THE RUSTING OF IRON.

Surprising Results of an Experiment With Various Paints.

In some very interesting experiments by two German chemists, E. Liebreich and F. Spitzer, the cause of rust in cases which have seemed especially puzzling has been made very clear, as it was shown beyond question that the rust was caused by the paints themselves, says the Scientific American. They painted polished steel plates, and girls alike," said a banker at the Princein order to distinguish them, numbered them with oil paint. The result was that the rusting took place just under the painted numbers-that is, where the "protective" coating was the thick-

They went further in the matter and examined fron business signs and the like. As a rule these were made of sheet iron, first painted with a ground color, mostly white; then the lettering was added, usually in black. Removing the coating, it was shown that the rust was most pronounced under the lettering-in fact, in most cases was to be found only there.

This set the investigators to think ing, and they carried out their experiments with several kinds of paint, as follows: White lead, zinc white (purest zinc oxide), red lead, iron oxide, white lend and lampblack, zinc white and lampblack.

Iron plates were brightly polished and four plates coated with the above paints in different thicknesses of each. one plate getting but one coat, a sec ond two, a third three and a fourth four, time for drying being accorded. Then all the plates were subjected for a whole day to the action of steam from water boiling in an open vesselthat is, under no pressure above that of the atmosphere,

The paint was then dissolved off to show the condition of the plates.

The result was surprising. Under all the single coatings the iron was not at all rusty; under the double coat, partly attacked; under the triple coat, more strongly, and under the four coats, thoroughly rusted!

Apparently one coat, at least of the above named paints, is better than more. The explanation of this remarkable result would seem to be that the varnish in the second coat dissolves and loosens the first one, making it porous, and that the oftener this process is repeated the more porous the paint becomes. It would also seem to Yale B. S. is my star truck driver." indicate that one thick coat, if allowed to harden, would be better than several thin ones, which has not been considered to be the case. There seem to be no experiments in this particular on record.

Sterilizing Water by Heat.

A small water sterllizing device for use in hospitals, schools, households, etc., which produces sterilization by the heating of the water under pressure to a temperature of only 207 degrees F. without causing boiling, has been put on the market. The device consists of a round tank, inclosing at its lower end a coil and topped by a small boiler, which can be heated by an alcohol or gas burner. The water to be sterilized enters at the bottom of the tank or cylinder and rises around the coll to the boiler, where it is heated to a temperature of 207 degrees F. It then rises over a tube at the top of the boiler and descends through a cooling coll to the bottom of the cylinder, from which it rises again through an outside tube to the discharge pipe. The apparatus which produ from 100 to 125 gallons of sterilized water per hour. requires but a very small amount of fuel for operation.

Limestone Production. More limestone is produced in the United States than any other kind of stone, not excepting granite, and its value is also greater. The value of the limestone output in 1911, according to the United States geological survey, was $33,897,362, a decrease of $706,316 from the figures 3112.20 for 1910. The decrease in value was chiefly in limestone used for fluxing. These figures do not include the value of most of the stone that is burned into 10.46 lime nor a large quantity of limestone used in the manufacture of portland cement.

.89 The principal states that produced limestone in 1911 were, in rank of value, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, New York and Missouri, each having an output of more than $2,000. 000.

Artificial Sponges of Paper.

When paper pulp is treated with zinc chloride there results a viscous mass. Sodium chloride (or ordinary table sait) is added to this, the mass is then thoroughly rinsed with alcohol and is finally submitted to the action of a press whose platform bristles with a number of fine metallic points or projections. These penetrate the mass, forming tubes like those in an ordinary marine sponge known as "canalicules."

The block thus obtained is of a spongy consistency and is both insoluble and unalterable in water. It is smooth and pleasant to the touch and is not susceptible of putrefaction. It is a very ingenious employment of the cellulose to which we owe so much Wyoming's Highest Mountain.

Wyoming has a mountain nearly 14,-800 feet in height. It is called Gannett peak and is located in Fremont county, in the western part of the state. Its height above sea level, according to the United States geological survey, is 13,785 feet. The lowest point in the state is on Belle Fourche river, 3,100 feet above sea level. Wyoming, which has an average elevation estimated at 6,700 feet, is the second highest state in the union, being exceeded only by Colorado.

Mr. Longworth's Explanation,

Representative Nicholas Longworth, one of the famous lame ducks of the house, explained his defeat to Uncle Joe Cannon and Billy Rodenberg of Illinois, as follows:

"At first." said Mr. Longworth, "I could not understand, but after circulating among the people I find that my constituents are just a little sore at my constant absence from the district. They like my company, and for the last few years I have had to attend one darned extra session after another until they tired of it. I was not defeated because of any desire not to have me in congress, but because of the fact that my folks want me at home."-New York World.

EMOLUMENTS THAT COME TO GENIUS

An Author's Definition of What Constitutes Fame.

Upton Sinclair was talking about the profit that publishers make from au-

"The merchant," he said, "pays his salesmen 10 or 15 per cent commission. while the publisher, who is the author's salesman, pays the author 10 or 15 per cent, keeping the balance for himself. This seems rather queer. "It reminds me of a noted author's definition of fame. "As this author sat in his humble cottage eating a frugal dinner of bread and water an admirer asked: "'How would you define fame, dear master?

"'Fame,' the author replied, thoughtfully regarding a patch on his trousers knee-'fame is what endears you to the publishers after you're dead and all your copyrights have run out."

Crocodile Tears. Senator Bryan was talking in Jacksonville about the tariff clause. "The advocates of this clause." he said, "pretend to pity the workingman.

The workingman must suffer if the clause fails, they declare. They won't suffer themselves. They, alas, will have to pass the suffering on to the toiler. "It's like the young lady to whom a friend said:

"'Why are you so sad today, Marie?' "'Our servant is ill,' Marie replied. and tears, as she spoke, welled up into her clear eyes-'our servant is ill, and poor, dear mamma, alas, has had to do the wash!" "

How Failure Talks. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., discussing success with that homely wisdom which is his heritage from his father.

said to a New York reporter: "The failure reads a wrong meaning. a meaning in accord with his nature into the most helpful precepts. "Are you laying anything by for a rainy day?' was the question that was put to a man on the road to failure.

"The man looked up from his newspaper, yawned and answered: "'Yes, indeed. Every fine day I post-bone a lot of work.'" PPLICATION FOR LICENSES FOR THE YEAR 1913:
