MORTIMER'S PLEA.

Deposed Clergyman Says He Was In Ill Health.

DECLARES INDIVIDUALS FAIL.

Also Asserts He Was Sent For by Bishop Rhinelander Quite Unexpectedly—Remained Silent Until He Learned From Bishop That Matter Was Closed.

Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—The Rev. Dr. Alfred G. Mortimer, who was deposed from the Episcopal ministry by Bishop Rhinelander, broke silence for the first time since his resignation as rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church. His statement reads: "For some time past my health has been failing, and I knew my days were drawing to a close, but I did not anticipate the ending which came last week. The bishop sent for me quite unexpectedly. I at once placed myself in his hands and humbly accepted his decision, and I remained silent until I learned from him that the matter was closed. "The best part of my life has been spent in building up St. Mark's, its church missions and spiritual agencies, which all speak for themselves, and I am leaving it in its most prosperous condition. I have been offered extensive literary work in England for a period of years and in a few days start on my return there. "I grieve very greatly that I should have brought suffering on those I love so well. I have no desire to blame any one for the action taken and deeply appreciate the many letters of sympathy which I have received from my brother clergy and also from many members of my parish, and in commending these to God's care I would remind them that individuals fall and pass away, but the church of God remains and that I have ever taught my people to look beyond the minister to the Saviour and lord of all."

DYING, MAY SET MAN FREE.

Convict Always Protested His Innocence of Murder. Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—Serving a twenty-year sentence in the Eastern penitentiary for a murder he has steadfastly insisted he did not commit, Henry Fisher of Shamokin, Pa., broke down and wept when he heard that the statement of a dying woman may set him free. "Didn't I always tell you I was innocent, warden?" he cried, tears coursing down his cheeks. Then he was seized with a violent fit of coughing. Recently Mrs. Margaret Miller was taken to the Shamokin State hospital suffering from injuries inflicted by her son. Doctors say she has slight chance for recovery. It was noticed that the woman seemed troubled in mind, and doctors questioned her. At first she was reluctant to unburden herself, but finally she told the doctors she did not wish to die with guilty knowledge on her soul and, it is said, declared that her son, George Miller, thirty-five years old, who had beaten her in a drunken frenzy, had been present at the murder of Mrs. Klingner and that Fisher did not commit the crime.

CROWDED CAR IS BLOWN UP.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 2.—Seventy persons crowded into a trolley car at Nanticoke narrowly escaped death when unidentified persons put a stick of dynamite on the rails. The car was on its way to Sheatown and had just reached a switch when the explosion occurred, smashing the windows and hurling the passengers together. The floor was shattered and the machinery wrecked. None of the passengers suffered serious injury. Detective Peter Conroy, who was on the car, saw a crowd of foreigners standing near by. As he approached them they lighted the fuse of another stick of dynamite and buried it at him. The fuse went out before it exploded. The foreigners fled. No arrests have been made.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Snyder were also guests of Mrs. H. H. Roebcker. Without a hitch the Christmas exercises passed off very nicely. The church was crowded and everybody appeared to enjoy himself. Rev. W. E. Webster received an eight-day clock, Supt. Ammerman a foot-warmer and Miss Ruth Webster a present. In fact, the presents were deluged out by the hundred and the Sunday school scholars numbered about 210, so we think they were all out. Christmas is always a red letter day in Sterling and everybody goes to church on that occasion. On Sunday the school was reorganized as follows: Superintendent, L. F. Ammerman; assistant superintendent, J. E. Cross; organist, Ruth Webster; treasurer, Dr. R. A. Smith, and George E. Cross was elected secretary and Olive Simons assistant. Messrs. THE BLIGHT DISEASE.

Blight Commission Making Experiments to Determine Treatment—Coating of Varnish is Recommended.

The destruction of large ornamental chestnut trees growing on lawns, in parks and on farms through the ravages of the chestnut tree blight has depreciated the value of many Pennsylvania properties, and the owners naturally are greatly interested in learning how to treat and preserve these individual trees to the best advantage. The Pennsylvania Chestnut Tree Blight Commission, 1421 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, has just issued bulletin No. 2, "Treatment of Ornamental Chestnut Trees Affected with the Blight Disease," which supplies detailed information upon the subject, showing how trees valued as orchard trees or for decorative purposes and warranting the expenditure of considerable time and money for their preservation, should be treated. The bulletin refers to fake remedies, and declares that in many cases the method of treatment suggested showed that the sponsor is either ignorant or unscrupulous while in other instances the treatment of the infested trees is done in such a haphazard manner that it is entirely worthless. The Pennsylvania Chestnut Tree Blight Commission is carrying on a series of outdoor experiments and laboratory investigations and the National authorities are also making extensive resources to determine the most practical means of treatment of orchard and ornamental chestnut trees, with promise already of interesting results. Where the disease is working beneath the bark, spraying is usually futile, by spraying the trees at certain periods for the purpose of preventing infection may prove successful. Lime-sulphur solution or Bordeaux mixture may be used with good effect. It is also recommended that a coating of tree varnish or a band of tree tangle foot should be applied to the base of healthy trees showing on lawns, etc., to prevent the possibility of infection from crawling insects. The bulletin is a plain, practical dissertation upon an all-important economic subject, and should be in the hands of all friends of forestry conservation.

RURAL SIGN BOARDS.

The Wilmington Morning News says: One of the first things thought of in the Sprout plan for the improvement of the highways of Pennsylvania is sign boards for the cross roads so that travelers will have no difficulty in finding their way. Strangers will not go down a mile or so before they discover that they are on the wrong road, neither will they be forced to question some passer-by, whose information is often inaccurate or confusing. Some weeks ago the first of the new sign boards was put up by the highway commission of Pennsylvania. The posts and letters are of iron and arrows point the direction. Until recent years little attention was paid to signboards in Pennsylvania, although the law required constables of the neighborhood to report absence of the posts. Motor clubs interested themselves in erecting the index posts, but hereafter the State will see that posts are placed along the 8,000 miles of improved highway as contemplated under the Sprout bill should that measure finally become a law. Before automobile travel was so heavy there was no great need for index boards. Strangers seldom came into a community, and if they did they were supposed to put up uncomplainingly with the discomforts that used to be thought were inevitable with country life. And a man who lived in the neighborhood was presumed to know the direction of every road in his locality.

ULSTER MEN STORM IN VAIN.

Again Defeated in House of Commons on Test Vote.

London, Jan. 2.—Ulster must accept the home rule bill as well as every other province in Ireland, according to a vote in the house of commons. An amendment was proposed by the Unionist members to exclude Ulster from the operations of the bill. This amendment was debated at some length and with considerable rancor, but it was finally beaten by a vote of 294 to 197. When the debate opened Sir Edward Carson, the chairman of the Ulster Unionist organization, earnestly deprecated what he called the tendency of the ministerial members to laugh at and treat with levity the attitude of the Orange Ulster men. It was a stern fact, and he (Sir Edward) was convinced that nothing but force could compel the Ulster men to break their covenant and submit to home rule. Premier Asquith in reply said the government in framing the measure had taken all precautions possible to guard against the Irish parliament misusing its powers and was still prepared to add any safeguards that could be shown to be necessary, but they could not accept the proposed amendment. If Ulster was excluded the bill would be wrecked. John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, described the amendment as a piece of political tactics. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, said disaster would follow if the bill were carried against the will of Ulster. He expressed the belief that the Unionists in Ireland would rather be ruled by a foreign country than by the Irish Nationalists. Winston Churchill interrupted with a sarcastic reference to Mr. Law's remark about a foreign country, saying, "This is the latest Tory threat; Ulster will secede to Germany." This stung the Unionists, and a great uproar followed. There were shouts of "Germany!" "Which Germany?" "Who said Germany?" The speaker appealed in vain for order, while all the time Churchill stood up and attempted to continue his remarks. Every time he attempted to speak he was interrupted, and finally he sat down after having apparently succeeded in achieving his bile stirring purpose by his gratuitous allusion to Germany. The amendment was then put to a vote and beaten by the government combine.
