—Every good Republican should place an X at the top of the first column on the ballot.

—By voting a straight ticket you will vote for Taft electors and other candidates nominated at the National and State conventions.

—Eugene Cortright was awarded the contract for delivering the Wayne county ballots for the commissioners. His bid was $29.

—If you find your gate hanging on the crossarms of the telephone poll tomorrow morning, don't be surprised for tonight is Hallowe'en.

—Grace Episcopal church, Sunday Nov. 3: Holy Communion and Sermon at 10:30 a. m., Evening prayer and Sermon at 7:30; Sunday school at 12 M.

—Mrs. O. M. Spettigue, Jr., gave a dinner party to six of her young lady friends Wednesday and entertained at cards at her home on West street.

—Lieutenant Becker, formerly of the New York police department, was sentenced Wednesday to die in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison the week beginning December 9.

—When Hallowe'en pranks destroy and damage property, as was done last night by five well-known young men wearing masks, fun ceases to be fun and becomes lawlessness, which should be dealt with by the town authorities.

—The theatre going people were favorably impressed with the production of "Freckles" at the Lyric last Tuesday evening. A number of people from the rural districts attended the play. Twenty-five rigs stopped at one livery that night.

W. F. Wood and wife and H. D. Wood, wife and daughter Charlotte of Benchlake, started today in Mr. Wood's car for Albany, Mr. Wood's boyhood home. They will visit Bevue and several places in Schoharie county before returning home.

—The inside pages of to-day's issue of The Citizen is replete with news. On page six will be found the premium list awards at the recent Wayne county fair. Page three announcement is made of our new serial story which will appear in our next issue. There is also an article on the same page on the tariff which invites your attention. Page two is candidate's news for the wise voter.

—The Maple City Five will positively play Taylor at the Rink on Friday evening at 8:30. The locals have rented the rink and the skaters and will have skating before and after the game. The Honesdale team composed of Bader, Brader, Mangan, McDermott, O'Connell, Tarkett, Ross, and J. Polt, are in good condition, having practiced for about four weeks and expect to defeat their old rivals. They have purchased fifty new uniforms with sweaters in grey, trimmed with maroon.

—Neal Ball, one of the world's champion Boston Red Sox, who was a recent visitor in Honesdale, is a utility infielder with the Red Sox and did not get into the games for the World's championship except to bat for one of the pitchers. He has been in the major leagues five years, starting with the New York Yankees, going from there to the Cleveland Americans, who sold him to Boston last year. He has the distinction of being the only man in professional baseball to make a triple play unassisted. He was playing second base for New York when the play occurred with a runner on first and second base, and the batter, on a hit and run play, drove a liner into Ball's hands, he touched the runner going from first to second base and touched second before the runner, who was going to third, could return. He has a nice gold medal studded with diamonds to show for this accomplishment.

LOOK OUT! FOR PRANKS ON HALLOWE'EN

Many Things Will be as They Seem and You are Likely to Get "Stung"—Take in Your Gait.

Don't you believe anything you see or hear or eat or do Thursday night. The whole blamed country is going to be upside down and nothing will be what it looks like. This decision has been reached after a careful inspection of what a whole lot of persons of an inventive turn of mind have concocted to fool the public with on Hallowe'en.

Honest, there are cigars that ain't. Your best friend is liable to pull out a case, take off the cover and ask you to have one, and as you reach for it he pushes a button or something and the cigars disappear and their places are taken by a little figure that gives you the laugh. Beware of the party with a little hand camera, who wants to take your picture, too. The result of that snapshot will be something scandalous.

Things have got to be spooky and unreal on the last night of October. There's a reason. This celebration is not modern by a long shot. It dates back from times when we were all Pagans. Perhaps Mr. Stonehatchet observed it. It is possible that it dates back to the time when our remote ancestors were polywogs or germs of some kind. In any event, whoever started it made a harvest festival of it. Hence the reign of the pumpkin.

The Pagans and the polywogs and Mr. Stonehatchet believed in fairies, and for that matter, so does every little girl now, and this last night of October is the time they set to go abroad and revel and they are in a particularly amiable mood then and ready to do anything you ask them to. They always did.

The Druids thought it was too important a day to let pass unobserved, and they made a big thing of it. In the ninth century Pope Gregory swiped it from the Pagans. He decreed that November 1 should be dedicated to observing the memory of "all hallows" or "all saints," and selected that day because it immediately followed the Pagan harvest festival and the fairies had all gone to sleep again.

There have been various ways of observing the occasion, but none better than the one we are used to, of bobbing for apples, and cracking nuts, and eating "pumpkin" pie, and masking and dancing and behaving just like we were somebody else.

At dinner parties the hostess is quite likely to make you eat by the light that shines from grinning skulls or pumpkins heads, and when you start to eat do not be surprised if a slab of roast beef should turn out to be a poached egg or a boiled tomato can. She will feed you all right, but she may have a little fun with you first.

Cupid gets in the game good and strong. If you are in love with a girl and haven't the nerve to consult her about it, just roast a few chestnuts. Put them side by side, one representing you and one her. If the chestnuts behave and stick together, go right to her and tell her you love her, and buy the ring on the way. It will be all right. But if the chestnuts misbehave, and one takes a notion to amble off, get another girl.

TEMPERANCE OR ROOSEVELT?

Meeting at Court House Tuesday Evening a Disappointment—Even Progressives Objected.

The best friends of the cause of temperance must concede that the meeting held at the Court House on Tuesday evening, Oct. 29, was anything but a success, and the cause of temperance has certainly not been advanced by the effort which that meeting was intended to put forth. The meeting was under the auspices of the Local Option or Anti-Saloon League of Pennsylvania, presided over by Dr. Brant. Father Curran, who has long been looked upon as one of the leaders in the temperance cause and an advocate of civic righteousness was selected as the speaker of the evening. Father Curran is well known in Honesdale and throughout Wayne county for his advocacy of right principles and particularly in his temperance views.

Rev. John J. O'Toole of St. John's Catholic church, was chosen Chairman of the meeting, and after some preliminary remarks which were appropriate and timely, he expressed the pleasure which it gave him to introduce Father Curran to a Honesdale audience. Father Curran referred to his visit to Honesdale on a previous occasion, when he spoke on the question of temperance; he assured his audience that those who heard his former talk would not find this a repetition. He said times had changed since then, conditions were different, and consequently his talk would not be on the same lines. He outlined what he considered the elements of success in a man or woman. He said the study of human nature and character was absolutely necessary for those who intended to accomplish good in the world. He said the temperance cause through out this country was advancing with marvelous strides and that now it appeared as if the friends of temperance would have matters their own way within a comparatively short time, fifty years at the longest. He then referred to the present progressive movement throughout the country to the breaking away of party lines in order to advance progressive principles. From this point his talk was on the lines of the political speech rather than that of temperance. Whether or not the Reverend speaker saw any connection or association between the progressive political movement and the Anti-Saloon League was not known, but the audience certainly failed to see any similarity between those great questions now before the people.

Those who came prepared to give Father Curran encouragement by the presence of a large audience, were apparently not only disappointed but displeased to have the object of the meeting so disregarded and a political issue substituted for that of the subject which they came to hear discussed. No person denies the right of the Reverend speaker to his opinions or his right to express them at any time and place designated for that purpose and those who come to hear him are appraised of what is in store for them, but it is extremely indelicate to have a large audience assembled for the purpose of hearing a discussion upon the temperance question to be entertained with political views antagonistic to the ideas of a large majority of the people present. We trust Father Curran will come to our town again to discuss the temperance question or we will be welcome to discuss any question, but we trust the people will be informed as to the subject which they are expected to hear from the speaker whose reputation has gone far beyond the boundaries of the State of Pennsylvania.

WAIF WALKS SEVERAL MILES

Was Living at Whites Valley, Came to Honesdale, Given Auto Ride and Experienced Time of His Life.

After walking in heavy rubber boots from Whites Valley to Honesdale, a distance of 13 miles, "Joe," a waif, aged 13 years, arrived at the Roe home on Fair avenue a few days ago and asked for a meal, which was willingly given the young man. He said he had been working for a man at Whites Valley for the past two years, but was given to understand by the party for whom he worked that he had no further use for him. Joe, who came from a Catholic bureau in New York City, was taken by the Wayne county farmer and worked all right until a few days ago, when it is alleged, Joe called "digi," his former employer a farmer got mad, which resulted for his coming to Honesdale.

A WILSON PAPER ON VETERANS.

The demoralization in California may be understood by the following from the Sawelle (Cal.) Sentinel of June 19, 1912, in reply to an article in another paper commending the veterans:

"Those who gave the best of their young lives. What abominable rot! The majority of you old rats (paupers) ought to be abolished. Too much booze is what ails you. The idea of a lot of children standing shoulder to shoulder is absurd. For goodness sake, keep out of print. I have visited Home and heard the senile drivel of its inmates, the majority of whom never smelt powder except in a firecracker. A true soldier would scorn to take the hard-earned money of the widow, the fatherless and the orphans of his country as you old soaks have done for years.

"Los Angeles is full of so-called old soldiers, babbling about imaginary battles fought in their sleep or while under the influence of booze. There is no other country under the heavens that is infested with such a kang of parasites as the G. A. R. The true G. A. R. died on the battlefield, and President Abraham Lincoln was the hero of the war and of the country."

OUR NEW SERIAL STORY.

The Citizen takes pleasure in announcing to its readers that it has secured the latest story of Henry Russell Miller, author of "The Man Higher Up." Our story, the opening chapter of which will appear in the next issue of The Citizen, is entitled "His Rise to Power."

This is the novel, the critics say, that best describes present day political conditions in this country. It is forceful, dramatic, picturesque and true to life. John Dunmeade, the fearless young district attorney, proves himself the unbought champion of the people and to be true to his oath of office risks losing the girl he loves. Everyone will want to read about Katherine Hampden, daughter of the capitalist, and the course of her love affair with John. The story is fully illustrated. After you have read the first chapter you will want to continue reading this very interesting story. We are making a liberal offer to you whereby you can follow this romantic story and it will not cost you one penny for the remainder of this year. If you are not already a subscriber to this popular family paper we will send it free from now until January 1, 1913, providing you send The Citizen Publishing company $1.50 for one year's subscription. In this instance you will get 120 issues for only $1.50, which will credit you up to January 1, 1914.
