NOVELTIES IN BUTTON TRIMMINGS.

How to Add Effective Touches to the Smart Costume.

Unusual methods of arranging and attaching small trimming buttons are among the season's novelties.

Take the tiny pearl glove button, for instance. This is the button seen by the hundred on lingerie blouses as well as on all manner of adjustable accessories. These commonplace little buttons, with four eyelets, may be made decidedly ornamental.

If the blouse has a touch of any color which should be accentuated sew the little pearl buttons on with heavy wash silk of the desired shade, having the stitches go into one eyelet as a common center. This gives a pretty triangular effect to the center of the button instead of the usual crossing of the stitches. By joining all four eyelets with stitches the effect of a hollow square is gained, and if the button is not intended for real service a pretty novelty is to carry the stitch entirely over the button and thrust the needle into the fabric just outside the circumference of the button.

By using heavy silk an effective bit of color may be introduced in any one of these ways. If wash embroidery silk is used the lingeric blouse so trimmed may be laundered as satisfactorily as though no color appeared in its trimming.

Instead of buying expensive white able white net, experiment with the crocheted rings of various sizes that come for use in the making of renaissance lace. These range in price from size, and may be used wherever trimming buttons are desired.

The small rings have a center opening so small that a few French knots of either white or colored mercerized floss entirely fill the space and take away the otherwise flat look. Buttons so made, when used with a mock buttonhole outlined in silk or linen floss matching the center, form an attractive trimming for lingeric blouses. For slik blouses, where jewel buttons are in high favor, try buying the nail heads to be found at the notion counter of any of the large shops. These are usually displayed in a glass covered case divided into many sections, so that the purchaser may see at a glance just what is to be had. All the fashionable colors are to be found in these mock jewels, and, whether one povets coral, turquoise, jade or ame thyst trimmings, tiny ornamental buttons to match are easily secured in this way. The outlined buttonhole to accompamy these small buttons should be worked in silk that is not too heavy, as the charm of such trimming lies in its you." daintiness. Between frills of lace a band of satin set with a row of these tiny buttons and outlined buttonholes shows to excellent advantage.

A DOUBLE MISTAKE

By ARTHUR W. BREWSTER

Happy the man in whose daily avocation there is no risk. When I was a young man I went to work for a wholesale drug firm. One day a retailer wrote from a neighboring town that our concern had sold him a drug that made every one sick who took any of it. It turned out that I had put up the package sold.

I never entirely got over the narrow escape I had had in this case. I received only the usual reprimand from my employers, for no one can perfectly rely on accuracy always. Later I set up for myself as a retailer of drugs. Though our system was perfect, we had some narrow escapes from committing unintentional murder. When any of my clerks made a mistake I impressed upon him the importance of being careful, but I could not in my heart blame them.

There are occasions where a person who is perfectly methodical, adheres to a system, exercises every care and yet will do something that he can never afterward understand why he did it. Then there are occasions when it is impossible to fix the mind on one's work. One day not long after I had set up for myself a young lady came into the store and asked for some harmless medicine. At the same time a man asked for a poison with which to kill bugs. The young lady happened to be one who impressed me. I couldn't keep my eyes off her. Before the two different packages were ready other persons came in, and I did one of those things I should not have done. Instead of paying no attention to newcomers till after serving those present I undertook to serve all of them. What was the result? When the young lady who had called for a simple remedy and the man who wished a bug poison had gone a horrible suspicion came into my head that I had given the poison to the young girl. I could not warn her, for I didn't know who she was.

Why had I broken my rule about serving a number of persons at once? I couldn't answer the question except for the reason that I had been very much struck with the young lady. Indeed, I had looked at her so admiringly that I had noticed a faint flush come into her cheek. But the fearful consequences of her or any one else taking the dose of the bug polson for the medicine she had called for would surely result fatally.

A crisis hung over my head which, till it had passed, would keep me in a frightful suspense. As soon as the calamity occurred, if I had made the error I feared I had made, the medicine I had sold would be examined, my name would be on the package and I would soon hear of the trouble. The best that could be said for my comfort was that I would not likely be tried for murder, because I had no motive for poisoning any one. But I would carry to my grave the knowledge that I had through carelessness caused the death of the person to whom I had sold it, for I remembered she asked "How often shall I take it?" Furthermore, my business would be ruined and I would not have the heart Straw Should Be Sparingly Supto go elsewhere and make another the trouble fell upon me-first, I would never again start in the drug business second, I would commit suicide.

Every morning and every evening I took up a newspaper with fear and trembling. When a week had passed I felt that the danger was somewhat lessened. But had the young lady died from the effect of poison would those about her surely attribute her death to that cause? This gave me a feeling similar to that of one who may expect st any moment to drop down from heart disease, apoplexy or some other fatal disease.

I am one of those persons whose active, imaginative minds may influence their bodies. I became morbid, then ill, simply from suspense. I took a partner into my business and absent- is cold. ed myself from it most of the time. A crochet buttons for a blouse of wash- physician told me that I was going into a decline. But I knew well enough that if I could be assured that I had not killed any one I would be well enough. Finally it occurred to me that 15 to 30 cents a hundred, according to if the young lady had not suffered the consequences of my possible error she would likely have visited my store again. One day I was wandering aimlessly through an unfrequented street tortured by my troubles when, turning a corner, I came face to face with the girl whose fate was driving me into melancholia. There she was, tripping along as healthy, as rosy, as fresh as life. Beside myself with joy, I made one bound, caught her in my arms and covered her face with kisses.

When I realised what I had done I was stricken with a fresh terror lest she have me arrested for assault. Instead, when I released her she smiled at me through her blushes and said, "I knew how you felt toward me the day I went into your store for a prescription."

"You knew that I"-"Of course. You didn't say it, but you looked it."

"And why have you never come again ?" "Do you suppose I'd do that? Not I. It was for you to seek me, not me

We have been married a long while, but to this day she doesn't know why I was so joyful at meeting her again. I wouldn't dave tell her.

TIMELY HINTS FOR FARMERS

Number of Hens to a Pen.

The Maine experiment station recently finished a test to ascertain the number of bens most profitable to keep in pens. All the pens were 10x16 feet, giving 160 square feet. The hens were Brahmas and Plymouth Rocks, and these tests continued six months.

The hens were fifteen, twenty, twenty-five and thirty to a pen. The conditions and hens were as much alike as possible to make the test a conclusive one.

The pen with fifteen bens made a profit of 80 cents per hen, and the eggs laid numbered 976.

The pen with twenty hens made a showing of 1,208 eggs for the pen and a profit of 71 cents per hen. The pen with twenty-five hens made a laying record of 1,328 eggs and a profit of 35 cents per ben. The pen with thirty hens had an egg production of 1,200 and a profit of 30 cents for each hen. The experiment shows distinctly that bens can be so crowded as to reduce the profit of an egg farm. The difference of twenty-five eggs per hen for six months is great. On the basis of fifteen to the pen the profits of the total ninety hens were $72; on a basis of thirty to the pen the profits were $36. In each case the actual cost of feed was deducted.

Winter Farm Suggestions. Build the feed racks where the stock can eat in the shelter. The frosted bit should be put in your own mouth first to see if it hurts.

Your sheds need ventilators, but knot holes and cracks should be calked. Do something with the big, roomy gable space in your barns. Seal it up or fill it with straw.

Don't leave your straw roofed shed covered with snow to drip down on the young calves and pigs.

Ordinary well water is about 30 degrees above freezing when taken out of the well. Let the stock drink while it is being pumped.

Reboard the water trough on the outside, leaving an air space, and put a cover over the trough. This prevents the water from freezing so readily .-Farm Journal.

ample width between the branches of the lower jaw, is commonly held to be an indication of constitution, while a fleshy, coarse head is deemed to denote the opposite. The former assumption is, however, very often wide of the mark, but the latter is certainly in many cases correct.

BEDDING FOR THE FARROWING SOW.

plied and Cut Up Short.

The bedding for a sow at farrowing time should be sufficient only for cleanliness and dryness, writes a farmer in American Agriculturist, If furnished in large quantities the little fellows will be covered up with straw by the usual pawing of an uneasy sow, making them liable to be lost or crushed. All wheat or rye straw should be cut into short lengths and used sufficiently to cover the floor slightly, but not enough for her to paw into a large pile for a bed. After the youngsters are a few days old and develop size and strength increase the straw sufficiently for them to burrow into if the weather

Around the four sides of this platform or floor are nailed boards one foot wide with a strip of 2 by 4 in each corner to strengthen them. This makes a strong, substantial bunk eight inches deep, the concrete, giving an air space which always assures a dry bed.

Keep Bearings Adjusted. See that all bearings, whether those of the corn plow or wheat binder or any other farm machine, are properly adjusted. One loose bearing has a tendency to loosen others. More harm can be done to a machine by running it on loose bearings for a few days than would result in a year's ordinary

Green For the Hens,

It pays to bury a few extra heads of cabbage or pull a few bushels of turnips rather than let the frost strike them. The hens relish green food during the winter months just as much as we do lettuce and celery.
