking system that will permit American bankers to do business on a level with bankers in other parts of the world. His speech was made at the dinner of the Workingmen's Woodrow's Wilson club.

Governor Wilson was the first speaker. He was introduced by President Bogart and received an ovation. He was interrupted frequently during his address by bursts of applause.

Before he left Sea Girt Governor Wilson was interrogated as to his opinion of the election in Vermont and what it purported for Democratic success at the presidential election in November. He was gratified at the showing that had been made by his party in a rock ribbed Republican state.

Democrats Encouraged.

"The fact that the Democrats more than held their own in Vermont, a Republican state," he said, "and also made substantial gains means business throughout the country. The encouraging thing about it is that the Democrats did not lose any votes to the new party. Their gains were made apparently at the expense of the Republican party."

The governor said he did not care to make any further comment until he had got the complete results.

Upon his arrival in New York the governor went into conference with Acting National Chairman William G. McAdoo, Representative Albert S. Burleson, who is head of the speaking bureau; Senator Pomerene of Ohio, Senator O'Gorman and Homer Cummings, who has charge of the speaking arrangements in the east. Governor Wilson met a company of editors of foreign language newspapers and other publications at the National Arts club and explained to them on what basis he would regulate the immigration to this country. He said he would distinguish between "voluntary immigrants" and those who have not come of their own free will. In his opinion those of the former class are Americans in spirit before they leave their homes in foreign countries and deserve to have from our people all the assistance they can get in the way of instruction.

After his meeting with the editors at the National Arts club the governor went to the Hotel Collingwood and remained there until the time for the dinner of the Woodrow Wilson Workingmen's club at the Yorkville casino.

FEARED LOSS OF ESTATES.

Wealthy Georgia Woman Kills Herself in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 5.—It is expected that relatives of Carlotta H. Berry, a wealthy society woman of Athens, Ga., who committed suicide in the Burlington hotel here, will arrive to take charge of the body.

It is believed that the fear of being deprived of her Alabama plantations, as well as an unfortunate love affair, drove the woman to suicide. The woman came to Cincinnati about a year ago and has been treated for the drug habit while here by Dr. A. H. Hunton. A letter which the Cincinnati doctor showed the police revealed that the woman was laboring under imaginary delusions and thoughts of prosecution. Uncashed checks were found among her effects.
