

IN THE REALM OF FASHION

A Smart Evening Costume.

The model with the evening wrap which is illustrated here shows an evening frock with a draped tunic. Over a foundation of white charmeuse a tunic of white net, dotted with silver and trimmed with bands of tapestry blue velvet, produces a cloud-wrap like effect altogether fascinating. The bodice is severely plain with the exception of revers, which form a V shaped yoke in front. Flat bows of the velvet adorn the girle and tunic.

THE FASHIONABLE LINGERIE WRINKLES

Ravishingly Lovely Creations of Lawn and Filmy Lace.

At this season there are not only many attractive articles to be found at very reasonable prices, but there are ideas galore for the home sewer.

More ravishingly beautiful combinations of filmy lace, hand embroidery, finest batiste or crepe de chine and exquisite threadings of pale blue and pink satin ribbons than those in this season's display can scarcely be imagined.

Indeed, one gazes a little dubiously at some of the gossamer creations, wondering if they are really meant for wear. Last season we were charmed with the gowns with entire yokes of rich lace, beaded with soft satin ribbons; this year the lace in some of the newest creations has been abandoned for sheerer effects of net, both plain and figured.

Princess slips of batiste, messaline or crepe de chine are elaborated with motifs of lace in scallop design in both the lower parts and finished with deep flounces of hand embroidery, applied beneath the handsome lace scallops, the slight fullness held in with tiny pin tucks. French embroidery in dainty tracery ornaments the upper and lower sections of the five panels of such a slip, the panels being outlined with beading, and, of course, no garment is complete without the ubiquitous bow or roses of ribbon somewhere about the yoke front.

Petticoats are modeled of the same sheer fabric batiste or of crepe de chine in white, and they are made on slender lines, fanciness being applied in the flounce by alternating rich embroideries with finest of val and shadow laces, separated with narrow and broad headings inset with satin ribbon. It seems that ribbon must be used if it is only a flat pump bow on one side at the top of the flounce.

Combination garments are ornate with cluny, Irish lace and val and many medallions of the lace or blind embroidery of finest Swiss or handwork. Very short sleeves cut in one with the corset cover are used on a number of the newer styles of combinations.

Evening Fabrics.

Satin charmeuse, chiffon velvet, rich yet supple brocades, woven with gold or silver metal and cloth of gold or silver, are much used blended with diaphanous fabrics, alnon, gauze, soft silk, crape, jeweled net and so on. Shot effects are greatly sought after and sometimes obtained by placing one tissue over another. Gold is lavishly employed, and yellow of every shade, from primrose to deep orange, is extremely fashionable, while blue and mauve are next in favor, and white is as much worn as ever.

A Coral Sleeve Button

By ALLAN G. LAMOND

A murder was committed in Naples, Italy. Signor Lancani, a single gentleman living in apartments, was the victim, and since he was well off and fond of display he had considerable jewelry—for a man—which was taken. The police learned of the missing articles so far as they could be determined and gave a description of them to Giuseppe Varilli, a member of the carabinieri, or national police, who was given the case to make out of it what he could. There was missing one gold chronometer watch, two gold chains, a number of shirt studs and other articles of similar character. The assassin and robber in making his exit had dropped a link sleeve button on the floor. They make in Italy of pink coral exquisite adornments, and this single sleeve button was twin roses of the most delicate carving, set in gold.

Varilli looked at it admiringly. "Whoever has the mate to it," he said, "will scarcely be able to refrain from wearing it, so beautiful is it. If he had it as well as its mate, he will surely betray himself on account of it." However, the officer put it in his vest pocket with the vague expectation that it might lead to a clue.

The murder had been committed at an hour when a number of persons were about, but no one could be found who would admit that he had seen any one in the building who did not belong there at the time of the assassination. Varilli, who knew the criminal side of Naples well, assumed that the murderer was a member of the dreaded Camorra, and if any one dared to peach upon him he would do so at the risk of his life.

A year passed without the slightest clue to the Lancani murder. Several of the missing articles of jewelry turned up, but were always found on persons above suspicion. They were ready to tell where they got them, but either the person from whom they were obtained or the next possessor beyond could not remember just how the jewel had come to him. But the sleeve button was never regained. "It is too beautiful," said Varilli. "The rascal will not part with it. He will not wear it in his cuff, for he has no mate for it. He will not get a mate made, for he can only secure one from a skilled carver, such as made the one he has. Were I in his place I would have it made into two studs. I would not turn it into a scarfpin, for one rose would do for that, and I could not use the other rose. Yes, that is the only thing to do with it, and if the assassin wears it he will do so as a couple of shirt studs. He will wear a necktie and not a scarf, because the scarf would hide it. My theory rests on the idea that his vanity will get the better of his caution."

One day Varilli's chief started him to London, where news had been received that a certain bandit, who had murdered a traveler on the road between Sorrento and Amalfi who could not or would not furnish a ransom, was living apparently in a well to do condition. On his arrival in London Varilli sought the Italian quarter, but his quarry, passing under the name of Scalpo, was not to be found there.

Varilli spent a couple of months at the English capital and was about to give up his quest and return to Naples when one evening he entered a music hall and, taking a seat at a table, called for the English drink, ale, and a cigar. Unlike nearly all Italians the detective had light hair and eyes. Moreover, though he spoke English indifferently, he had learned to speak it without the Italian pronunciation. Indeed, a stranger would have taken him rather for a German than an Italian.

Noticing a man at the next table to him sitting alone, he got up and took a seat opposite the other. The man looked at him with a pair of suspicious eyes from under the rim of his hat, evidently not relishing his movement. "Don't disturb yourself," said Varilli. "I think I have seen you in Berlin. Are you not Herr Berhoff, a brewer?"

"I have never been in Berlin in my life," said the other, showing by his speech that he was an Italian, "and I am not a brewer."

"Then I have been mistaken," said Varilli, who had desired to get closer to the man and hear him speak. "Now that I see those beautiful coral studs you wear I take it you are from Italy. I have never seen such carving as that except in Naples."

At this the man changed countenance, involuntarily drawing his coat over his shirt front. Then he glanced about him as if looking for an exit.

"I am from Naples myself," Varilli went on saying. "I know exactly where those studs came from. There is a shop in Naples facing the bay where they are sold. I have a pair of roses composing a link sleeve button." The man glared and, rising, stood at bay. Varilli put his hand in his vest pocket, took out the sleeve button and held it up before the other.

"In a public music hall," he continued, "in the center of London it will be impossible for you to escape. At the slightest commotion policemen will come. If you will go quietly with me there need be no disturbance." A week from that evening Varilli delivered his prisoner, who turned out to be both the bandit he was after and the murderer of Lancani, to the authorities at Naples. He was condemned to that which is worse than death—solitary confinement for life.

NEW TALES THAT ARE TOLD

The Best That Borah Got.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho is one of the most democratic fellows you ever saw, and he goes around Washington wearing a blue sack suit and a felt hat, all of which leads Mrs. Borah to give him numerous lectures in a gentle manner, indicating her belief that he should have more regard for his senatorial dignity and drape his stalwart form in a Prince Albert coat, not to mention pressing down upon his belligerent brow a high silk hat. So far, however, the senator has not increased the sale of frock coats, but has enjoyed a wonderful degree of physical comfort, the story of which he has frequently unfolded to Senator Gore, the blind man from Oklahoma.

"MY DEAR, YOU DON'T SEEM TO BE INTERESTED," SAID THE SENATOR.

One evening Borah told his wife that he had received a great compliment, the same being that he was the best dressed man in the United States senate. Mrs. Borah, sitting on the other side of the reading table, made no answer and conveyed the general idea that the conversation had reached a stage which bored her immensely.

"My dear, you don't seem interested," said the senator, "and you don't ask me who paid me the compliment."

"I am always interested in everything you do and anything that happens to you," replied Mrs. Borah, "but I don't have to ask you who told you about being so well dressed. I know who it was. It was Senator Gore."

THE TABLES TURNED BY CHAMP CLARK

Episode In the Early Life of the Speaker of the House.

People who meet Champ Clark for the first time are under the impression that he is without knack for remembering names and faces. On the contrary, as his home folks know, he is particularly adept in the difficult art. Billy Mayhall, who runs the Bowling Green Times in Pike county, Mo., found out about it many years ago. Clark was practicing law. He had his office over a drug store in the town, and he slept in the rear room. His daily walk took him in front of the Bowling Green Times office. Day after day Clark passed and day after day Mayhall stood in the doorway. Nobody spoke.

When Clark began to run for office Mayhall told some friends he couldn't be for him because Clark lived in the same town and didn't know him. About the same time Clark went into Mayhall's office, and, going up to the case where the editor was "sticking" type, he said:

"Say, Billy, I'm afraid you've got something against me. I've been passing your office for a year now, and you've never spoken to me."

The editor then realized that perhaps the shoe was on the other foot—Saturday Evening Post.

The Truth About Old Age.

George F. Baer, the famous Philadelphia railroad man, said on his seventieth birthday:

"I agree with Professor Metchnikoff about the wisdom of the old. Professor Osler made it fashionable to decry gray hairs, but my experience has been that the old not only possess wisdom, but they seek it also."

With a smile Mr. Baer added: "The only people who think they are too old to learn are those who really are too young."

The German Bull.

Albert Bigelow Paine, the biographer of Mark Twain, was talking to a group of old newspaper cronies in New York.

"Mark Twain loved the Germans," he said. "He especially loved the ponderous German bull, which he considered far superior to the bull of Ireland."

"He used to quote with approbation this bull from a relictstag oration: 'To squeeze the juice out of a lemon and then give it a kick—no, it is too much.'"

HONESDALE BOROUGH ORDINANCE.

Whereas, the town council of the Borough of Honesdale, by an ordinance, duly enacted, upon the 9th day of January, 1909, granted to the Lackawaxen Valley Railroad Co. certain privileges and franchises:

And Whereas, Sec. Nine of the said Ordinance, provides, inter alia, "That the said Lackawaxen Valley Railroad Co., shall begin to exercise of the franchises and privileges granted within six months from the passage of this Ordinance, and shall have its railway in operation within eighteen months after the passage of this ordinance."

And Whereas, The said Lackawaxen Valley Railroad Co. has wholly failed "to begin the exercise of the franchises and privileges hereby granted" or "to have its railway in operation within eighteen months after the passage of this ordinance"; but has allowed four years to pass without any effort whatever to comply with the said ordinance.

And Whereas, The rails laid in and upon Main and Park Sts. by its predecessor in many places were, and are above the surface of the said streets, by which they became and continue to be a nuisance, and required the Town Council to expend large sums of money to cover said rails and make the said streets safe for the passage of vehicles, which expenditure the said Railway Company were in duty bound to repay, but their officers promised to do so, yet have neglected and still neglect to reimburse said expenditures.

And Whereas, Said projecting rails in certain instances have caused serious injuries to vehicles lawfully using the said streets by which great damage was done, suits for negligence against the said Borough threatened and large sums paid by the said Borough in settlement of said claims for damages, which the said Railroad Company by its said officers promised to repay, but have neglected and still neglect to do so.

And Whereas, The said Lackawaxen Valley Railroad Co. has, as is asserted, assigned and transferred their privileges and franchises therein granted to them unto the Wayne County Traction Co. which company has made no effort to comply with the terms mentioned in Sec. Nine aforesaid.

And Whereas, The Town Council can obtain no assurance that the said Lackawaxen Valley Railroad Co., or its successors will ever build said railway or have the said railway in operation; but on the contrary from all indications as well as from all information obtainable they are led to believe and are fully convinced that the said Railroad Company will never complete the said railway; therefore, Sec. First: Be it enacted and ordained by the said Town Council of the Borough of Honesdale, in Council assembled, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority of the same; that the said Ordinance of 9th January, 1909, is hereby repealed and wholly annulled, and all the privileges and franchises therein granted annulled and made of none effect.

The foregoing ordinance was on the Sixth day of February, 1913, duly ordained, and enacted by the required vote of the town council of the borough of Honesdale, in council assembled, and to go into effect from and after the publication thereof in accordance with law.

MARTIN CAUFIELD,

President.

JOHN ERK,

Secretary.

Approved 10th February, 1913.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make America a Baldheaded Nation if Not Checked.

M. Pasteur, the great French physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Pell, the druggist, guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease and stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fastidious hair.

A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere, and by Pell, the druggist. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Feb. 7-14.
