A Chatty Lefter From the Hustling Town Near the Wallen-Paupack Falls—An Interesting Fact About the Brilliant Cut Glass Company—What a Little Cyclone Did to the Coal Pockets, and a Bunch of Other Items of More or Less Interest.

The ice is gone from streams and ly the time when Hawley had no fire lakes,

In dear old Wayne! We're watching out for greens and snakes,

In dear old Wayne! In old "Mad Anthony's" county, So rich with bloom and bounty. We're boiling sap from maple trees, And testing seed of yellow corn, And digging bait, and planting peas

Each breezy, sunny, Springtime morn. Right here in Old Wayne County.

HE passing of the Brilliant Cut Glass company from the hands of the original stockholders into the pos-session of Mr. Lozier, who for the past eight years has conducted a similar shop in Aldenville, this county, is worthy of more than pas-sing notice, because it marks a local historical fact worthy of being

The Brilliant Cut Glass Company was formed by an association of zealous people who belong to a re-ligious organization known as Sev-enth Day Adventists, and they are association of a lot of good, earnest people, too. They believe that the seventh day, or Saturday, not Sunday, or the first day, is the Sabbath, and they observe that day as their rest day. They also believe that Christ is to come back to this earth again. Ob-serving a different day for the Sabbath than that observed by the great majority of Christians, they united in starting a factory where they could "worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences." And thus sprang into existence the Brilliant Cut Glass Company.

The point of this article and of the enterprise itself is that the Brilliant Cut Glass establishment was noughs. the first business that was ever begun in Old Wayne county on ligious as well as secular grounds. At any rate, it is the first enterprise along those lines the writer hereof and machinery from Hawley to was ripped up and rolled over just Prompton. Of course everybody as if it didn't cost anything, and a would have welcomed Mr. Lozier and part of it was dropped right down would have welcomed Mr. Lozier and his shop had he seen fit to remain in town; but there is nothing small like a boy will drop his wad of gum about Hawley, and the best of wishes out of the back kitchen window among the roots of the lilac bushes among the roots of the lilac bushes radish sprouts. Mr. will follow the plant, which has been re-christened "The Penn Cut Glass Co., to Prompton, where good people have united in offering splendid inducements for its location in that beautiful little town.

The Firemen's Annual Ball A Few Words About It.

On Monday evening of this week the firemen of Hawley held their an-nual ball, and one who was in attendance said the affair was all right, but that it was not patronized cording to the merits of the fire or-ganization, indeed that the patronage was not up to former years. The same authority ventured the opinion that the fire company is so good and so efficient that the citizens of Hawley have gone to sleep, and are dreaming dreams of absolute security so far as danger from fire is concerned. Therefore, feeling no need of fire protection they are withholdof fire protection they are withnouting patronage and presence from the firemen's once-a-year call for support. The same authority further said that it requires a strong blast
to keep Hawley enthusiasm aglow.
The writer begs the privilege of informing his informant that all towns are very much alike along these lines, and it would be as hard to find a town that was always awake to its duty as it would be to find a genuine Spotless Town other than that the smart advertiser once on a time sung about in catchy rhyme

The writer recollects very distinct-

******* protection whatever. There were no fire hydrants, and there wasn't a foot of fire hose in the entire bor—Pshaw! Hawley wasn't even a borough in those days. It was just a place in Palmyra township where the dweiling houses and stores were a little closer together, that was all. There was a big celebration on July There was a big celebration on July 4, 1875, and the business places turned out in procession. The late George C. Courtright represented the Hawley Fire Department with a bucket of water, a piece of garden hose and a hand pamp. Everybody laughed at the "contraption" as George, with smiles on his face, sent tiny streams of Middle Creek water sparkling skyward to fall on the heads of the on lookers, who said, "Oh! Oh! Look out, there!" and then laughed some more. The following year, 1876, the Big Centennial year, a fire broke out in a little dwelling a short distance east of the dwelling a short distance east of the old Ewen House one warm day in June, and it was extinguished in short order by the heroic work of a bucket brigade. "Ned Buntline," Wayne county's famous story writer, and his wife were spending a day or two with the writer, and they insist-ed the excitement was raised for their special benefit. Poor old Ned! Just ten years later he passed over into the Great Mystery!

A Miniature Cyclone Does Damage in Hawley.

On Tuesday, shortly after the noon along those lines the writer hereof knows about.

The Brilliant met with indifferent success, and when Mr. Lozier made success, and when Mr. Lozier made overtures to take it over, the stock-holders, like Dickens's famous character of "Barkis," were "willin," and hence the change.

Since the above was written we have been informed that Mr. Lozier has decided to remove the "frames" tracks. The south end of that roof that roof the contraction of the cont and horse radish sprouts. Mr. Hughes was unloading a car of customer coal at the pockets, and he is quite sure that he heard something doing; but his presence did not have any effect that he could preceive on the little twister. In fact, it had the little twister. In fact, it had come and gone before he had opportunity to even say "Jack Robinson!" He isn't quite sure that it would have done any good if he had actually uttered those magic words. Constable Ed Richardson, the officer who makes folks around town behave the mealing and sit right up straight. themselves and sit right up straight, was home at dinner. When one travels over the E. & W. V. railroad he finds that from Gravity station to Hawley he is within sight of the Middle Creek all of the way. There is nothing remarkwonderful about that, for the Middle Creek is the standard grade; but one is impressed with the fact that the brawling, chattering, scolding stream isn't what it used to be not so very many years ago. There was a time when the waters of that stream turned many wheels and furnished power for a number of mills. Beginning at Varden we find a dam, and there were located the Shaffer mills. There Mr. C. C. Shaf-fer sawed lumber and manufactured it into building materials. A few miles down the stream was another dam and another mill that was conducted by L. A. Robertson and Wm. Gale. Just below that was another saw mill that the Swingle Brothers, James Hazleton and the father of the writer of this at various times It is now definitely known that Mc-Donnough Bros. are going to build a new livery stable on their newly ac-quired lots on Spring street right out at the south end of Main street. The building will be constructed of a time a turning factory was operat-stone and cement, and will be a cred-ed at this point. This was finally it to both Hawley and the McDon-abandoned and the Pa. C. Co. turned it into an up-and-down saw mill. Two miles below this was the Farn-ham dam, where another saw mill was operated by the late Frederick Farnham. All of these dams are now gone with the exception of the one at Varden where Mr. C. C. Shaffer still operates his factory that turns out building materials. The waters out building materials. The waters are flowing right along as of yore but all they do now is to sing their sad song of

"The mills will never grind again," as they go ever onward, sparkling in the sunshine, bound for Wangum falls and their final journey's end in the big, foaming ocean.
