INTERNAL STRIFE BESETS PORTUGAL

Different Factions Rive the Nation.

MANY ATROCITIES ENACTED

Carbonarios Prey on Royalists—Prisoners Kept in Loathsome Cells. Youths Sentenced Unjustly to Years of Penal Servitude—Government Powerless Against Its Enemies.

Not since the declaration of the republic have affairs in Portugal been in such a desperate condition as they are at present, politically, financially and socially, says a correspondent in Lisbon. There is virtually no political leader in power who has the future good of the country at heart. All seem bent on advancing their positions or filling their pockets in the shortest possible time, believing that the present state of affairs cannot continue and that they must make hay while the sun shines for them. These are the general principles on which those in power are united. They differ as to the quickest and most effective way of carrying these principles out.

The most dangerous thorn in the side of the nation are the Carbonarios, whose leader is Senhor Luz Almeida, a man who stops at nothing to show his animosity against the royalist families, although there is no danger to be expected from them. It is to the influence of the Carbonarios that the prisoners taken at various times since the revolution of two and a half years ago are slowly brought to trial and are in the meantime kept in filthy cells in the criminal prisons.

Such was the case of a daughter of the Count of Cascaes, a member of the ancient family of Gama, the tale of whose sufferings has recently been published in the European and American press. Her only crime was that in distributing the funds and food she received by popular subscription she ignored criminals and gave only to political prisoners. This in the opinion of the Carbonarios constituted a "manifestation of political solidarity."

Government Helpless. How helpless the government is before the Carbonarios is shown by the fate of the general amnesty bill introduced a few weeks ago, which had to be withdrawn because the "agents provocateurs" of this party through their press and even by public posters declared with circumstantial evidence that a royalist rebellion was at hand. Some arrests were made, but the prisoners turned out to be some peasants who had started an agitation to have their churches kept open in defiance of the government's order. Senhor Luz Almeida openly acknowledged the ruse to which his agents had resorted and said that he intended it as a warning, prompted by "the wave of false generosity which had invaded the spirit of sincere republicans."

A few months ago, when the antagonism against the royalists seemed to have died out, an attempt was made to hasten their trials, with the result that the juries, through lack of evidence, began to acquit about three out of five. Thereupon a panic seized the Carbonarios. They organized mobs at Oporto and Lisbon, who attacked the juries in the streets, the lawyers for the defense and the prisoners as they left the court. Since then military tribunals have tried the cases, and there have been very few acquittals indeed.

A Terrible Penalty. There were five young royalists who had been acquitted by a civil court re-arrested on charges identical to those formerly brought against them. All were found guilty by a military tribunal and sentenced to six years' confinement in the penitentiaria, or criminal prison, to be followed by deportation for ten years to a penal settlement in Africa. In other words, these innocent youths were dressed in monastic garb, had their heads shaved, were placed in solitary cells and obliged to wear a thick hood over head and face, with slits for eyes and mouth.

This Carbonarios society, which since the revolution has become a menacing political party, but without any political propaganda whatever, as the instigator and creator of the revolution has had no excuse for existence since the declaration of the republic, but the offices it naturally took under the provisional government its members have been loath to surrender. It has therefore felt the necessity to justify its position by organizing throughout the country a system of spying and disquiet. Where there were no conspiracies, conspiracies were invented, the possession of a title or wealth—especially the latter—or the fact of having rendered service to the state or church under the monarchy being sufficient to cause arrest, followed by atrocities only equaled by the reign of terror.

EQUIPS SHIP FOR GAMBLING.

Ostend Proprietor Avoids Law by Chartering Big Yacht. Marquet, the proprietor of the famous casino at Ostend, having been barred by recent legislation from allowing gambling in his establishment, has chartered a large steam yacht to ply between Ostend and other resorts. There is a luxurious saloon aboard for gambling, but this will only be allowed outside the three mile limit.

HOKARA FOR ECZEMA. Quick Relief Often Follows First Treatment—Costs Nothing If It Fails.

A strong statement, isn't it? But we mean every word of it. Hokara is being used for treating the most complicated and chronic cases of eczema, salt rheum, sores, ulcers, etc. and it quickly banishes pimples, blackheads, or any other of the minor skin troubles, leaving the skin in its normal health and color.

Do not confuse Hokara with any of the ordinary grease ointments, as it contains no grease, mercury or lead, and is entirely different from anything else on the market.

Although it has wonderful healing and curative properties, the price is only 25c for a liberal jar—enough to give it a thorough trial in even the worst cases. Larger sizes 50c and $1.00.

Your money returned if Hokara fails to benefit. Sold on guarantee and recommended by

HOW TO WASH LINEN SUITS.

An Expert Laundress Describes the Best Method.

"For washing linen suits," said an expert laundress, "use only the best white soap and never rub the soap on the cloth unless there is a lot of hard dirt to be taken out. In the majority of cases the suits soak for an hour or so in soapy water, putting them in when the water is quite hot. By the time it is cool enough to permit washing freely the soiled parts are sufficiently soft to admit of cleaning without very much scrubbing. Rinse in several waters, always until the last water is perfectly clear, then pass the garment through the stiffening water, after which it is pressed as dry as possible in the cotton sheet.

"Some stiffening is necessary to give the linen the appearance of freshness which it has when it comes to you from the tailor. On the other hand, the greatest care should be taken not to have too much stiffening. That ruins the appearance of what would otherwise be a perfectly washed suit. You want just enough to give the linen body and yet not take away from its suppleness.

"In washing colored linens, excepting tans and browns, color all the waters and try always to avoid putting soap on colored linen, and also do not use water hotter than blood heat, allowing the linen to soak only a few minutes before washing it out and putting it in a second water of the same temperature and colored. Three waters are generally enough for a colored linen suit. Where the suit is not much soiled two will be enough. The stiffening water must be colored just as was that in which the washing and rinsing was done.

"After wringing in the cotton sheet care must be taken in hanging both coats and skirts for the drying process. Fresh air for colored linen and sun for the white—this is the ideal drying process. House drying never gives the satisfaction that a good laundress wants for her work. Steam drying should be a last resort. It injures the texture of the goods and leaves the colors less brilliant.

"The figures on which suits get their final shaping are the kind used by good dressmakers and tailors. I have all sizes and covered so that the suits get as nearly as possible the shape of their owners. I keep the figures arrayed in fresh petticoats and shirt waists, and when the freshly washed suits are on them I'm not ashamed for any one to walk into my shaping rooms. Each suit is taken from the figure and placed in its box for shipment. Great care is taken to see that every part of it is perfectly dry."

WATCH ON SHOE, NEW FAD.

London Dealer Inaugurates Odd Fashion For Women.

A new caprice of fashion shown in a smart shop in Oxford street, London, is a watch worn on the shoe. A window displays a gray suede pump with a tiny jeweled watch worn as a buckle and fastened with a tiny silver chain.

The proprietor says that several society women patrons have given orders. He asserts his belief that it will be as popular a fad as the wrist watch.
